A. I. R. Publications — A Tribute from the Law Quarterly Review

"One cannot but marvel at the industry and wide scope of the activities of the authors. Each month, in All India Reporter, they give us an up-to-date selection of the rulings of all the superior Courts in India. They issue monthly and annual digests. From time to time they publish valuable encyclopedic commentaries on the more important statutes. It is unlikely that in any other country in the world is case-law collected and pigeon-holed in a way which makes it more easily available. No doubt the authors have a large number of assistants, but the burden of planning and supervising their work must occupy so much of their time that one suspects that, like Him that keepeth Israel, they neither slumber nor sleep. They are always willing to experiment." — (1958) 74 Law Quarterly Review. — Pages 316-17.

"The organisation required to produce such books exists at present only in India, and there is no prospect that anywhere but in Nagpur, will a small village of devoted workers be dedicated to the production of the reports, manuals and editions of standard works of reference that have given All India Reporter its unique position. Mulla and "A. I. R." are the great names in the Law Books for India; they are as different as chalk from cheese; and recent works appearing in their series confirm the impression that they will go on for ever"—(1964) 80 Law Quarterly Review.—Page 448.

——S. 37—Sale by process of any Civil Court — Civil Court decree—Transferred to collector for execution under S. 68, Civil P. C. — Sale of tenancy holding by collector cannot be treated as sale under process of civil Court within S. 37 and as such cannot be challenged — (Civil P. C. (1908)), Ss. 68 to 71 (prior to its repeal by Act 66 of 1956)). 1960 Raj L W 458 : ILR (1960) 10 Raj 497.

——S. 42—Rajasthan Tenancy (Second Amendment) Act (28 of 1956), S. 4—Validity—S. 4 violates Art. 19 (1) (b) and is not saved by Art. 19 (1) (f)—Section not validated by S. 3 of Rajasthan Tenancy (Amendment) Act (12 of 1964). See Constitution of India, Art. 19 (1) (f). AIR 1965 Raj 54 (DB).

——S. 42 — Agreement of sale of Khatedari right is enforceable — Such agreement is not illegal under S. 42 of Rajasthan Tenancy Act — Plaintiff's failure to bring on record vendor's assignee pendente lite does not disentitle him to the relief of specific performance. See Specific Relief Act (1877), S. 12. 1964 Raj L W 423.

——S. 43—Wrongful dispossession of usufructuary mortgagee by third party—Suit by mortgagee for recovery of possession or for mesne profits, cannot be said to be adversely affected by anything contained in S. 43. 1966 Raj L W 21 : ILR (1965) 15 Raj 503.

——Ss. 43 and 43-A—Suit for redemption of mortgage of agricultural land—Suit is exclusively triable by revenue Courts. See Tenancy Laws—Rajasthan Revenue Courts (Procedure and Jurisdiction) Act (1 of 1951), S. 7. ILR (1960) 10 Raj 485.

——Ss. 43, 43-A and 207 (1) and Sch. 1, Serial No. 35 and Sch. 3, Serial No. 85—Suit or application for redemption of mortgage of agricultural land—Exclusive jurisdiction of revenue Court—(Civil P. C. (1908), S. 9).

Suits arising out of mortgages with respect to agricultural land are certainly matters provided for under Ss. 43 and 43-A of the Rajasthan Tenancy Act. Under Serials 53 and 85 together with Ss. 43 and 43-A and sub-s. (1) of S. 207, a suit or application for redemption of a mortgage with respect to agricultural land is a matter arising under the said Act and though it has not been specifically provided for elsewhere in the Schedule, it is still generally provided for within the meaning of Serial No. 35 of the Schedule and is therefore a matter with respect to which no Court other than a revenue Court can take cognizance as provided under sub-s. (2) of S. 207. 1958 Raj L W 300 : ILR (1958) 8 Raj 100.

SECTION 43-A

——S. 43-A — Suit for redemption of mortgage of agricultural land — Suit is exclusively triable by Revenue Court. See Tenancy Laws—Rajasthan Revenue Courts (Procedure and Jurisdiction) Act (1 of 1951), S. 7. ILR (1960) 10 Raj 485.

——S. 43-A—Suit or application for redemption of mortgage of agricultural land—Jurisdiction of revenue Court is exclusive. See Tenancy Laws — Rajasthan Tenancy Act (3 of 1955), S. 43. ILR (1958) 8 Raj 100.

——Ss. 88, 207 and Sch. II, Serial No. 5 — Exclusive jurisdiction of Revenue Court — Tests indicated — (Tenancy Laws—Rajasthan Revenue Courts (Procedure and Jurisdiction) Act (1 of 1951), S. 7, Sch. I, Group B, Serial No. 12). 1958 R L W 426 : ILR (1958) 8 Raj 659.

——S. 91—Pre-emption suits—S. 91 is not applicable —Suit triable only by Civil Courts—Question of conflict of jurisdiction—Courts should make reference to High Court. (1960) Raj L W 190: ILR (1960) 10 Raj 806.

——Ss. 91, 251—Suit for declaration that villagers have exclusive right to graze their cattle and for perpetual injunction restraining State Officials from selling grass—Suit is cognizable by Civil Court. (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 9). 1960 Raj L W 248 : ILR (1960) 10 Raj 622.

——S. 180 (1) (b)—Interpretation of—Tenant or sub-tenant holding from year to year before or after commencement of Act — Second part of Cl. (b) is applicable. 1961 Raj L W 479 : I L R (1961) 11 Raj 627.

SECTION 181

——S. 181—Provision under, not mandatory—Provision could be waived — Inference of waiver—Breach of provision does not call for interference under S. 9 of Land Revenue Act by the Board. 1962 Raj L W 178 : I L R (1961) 11 Raj 708.

——Ss. 183, 207 and Sch. 3, Item 23 — Usufructuary mortgage of agricultural land—Dispossession of mortgagee by alleged heir of mortgagor's husband — Suit for possession and mesne profits — Alternative prayer for mortgage amount — Suit held was exclusively within jurisdiction of Revenue Court — Suit filed in Civil Court—Dismissal of, not proper—Proper course was to return plaint for presentation to Revenue Court — Civil P. C. (1908), S. 9 and O. 7, R. 10—AIR 1946 All 486, Rel. on. 1963 Raj L W 310 : I L R (1963) 13 Raj 808.

——Ss. 183 and 207 — Agricultural holdings — Suit under S. 9, Specific Relief Act not expressly barred by Tenancy Act—Civil Court has jurisdiction to entertain suit — Plaint allegations determine whether suit lies within its jurisdiction. See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 9. 1961 Raj L W 636.

——Ss. 183, 207, 239 and Sch. 3, Serial No. 23—Scope —Suit for restoration of possession of agricultural land on basis that defendant was trespasser — Latter declared to be in possession under S. 145, Criminal P. C. — S. 183 applies and Revenue Court has exclusive jurisdiction—Jurisdiction of Civil Court is barred —Limitation Act (1908), S. 29(2) and Art. 47. I L R (1959) 9 Raj 614 : A I R 1960 Raj 196 (200) (Pt B) (Pr 14).

——S. 183 — Board of Revenue taking a particular view — Remedy by way of suit though open, not availed of — Order cannot be quashed. See Constitution of India, Art. 226. 1961 Raj L W 42: I L R (1960) 10 Raj 1638.

——Ss. 183, 207 and 239—Suit for ejectment of trespasser—Jurisdiction—Civil or Revenue Court—(Civil P. C. (1908), S. 9).

Where in a suit for possession of land the plaintiff averred that the land in dispute belonged to his ancestors and that the defendants have taken possession thereof illegally the case discloses a cause of action in respect of which a relief may be given by the revenue Court and as such it is exclusively triable by it under S 183 read with S. 207 of Rajasthan Tenancy Act. Even if at any time, the revenue Court feels that a question of proprietary right is involved, it may proceed under S. 239 of the Act. 1959 Raj L W 402.

——S. 183 and Sch. 3, Serial No. 23—Applicability—Unregistered mortgage deed for Rs. 230 — Mortgagee entering into possession—Mortgagor demanding possession and willing to pay mortgage money — Mortgagee declining—Mortgagors, held to be trespassers—Suit by mortgagor for possession—Suit must be held to be governed by item No. 23 — (T. P. Act (1882), Ss. 59 and 60) — (Registration Act (1908), S. 49) — (Civil P. C. (1908), O. 6, R. 2). I L R (1957) 7 Raj 432 : 1958 Raj L W 52 : AIR 1957 Raj 362 (364, 365) (Pt B) (Prs 5, 6).

——Ss. 186, 206, 225, 230—Retrospective operation—Act coming into force during pendency of revision under S. 10(2) of Rajasthan (Protection of Tenants) Ordinance — Revision cannot be treated as appeal — (Tenancy Laws — Rajasthan (Protection of Tenants) Ordinance (9 of 1949), S. 10(2) — (Interpretation of Statutes)—(Civil P. C. (1908), Preamble). I L R (1957) 7 Raj 194.

——S. 187 (1)—Suit for compensation for wrongful ejectment and possession of holding against tenant—Suit is exclusively triable by Revenue Court — Suit under S. 187 (1) (ii) for compensation alone is maintainable. See Tenancy Laws — Rajasthan Tenancy Act (1955), S. 188 (1). 1964 Raj L W 170 : I L R (1964) 14 Raj 733.

——Ss. 188 (1), 187 (1) (as amended by Raj. Act 22 of 1960)—Maintainability of suit—Suit for compensation for wrongful ejectment and possession of the holding against the tenant — Suit exclusively triable by Revenue Court — Even a suit under S. 187 (1) (ii) for compensation alone is also maintainable. 1958 Raj L W (Rev. Suppl.) 105, held no longer good law. 1964 Raj L W 170 : I L R (1964) 14 Raj 733.

——S. 188—Order by Revenue Secretary — Suit for perpetual injunction against enforcement of order—Civil Court has no jurisdiction—Revenue Court alone can try it. See Tenancy Laws — Rajasthan Tenancy Act (3 of 1955), S. 207(2). 1960 Raj L W 664 : I L R (1960) 10 Raj 1490.

——S. 228 — Appeal to revenue appellate authority under Rajasthan Tenancy Act — Appeal filed beyond limitation prescribed by S. 228 of Rajasthan Act — Ss. 29 (2) and 3, Limitation Act, apply — Appeal liable to be dismissed though limitation not set up as defence. See Limitation Act (1908), S. 29 (2). AIR 1965 Raj 38 (DB).

SECTION 229

——S. 229—Revenue Board—Powers of review are not unlimited—They are subject to conditions contained in C. P. C. as provided by S. 229. See Tenancy Laws —Rajasthan Land Reforms and Resumption of Jagirs Act (6 of 1952), S. 40. AIR 1960 Raj 72 (DB).

——S. 230—Second Appeal—Scope of jurisdiction of Rajasthan Revenue Board. See Tenancy Laws — Rajasthan Tenancy Act (1955), S. 224. ILR (1961) 11 Raj 708.

——S. 230 — Retrospective operation — Act coming into force during pendency of revision under S. 10(2) of Rajasthan (Protection of Tenants) Ordinance — Revision cannot be treated as appeal. See Tenancy Laws—Rajasthan Tenancy Act (3 of 1955), S. 186. ILR (1957) 7 Raj 194.

——S. 231—Question, not relating to jurisdiction of Revenue Court — Reference to High Court, not competent — Remedy of appeal from preliminary decree available — Revisional powers under S. 231 cannot be exercised. See Tenancy Laws—Rajasthan Tenancy Act (1955), S. 243. 1960 Raj L W 395 : ILR (1960) 10 Raj 941.

SECTION 239

—— S. 239 — Reference under, to civil Courts at the instance of the Collector—Civil Judge accepting the reference—District Judge in appeal, holding the reference entirely wrong in law remanding the case to Tahsildar for being further proceeded with — Order not proper, as the Tahsildar had before making the reference already decided the case — Quashing of all proceedings subsequent to filing of appeal before the Collector, including his order of remand — Collector directed to decide the appeal de novo on merits, treating it as still pending. 1963 Raj L W 186 : ILR (1963) 13 Raj 319.

——S. 239 — Reference to civil Court ordered by Collector in appeal in a mutation proceeding —Order of Collector not appealed from—Parties not estopped from raising objections to the reference, in civil Court — Evidence Act (1872), S. 115. 1963 Raj L W 186 : ILR (1963) 13 Raj 319.

——S. 239 — Reference to civil Court on question of proprietary right — Civil Court not bound to answer the same, if it is of opinion that reference did not arise or did not involve any such question. 1963 Raj L W 186 : ILR (1963) 13 Raj 319.

——S. 239 — Rajasthan Land Revenue Act (15 of 1956), Ss. 125 (3) and 21 (a)—Mutation proceedings — Nature of proceedings — No question of proprietary rights is involved in—Reference to civil Court under S. 239, not contemplated. 1963 Raj L W 186 : ILR (1963) 13 Raj 319.

——S. 239 — Rajasthan Revenue Courts (Procedure and Jurisdiction) Act (1 of 1951), S. 36 — Suit by Bapidar for possession of certain portion of land — Status of Bapidar cannot be equated with that of proprietor with respect to agricultural land — Question as to status of parties — Revenue Court has no jurisdiction to remit the case to civil Court—Neither S. 239 nor S. 36 attracted — Civil Court in appeal is entitled to re-examine question as to whether an issue as to proprietary right at all arose in the case—C. A. No. 9 of 1953, D/- 21-11-1954 (Raj) and 1956 R L W 420, Foll. — Civil P. C. (1908), S. 96. 1962 Raj L W 349 : ILR (1961) 11 Raj 746.

——S. 239 — Suit for restoration of possession of agricultural land on basis that defendant was trespasser even though declared to be in possession under S. 145, Criminal P. C. — Section 183 applies and Revenue Court has exclusive jurisdiction—Jurisdiction of civil Court is barred. See Tenancy Laws—Rajasthan Tenancy Act (3 of 1955), S. 183. AIR 1960 Raj 196.

——S. 243 (2) — Appeal to Commissioner—Commissioner holding that the suit under appeal was one triable by the Civil Court, ordering the return of the suit for being instituted in that Court — Held, order of the Commissioner was not proper in view of S. 243 (2), under which he was bound to refer the matter to the High Court for orders in such contingency. 1964 Raj L W 170 : ILR (1964) 14 Raj 733.

——S. 243 (3) — Suit for right of pre-emption of agricultural land filed in civil Court transferred to Revenue Court — Collector for sanction for reference to Revenue Court makes report to the Collector for sanction for reference to High Court under S. 243 (3) — Held Collector ought not to send report direct to District Judge for transferring case to civil Court. ILR (1960) 10 Raj 619.

——Ss. 243, 231—Reference of certain issues to Civil Court by Collector whether proper—Question does not relate to jurisdiction of revenue Court—Reference to High Court not competent — Remedy of appeal from preliminary decree available — Revisional powers under S. 231 cannot be exercised—Rajasthan Revenue Courts (Procedure and Jurisdiction) Act (1 of 1951), Ss. 7, 36. 1960 Raj L W 395 : ILR (1960) 10 Raj 941.

——Ss. 244 and 245 — Applicability — When in a suit instituted in a civil or Revenue Court, an appeal lies to civil Court — Meaning of.

The words "when in a suit instituted in a civil or revenue Court an appeal lies to a civil Court" in S. 244 of the Act only refer to that class of suits where no matter that it is filed in a civil or a revenue Court, an appeal "properly" lies to a civil Court. Such a case arises, where, for example, a question of proprietary right is raised in the suit within the meaning of S. 239 of the Act, for in such a case an appeal from the decree of a revenue Court lies to a civil Court and not to a revenue Court at all in view of sub-s. (4) of the section.

Neither S. 244 nor S. 245 of the Act applies to a case where a suit exclusively triable by a revenue Court is wrongly filed in a civil Court. 1963 Raj L W 284 : ILR (1963) 13 Raj 652.

——Ss. 244 and 245 — Scope of — Civil Court holding that it has jurisdiction to try suit — Revision against is not incompetent under S. 115, Civil P. C. in view of Ss. 244 and 245 of Rajasthan Tenancy Act. See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 115. AIR 1960 Raj 196.

——Ss. 244 and 245 — When applicable — Sections carry same interpretation as Ss. 41 and 42 of Raj. Act 1 of 1951. See Tenancy Laws — Rajasthan Revenue Courts (Procedure and Jurisdiction) Act (1 of 1951), S. 41. ILR (1960) 10 Raj 485.

——S. 245 — Applicability — The words "when in suit instituted in a civil or Revenue Court, an appeal lies to civil Court" refer to that class of suits where no matter that it is filed in a civil or a Revenue Court, an appeal "properly" lies to a civil Court. See Tenancy Laws — Rajasthan Tenancy Act (1955), S. 244. 1963 Raj L W 284 : ILR (1963) 13 Raj 652.

——S. 245—Appeal under — Case not involving any issue as to proprietary title—Course open to Appellate Court.

Once the civil appellate Court comes to the conclusion that in a suit by bapidar for possession, the revenue Court had no jurisdiction to make any reference to the civil Court, the case not involving any issue as to proprietary title, then that Court will cease to have jurisdiction to dispose of the case on the merits and all it should do is to quash the proceedings and send the case back to the competent revenue Court for disposing of the case according to law. 1962 Raj L W 349 : ILR (1961) 11 Raj 746.

——Ss. 245, 294 — Sections carry same interpretation as Ss. 41 and 42 of Raj. Act 1 of 1951. See Tenancy Laws — Rajasthan Revenue Courts (Procedure and Jurisdiction) Act (1 of 1951), S. 41. ILR (1960) 10 Raj 485.

——S. 246—Suit for profits of agricultural land or for share therein — Jurisdiction of Revenue Court is exclusive. See Tenancy Laws—Rajasthan Tenancy Act (1955), S. 206. 1963 Raj L W 284.

——S. 251 — Dispute relating to right of way — Civil Court — Jurisdiction to try suit.

The mere fact that the Tahsildar has jurisdiction to decide in a summary manner, a dispute relating to the right of way does not oust the jurisdiction of the civil Courts in respect of declaration of rights with regard to easement. 1960 Raj L W 376 : ILR (1960) 10 Raj 848.

——S. 251 — Suit for declaration that villagers have exclusive right to graze their cattle and for perpetual injunction restraining State Officials from selling grass—Suit is cognizable by Civil Court. See Tenancy Laws — Rajasthan Tenancy Act (3 of 1955), S. 91. 1960 Raj L W 248.

——S. 251 — Applicability — Determination of right to easement — Procedure — (Easements Act (1882), Ss. 15, 18, 22).

The words 'with due regard to the convenience of all parties concerned' occurring in S. 251 have been incorporated to give effect to the provision of law contained in S. 22 of the Easements Act. Section 251 does not purport to lay down any substantive law relating to easements different from that contained in the Easements Act. ILR (1959) 9 Raj 1195.

——S. 251 — Applicability — Application to establish right of irrigation from another's tank — Order by Collector — Revision by Board of Revenue. See Tenancy Laws — Rajasthan Revenue Courts (Procedure and Jurisdiction) Act (1 of 1951), Sch. 1, Group B, Item 27. ILR (1959) 9 Raj 1195.

——Ss. 251, 207, Sch. 3, Item 81 — Scope — (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 9).

The remedy referred to in S. 251 is a summary one and does not debar a suit in a competent civil Court. Sub-section (2) of S. 251 overrides S. 207 and if an unsuccessful party can ultimately go to a civil Court there is no reason why the plaintiffs should not also in the first instance go to a civil Court. 1957 Raj L W 188 : ILR (1957) 7 Raj 566.

——S. 29 (as amended by Act 35 of 1960)—Effect of amending Act — Status of khatedar tenants or jurisdiction of Revenue Courts—If affected.

Under the principal Act of 1959 the position of a landholder became that of a khatedar tenant. Section 5 of the Amending Act does not bring about any substantial change in the status of the landholder who will have the rights and liabilities of a khatedar tenant. The position relating to forum of suits by Zamindars and Biswedars affected by the principal Act continues to remain the same and does not warrant a transfer of cases pending before revenue Courts to civil Courts. 1960 Raj L W 231.

——S. 8 (1) and (2) (a)—Construction and scope.

A tenant who is deprived of possession of land under sub-section (1), whether it is the entire area of the land in his occupation or a part of the land may pre-empt a purchaser of the land from the barkhalidar, if the purchase or the lease is within ten years from the date on which the order allotting the land under sub-section (1) is passed. There is nothing in sub-section (2) which supports the view that the right which a tenant has for pre-empting a sale or lease by barkhalidar is restricted to those cases in which the tenant is allowed to remain in possession of land adjacent to the land to be pre-empted. (1959) 61 Bom L R 50 : ILR (1959) Bom 1207.

——S. 8 (1) (a)—'Khalsa land'—Meaning of.

The expression "Khalsa land" used in S. 8 (1) (a) clearly refers to land other than the Barkhali land which has vested in the State by virtue of section 5 of the Act. It refers to such land as was regarded as Khalsa land immediately prior to the commencement of the Act. (1958) 60 Bom L R 815 : ILR (1958) Bom 309.

I L R (1965) Guj 1039 : (1965) 6 Guj L R 978 : AIR 1966 Guj 200 (DB).

—S. 40 (2) — Jurisdiction under — When can be exercised.

It is clear from the language of the proviso at the foot of sub-section (2) that if an application has been made by an aggrieved party to the Revenue Tribunal the jurisdiction vested by sub-section (2) of S. 40 in the Government cannot be exercised by them. Once an application in revision is made from an order of the Deputy Collector to the Revenue Tribunal the proceedings before the Deputy Collector including the order passed by the Deputy Collector merge into the proceedings before the Revenue Tribunal and the Government has no power under sub-section (2) of S. 40 to call for and examine those proceedings. Thus upon a proper construction of the proviso to sub-s. (2) of S. 40 it is clear that in cases where a party has not applied in revision to the Revenue Tribunal and where his right to apply in revision has become time barred only in those cases the Government can exercise the power vested in them by sub-s. (2) of S. 40. (1958) 60 Bom L R 794 : I L R (1958) Bom 879.

—S. 7 (1) (b), (ii) — 'Reclamation bund or other structure on the land' — Interpretation — Irrigation embankment or bund —If included.

Considering the words "reclamation bund or other structure on the land" in S. 7 (1) (b) (vii) contextually, structurally and in their collocation they must be accorded a wide coverage. An irrigation embankment or an irrigation bund is within the ambit and scope of the language of clause (b) (vii) of S. 7 (1) of the Act. SECTION 2

—S. 2—Scope—(Saurashtra Land Reforms Act (25 of 1951), Ss. 3 and 65).

Act 30 of 1950 is subject to the same overriding provisions of S. 3 of the Land Reforms Act and to the extent to which it prohibits execution of an order of allotment of the Gharkhed land the right to which is saved by the proviso to S. 65 (1) it is inconsistent with the provisions of that Act and the proviso to S. 65 (1) must be given effect in spite of Act 30 of 1950. 6 Sau L R 272: AIR 1953 Sau 195 (197) (Pt C) (Pr 7) (DB).

—S. 29—Obtaining possession—Meaning of.

The applicants had taken possession of the lands from their tenants without obtaining the necessary orders of the Mamlatdar. They had given notices on 18-4-1950 mentioning that if the tenants did not part with the lands the applicants would enter upon the lands on 27-4-1950, the applicant actually entered upon the lands. They cultivated portions of their respective fields and also removed some dry cotton stalks.

Held, these acts undoubtedly amounted to obtaining possession. ('51) 4 Sau L R 234 (DB).

——S. 29— Though landlord is debarred from taking possession except under an order of the mamlatdar even when his tenant is willing to surrender possession to him, this discrimination between the rights of tenants and landlords does not amount to denying equality before the law and therefore S. 29 is not void under Art. 13 of the Constitution being repugnant to Art. 14 which guarantees equality before the law. See Constitution of India, Art. 14. ('51) 4 Sau L R 234 (DB).

——S. 35—As the ordinance contains provisions disabling landholders, whose estates are taken under management for contracting etc., their names should always be mentioned in the notification of assumption of management under S. 35 of the ordinance for the benefit of the public. AIR 1953 Sau 77 (78) (Pt A) (Pr 3) (DB).

——S. 35 — S. 35 is unconstitutional and void—Constitution of India, Arts. 13 (1), 19 (1) (f), (g) and 5, 31-A. Jayantilal Laxmi Shankar v. State of Saurashtra, AIR 1952 Sau 59 (62 to 64) (Pt A) (Prs 8, 10, 11, 12, 14) (SB).

——S. 37—Proceedings—Meaning of — (Words and Phrases—Proceedings).

Considering the scheme of the Gharkhed Ordinance and the concluding provisions barring the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts it is definite that the word 'proceedings' contained in S. 37 must necessarily include 'appeals'. Case law discussed. AIR Com. on Civil P. C. (1950) Edn. Relied on. AIR 1953 Sau 77 (80) (Pt B) (Pr 8) (DB).

——Ss. 37, 80 (2)—Notification under S. 35—Effect of, on pending appeal.

As the word 'proceedings' in S. 37 of the Gharkhed Ordinance, has to be construed to include an appeal there is such exclusion of the right of appeal by necessary intendment, if not by express words of the section which affects the appeals pending at the time of issuing the notification under S. 35, taking over the management of the estate concerned. Such an appeal has, therefore, either to be stayed or dismissed under S. 37.

Where the debt for the recovery of which a suit is filed is realisable from the estate taken under management under the Gharkhed Ordinance, the mere fact that the debt is recoverable also from the person and the moveable property of the deceased debtor in the hands of his heirs and legal representatives is not sufficient to remove the bar imposed by S. 37 of the Ordinance in respect of continuing the proceeding pending in Civil Court. The words of the section are quite clear. Since the word 'proceedings' in S. 37 includes 'appeals', the operation of S. 80 (2) is saved by the express provision contained in S. 37 including appeals and all proceedings pending in Courts have to be stayed or dismissed. AIR 1953 Sau 77 (79, 80) (Pt C) (Prs 5, 8) (DB).

——S. 2 (15)—Definition of girasdar if ultra vires as offending Art. 14 of Constitution — (Constitution of India, Art. 14).

It is not true that S. 2 (15) vests in the Government unfettered power to make arbitrary discrimination, nor again it is true to say that it results in making arbitrary discrimination, and for that reason infringes Art. 14 of the Constitution. The definition of Girasdar in S. 2 (15) is not therefore ultra vires. 8 Sau L R 70 : A I R 1955 Sau 80 (85) (Pt G) (Pr 12) (DB).

——S. 5, Proviso—'Girasdar'—Meaning.

A Girasdar as used in S. 5 proviso must mean an individual owning a village or more villages and not members of a family divided from each other in food, estate and worship though the properties held by them are jointly held and not divided by metes and bounds on or before February 1, 1951 as mentioned in S. 23. 59 Bom L R 287 : ILR (1957) Bom 459 : A I R 1957 Bom 182 (185) (Pt D) (Pr 15) (DB).

——Ss. 12, 13 and 46 (e)—Applicability—'Terminated under S. 12 in S. 46 (e)—Meaning'.

The institution of a proceeding is provided for by S. 13 and not by S. 12 which merely prescribes the conditions on which the tenancy may be terminated. The words "terminated under S. 12" in S. 46 (e) simply mean that it may be terminated on the grounds stated in S. 12 and not that the termination is to place under the said section. The proceeding is a composite proceeding and it cannot be said that two proceedings are contemplated, one under S. 12 and the other under S. 13. 9 Sau L R 126 : A I R 1956 Sau 44 (45) (Pt A) (Pr 2) (DB).

Where a notice under the Saurashtra Ordinance (22 of 1948) to hand over possession of certain land on 1st April 1949 was given to a tenant who had taken it on lease for a fixed period and the notice could not have the effect of terminating the tenancy as the Saurashtra Temporary Postponement of Eviction Ordinance (28 of 1949) had come into force, the tenant continues to be in lawful possession of the land even for the purpose of the Saurashtra Gharkhed Tenancy Settlement and Agricultural Lands Ordinance (41 of 1949) and the proceedings to recover land from the tenant are, therefore, governed by the provisions of the latter Ordinance and not by the Mamlatdars' Courts Ordinance 1948. Occupancy holdings are not inalienable, but are alienable under limited and specified circumstances, namely, for reasonable cause, as defined in note (1) to Clause (b) of R. 22. If such reasonable cause exists, the other deficiencies of validating circumstances, such as consent, signature of Gountia or certificate by the Revenue Department as to its fitness, can be removed on the mere asking for it. On the whole, till the transaction is set aside for absence of such reasonable cause in a suit at the instance of either the Gountia or the successor of an occupancy tenant or till so declared by the Revenue Department in a proceeding specifically drawn up for the purposes and carried on in the presence of the transferor, the transferee and the person entitled to avoid a transfer, the transaction binds the whole world including the parties or privies to it. This right of avoidance is exercisable by a suit within the period of limitation of two years, even though the person entitled to sue, be a minor at the time fixed for instituting the suit. 17 Cut L T 27 : A I R 1951 Orissa 101 (103) (Pt A) (Prs 6, 7) (DB).

——S. 3 — Repeal — (Constitution of India, Sch. V, Cl. 5 (2)).

The provisions of S. 3 of Regulation III of 1872 are impliedly repealed as a result of the enactment of the fifth Schedule of the Constitution. The jurisdiction of the Bihar Legislature to legislate for the scheduled area of Sonthal Parganas cannot therefore be doubted. The Bihar Land Reforms Act is validly applicable to all portions of the Sonthal Parganas District, which have been declared to be Scheduled Area. 1953 B L J R 77 : I L R 32 Pat 119 : A I R 1954 Pat 159 (159, 160) (Pt A) (Prs 3, 4) (DB).

——S. 9—Scope—S. 9 contained merely the power of the State Court to order that a settlement be made and did not contain any power to transfer any area to municipality or to modify any record of rights prepared during the settlement. See Sonthal Parganas Settlement Regulation (3 of 1872), S. 25. AIR 1962 Pat 168 (DB).

SECTION 24

——S. 24—Scope — The true effect of a record of rights under S. 24 of the Regulation is not to create rights where none existed but simply to afford conclusive proof, under S. 25 (1) of the Regulation, that such rights exist, by providing that the record, recording such rights, shall be the conclusive proof of them. 1957 B L J R 461 : I L R 36 Pat 439.

SECTION 25

——Ss. 25, 27, 9 — Held, that S. 9 contained merely the power of the State Government to order that a settlement be made and did not contain any power to transfer any area to the municipality or to modify any record-of-rights prepared during the settlement. In the absence of any notification or any provision of law to show that the lands became transferable subsequent to their inclusion in Madhupur Municipality area, it must be held that they remained non-transferable. AIR 1962 Pat 168 (175) (Pt H) (Prs 14, 15) (DB).

——S. 25 —Record of rights — Conclusive — Nature and extent of—(Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 13, 35).

The true scope and effect of S. 25 is that the rights and customs incident to the land as recorded in the record-of-rights shall be conclusive and shall not be called in question until a fresh settlement takes place. While the record-of-rights must be regarded as conclusive to show the character of the land, it does not purport to determine the legal capacity in which the person for the time being in possession holds the land whether as a limited owner or as an absolute owner. It is purely a question of fact depending upon the circumstances of each case. I L R 36 Pat 715 : 1957 Pat L R 187 : 1957 B L J R 364 : AIR 1957 Pat 482 (484) (Pt B) (Pr 8) (DB).

——S. 25 (1) and (3)—Conflict between two records of rights.

Section 25 (1) has to be read with S. 25 (3) of the Regulation. The true import of S. 25 (3), is that if a revision of such Record of Rights, published under S. 24, and which has become final under S. 25 (1), is undertaken, as contemplated by, and in terms of S. 25 (3) then the previous record of rights automatically stands cancelled, if a contrary record appears in the revision record, and, the revision Survey Record of Rights will be taken to be correct in every respect, and thus it prevails over the earlier record of Rights and will be conclusive proof of the rights therein recorded.

Held, that on reading S. 25 (3), along with paras. 3 and 19 of Gantzer's Final Report the record of 1904 which represented the original settlement by Mr. Mopherson in 1904, must yield to the record of 1932 which was the Record of Rights of the revision settlement by Mr. Gantzer, and, which was based on the inter partes judgment of the Assistant Settlement Officer. 1955 B L J R 293, Disting. 1957 B L J R 461 : I L R 36 Pat 439.

——S. 25—Record of rights—Entries in — If conclusive proof as to the rights and customs recorded therein—(Evidence Act (1872), S. 35).

The combined effect of sub-ss. (1) and (3) of S. 25 is that after a period of six months from the date of the publication of the record of rights of any village under S. 24, such record shall be conclusive proof of the rights and customs therein recorded and that it shall not be reopened until fresh settlement is made without the previous sanction of the Governor. No fresh settlement has been made since after the Revision Survey and settlement made by Mr Gantzar, and therefore the record of rights published under S. 24 in that settlement, namely, the abstract khatian jamabandi must be regarded as conclusive on the question of the rights the plaintiffs have in the disputed lands. Hence the entry Lakiraj Jagirdar in serial No. 15 of the Abstract Khatian Jamabandi must be taken as conclusive. 1957 Pat L R 288.

——S. 25 — Settlement record — Conflict between previous and current record — Which prevails — (Evidence Act (1872), S. 35).

As a matter of law, in the event of conflict, the current record of rights must prevail upon the previous ones. On a proper construction of sub-ss. (1) and (3) of S. 25, the statutory conclusiveness attaching to the record-of rights shall continue until a fresh settlement is made. The legal consequence flowing from sub-s. (3) is that the last published records will be regarded as conclusive and the previous records will be deemed to have been superseded by it. 1957 Pat L R 288.

——Ss. 25 and 27—Scope — Holder of Raiyati land purchasing Lakhraj interest in village — In next settlement land recorded as bakasht Malil — Presumption — No merger of rights — Bar to alienate interest—Evidence Act (1872), S. 114.

The lands were originally held by S as raiyati in character. Later on he purchased the Lakhraj interest in the village. During the next settlement operations he desired that the lands should be bakshat lands but the lands though recorded as baksht did not cease to be raiyati lands, and the village community had the usual rights over them, On alienation of the land by his discendants a suit was brought for declaration of title and for possession after declaring the alienation illegal, and the question was whether the alienation offended against the provisions of S. 27.

Held (i) that S held a double character; he was the landlord in possession and he was also the raiyat of the land. So far as the raiyati interest was concerned, he could not sell it so far as the landlord's interest viz., the right to receive rent, was concerned, he could sell it.

(ii) that considering the intention or the benefit of S the raiyati interest and the landlords' interest did not merge.

(iii) that S. 27 contained an absolute bar against alienation and the mere fact that previously certain other alienations were made would not remove that bar. 1956 B L J R 587 : 1956 Pat L R 480.

——S. 27—Landlord and tenant—Tenant acquiring entire superior landlord's interest—Doctrine of merger —When operative—Applicability to case of raiyati holders in Santhal Parganas—Whether raiyati interest subsists after purchase is mixed question of law and fact—Civil P. C. (1908), Ss. 100 and 101.

While the union of the superior and subordinate interests will not automatically cause a merger, merger will be held to have taken place if the intention to merger is clear and not otherwise. In the absence of any express indication of intention, the Courts will proceed on the basis that the party had no intention to merge if it was to his interest not to merge and also if a duty lay on him to keep the interests separate. In deciding the intention of the party the Court will have regard also to his conduct. There are special features in the land tenure in Santhal Parganas which make it difficult for the law of merger to apply there.

An entry of 'Bakasht Malik' in the subsequent record of rights does not amount to a negation of the raiyati interest and is a neutral expression as regards the continuance or otherwise of raiyati interests. There is in effect no conflict between the earlier settlement entry and the subsequent entries and no question as to which should prevail arises.

The question whether the raiyati interest continued to subsist after the raiyati purchase of the proprietary interest is a mixed question of law and fact. And it is open to the High Court in second appeal to go behind the conclusions of the Courts below. Jyotish Thakur v. Tarakant Jha, 1963 B L J R 267 : (1963) Supp 1 S C R 13 : I L R 43 Pat 139 : AIR 1963 S C 605 (608 to 610) (Prs 11, 12, 16, 18 to 20, 22).

——S. 27 (3) — Scope and applicability — Jurisdiction of Civil Court to grant relief against invalid transfer -C. P. Code (1908), S. 9.

Sub-s. (3) of S 27 gives a Deputy Commissioner of the District the right to evict the transfer-e and either restore the transferred land to the raiyat or any of his heirs or to re-settle the land with another raiyat according to the village custom, if at any time it comes to his notice that a transfer in contravention of sub-s. (1) of S. 27 had taken place. The provisions of sub-s. (2) of S. 27 that no transfer in contravention of sub-s. (1) shall be in any way recognized as valid by any Court, make it obligatory for the Civil Court when a dispute arises as regards the title to lands to ignore transfers made in contravention of S. 27 (1).

For the proper exercise of that obligation it is necessary for the Court to decide whether in fact the transfer on the basis of which one of the parties to the litigation bases his claim was really made in contravention of S. 27 (1). If the Court is satisfied that there was such contravention the Court must necessarily proceed to dispose of the case on the basis that no title accrued to the transferee by such transfer. The objection that S. 27 (3) stands in the way of the plaintiff's getting relief in the civil Court cannot therefore succeed. Jyotish Thakur v. Tarakant Jha, 1963 B L J R 267 : (1963) Supp 1 S C R 13 : ILR 43 Pat 139 : AIR 1963 S C 605 (611) (Pt B) (Pr 24).

——S. 27 (3) — Scope — Jurisdiction of Civil Court to evict transferee — If ousted — (C. P. Code (1908), S. 9).

Sub-section (3) of S. 27 of the Regulation only vests a discretion in the Deputy Commissioner to evict the transferee. It is not at all obligatory upon him to evict all transferees. A statute which invests the Deputy Commissioner with limited power which may or may not in his discretion be exercised having regard to the circumstances of each case cannot take away the jurisdiction of the Civil Court under the general law. 1957 Pat L R 288.

——Rule 3, Form A and Sch. V, Para. 1 — Appointment of Pradhan—Deputy Commissioner must satisfy himself whether appointee was acceptable to jamabandi raiyats.

The appointment of a pradhan has to be made by the Deputy Commissioner in conformity with the opinion of the jamabandi raiyats.

Before appointing a Pradhan, therefore, the most important thing for him is to satisfy himself whether the man who was going to be appointed as a pradhan was acceptable to the jamabandi raiyats or not.

The lands of a village consisted of only of two Jamabandis. All the Jamabandi raiyats belonged to a family the members of which were appointed Pradhans in succession. The respondent who sought appointment as a pradhan was the son of the last deceased pradhan, while the petitioner was the son of the second Pradhan. All jamabandi raiyats gave their consent in favour of the petitioner. The Deputy Commissioner, however, appointed the respondent as the pradhan.

The use of the words "elect a village Headman" in R. 3, Form A gave a clear indication that the appointment of the headman was by way of election by the raiyats of the village. Inasmuch as the Deputy Commissioner never cared to take into consideration the views of the Jamabandi raiyats who were in favour of the petitioner and against the respondent, his order was bad in law. 1965 B L J R 674 : I L R 45 Pat 668.

—SOUTH CANARA CULTIVATING TENANTS PROTECTION ACT (Mad. Act 6 of 1954)

——S. 2 (c)—Land found appurtenant to building — Claim to benefit — Debt Laws — Madras Indebted Agriculturists Temporary Relief Act (5 of 1954), S. 2 (c).

The claims under both Acts 5 and 6 depend upon the question whether the debtor was cultivating 'land' within the meaning of that term as defined by those Acts. The crux of that question would in both cases depend upon whether the building in the land was appurtenant to the land or the land was appurtenant to the building. Therefore, where the land is found appurtenant to the building as regards Act 5 of 1954, the debtor cannot claim the benefit of Act 6 of 1954 either. 1957 Ker L T 1030.

——S. 3 (3) (a)—Deposit of 'Rent'—Rent payable in instalments — Single deposit after all instalments — Single deposit after all instalments have fallen due—Sufficiency.

Section 3 (3) (a) of the Act speaks of the deposit of 'rent' and does not speak of each instalment thereof. The clause contemplates again a single deposit and not a series of deposits. It would appear therefore that a single deposit alone is called for even when there are more than one instalment of rent due and such deposit should be after the date of the last instalment i.e., when all the instalments have accrued due. 1957 Ker L J 531 : 1957 Ker L T 548 : A I R 1957 Ker 143 (143) (Pr 2).

——Ss. 33 and 147 (1) (e)—"Incident of tenancy" — Dispute covered by S. 33, if relates to incident of tenancy.

Section 33 deals with the pre-emptive right of a landlord. That right can be exercised against a transferee. The disputes directly covered by S. 33 would not normally relate to any incident of the tenancy. It is however possible that in cases covered by S. 33 some question as to the incident of a tenancy may crop up incidentally. Even that need not necessarily convert the entire dispute into a matter which sub-cl. (e) of cl. (1) of S. 147 would cover. ILR (1950) 2 Assam 441 : AIR 1950 Assam 168 (169) (Pt A) (Pr 4) (DB).

If dispossession was on 6-9-1956, i e., sometime before coming into operation of the Madras Act 14 of 1956 in regard to areas to which Madras Act 14 of 1952 applied the tenant cannot claim benefit of S. 4 (5) of Act 25 of 1955. ——Pre. — Act is not ultra vires — (Constitution of India, Sch. 7, List 2, Entry 18).

Act is directly covered by Entry 18 in List 2 of the Constitution. The provisions of the Constitution should be construed not in a narrow or pedantic sense but as extending to all ancillary or subsidiary matters which could fairly and reasonably be said to be comprehended in it. Tenants continuing in possession after the termination of the lease are termed tenants at will and with reference to them the legislation falls within the terms of Entry 18 even strictly construed. Even as regards tenants who had vacated, the right to reinstatement will be ancillary or a subsidiary matter arising out of tenancy and would be within the terms of the Entry, liberally interpreted. In any event, that will be legislation relating to land. (1953) 2 ML J 325 : 66 Mad L W 714 : ILR (1953) Mad 1114 : AIR 1954 Mad 51 (62) (Pt D) (Pr 25) (DB).

——S. 2 (d) and (g)—Expressions 'cultivating tenant' or 'tenant'—(Words and Phrases—'Cultivating tenant' or 'tenant').

In order that a person should be a 'cultivating tenant' or a 'tenant', firstly he should not be the owner of land and secondly he should hold the land under a tenancy agreement express or implied. It is not absolutely necessary for the application of the section that the tenancy agreement express or implied should be directly with the owner of the land. In view of the definition of the word 'landowner' given in S. 2 (g), it may be that the tenancy agreement might be with some one who claims under the owner. A person who is in possession of land on 1st December 1951, without a tenancy agreement, express or implied, but is a trespasser does not come under the definition cultivating 'tenant' or 'tenant', Therefore, to say that tenancy agreement express or implied must be with the person who owns lands is not correct. 1954 Mad W N 68 : (1954) 1 M L J 277 : 67 Mad L W 88 : AIR 1954 Mad 805 (806) (Pr 4).

——S. 3 (b)—'Land held by a landowner'—Meaning of—Words and phrases—'Held'.

Though the enjoyment of certain property is one of the incidents or ingredients constituting some of the bundle of rights flowing from holding property, still if a person has merely the right of enjoyment it would not be correct to say that he holds property.

The phrase 'land held by a landowner' in S. 3 (b) has reference to land over which the land owner has ownership and not land which he holds in a fiduciary or other capacity, such as a trustee; or a guardian of an infant or committee of a lunatic. Case law reviewed. AIR 1955 NUC (Mad) 694.

——S. 6 (1) — Material date for determination of rights.

The material date for the determination of the rights of the tenant and the land owner under S. 6 (1) of the Act is the date on which the Tanjore Tenants and Pannaiyal Protection Act No. 2 of 1952 came into force, namely, 23rd August 1952, i. e., the same date on which the subsequent Act is deemed to have come into force. (1956) 69 Mad L W 143 : (1956) 1 M L J 373.

——S. 6 (1) and (3) (b) — Once tenant is restored to possession, subsequent event does not affect his right. (1956) 69 Mad L W 143 : (1956) 1 M L J 373.

——Ss. 6 and 12—No contravention of Art. 19 (1) (f) — Provisions can be upheld under Art. 19 (5) — (Constitution of India, Arts. 19 (1) (f) and 19 (5)).

In judging the reasonableness of Ss. 6 and 12 of the Act, it is necessary to bear in mind the state of emergency existing before the passing of the Act. (Growing tension between landowners, tenants and Pannaiyals in Tanjore, before the Act, traced).

If what would otherwise be an invasion of the rights of a citizen under Art. 19 (1) (g) is reasonable and in the interests of the public, then all the requirements of Art. 19 (5) are satisfied. It is not permissible to read into it a further restriction based on a scholastic interpretation of the meaning of the word 'restriction' that the legislation should be negative in character.

Ss. 6 and 12 are, having regard to their character as an emergency legislation of a temporary nature, not unreasonable and can be upheld under Art. 19 (5) of the Constitution and do not contravene Art. 19 (1) (f). Case law referred.

The legislation is intended to benefit generally the cultivating tenants and farm labourers. In an agricultural country like India, the tenants and farm labourers form an important section of the public and therefore, a legislation intended to benefit them as a class must be held to be for the benefit of the general public as required by Art. 19 (5). A public purpose does not cease to be such because it ultimately benefits individuals. (1953) 2 M L J 325 : 66 Mad L W 714 : ILR (1953) Mad 1114 : AIR 1954 Mad 51 (57, 58, 60) (Pt A) (Prs 14, 15, 20) (DB).

——S. 6 — There is no contravention of Art. 31 (2) of the Constitution—(Constitution of India, Art. 31(2) —Law conferring ownership on individuals).

Art. 31 (2) of the Constitution prohibits acquisition of title or taking of possession for a public purpose without payment of compensation. But the acquisition or taking of possession by whom, it does not mention. A reference to the relevant provisions of the Constitution clearly shows that it was only acquisition of title or taking of possession by the State, or Union that is dealt with in Art. 31 (2).

Any law which confers rights of ownership or possession on individuals, the State itself not acquiring it, is not within the operation of Art. 31 (2) and its validity must be determined only with reference to the terms of Art. 19 (1) (f) and Art. 19 (5).

Section 6 of the Act does not contravene Art. 31(2). (1953) 2 M L J 325 : 66 Mad L W 714 : ILR (1953) Mad 1114 : A I R 1954 Mad 51 (60, 61) (Pt B) (Prs 22, 23) (DB).

——Ss. 6 and 12—Are not arbitrary and discriminatory—(Constitution of India, Art. 14).

Held, after examining the provision of Ss. 6 and 12 that they are neither arbitrary nor discriminatory. (1953) 2 MLJ 325 : 66 Mad L W 714 : ILR (1953) Mad 1114 : AIR 1954 Mad 51 (62) (Pt C) (Pr 24) (DB).

——S. 7 — Constitution of India, Arts. 14, 19 (1) (f) and 5, 246; Sch. 7, List 2, Entry 18 — Extension of term of tenant of land beyond period fixed by contract — Is reasonable restriction on landlord's right to hold property —Tenancy Laws —Tanjore Tenants and Pannaiyal Protection Act (14 of 1952), Ss. 7 and 8 is valid—(Tenancy Laws—Madras Cultivating Tenants Protection Act (25 of 1955) (as amended by Act 14 of 1956)—Validity)—(Tenancy Laws—Madras Cultivating Tenants (Payment of Fair Rent) Act (24 of 1956)—Validity. See Constitution of India, Art. 14. AIR 1958 Mad 608 (FB).

——Ss. 7, 6, 13 — Applicability — Tenants inducted subsequent to 23-8-1952—Rights of.

The Act is applicable to and governs the rights as much of cultivating tenants in possession of their holdings on 23-8-1952 as of those who were inducted subsequently. There is no reason why, when the statute enacts terms in respect of persons, who are cultivating tenants between 1952-53 and 1957-58, persons who come in at an intermediate period of time should not have the benefit of the statutory terms subject, of course, to the termination of the statutory term after 1957.53. Tne primary purpose of the legislation was to put fetters upon the contractual rights of the landholder, which according to the framers of the enactment, were being misused. The opening words of S. 7, viz , "every cultivating tenant" afford statutory protection to every cultivating tenant and a tenant is not the less a cultivating tenant within those words, because he was not in possession of the land on 23-8.1952 The language employed is perfectly general and is by no means restricted to conferring rights upon cultivating tenants in possession on any particular date. (1957) 70 Mad L W 52 : (1957) 1 Mad L J 211.

C. (1908), S. 9. See Tenancy Laws — Tanjore Pannaiyal Protection Act (14 of 1952), S. 14 read with S. 3. 1962 Mad W N 334.

● ——S. 8 — Is valid. See Constitution of India, Art. 14, A I R 1958 Mad 608 (FB).

——S. 10—Proceedings under—Applicability of Ss. 3 (1) and 4 (1) of Madras Act 1 of 1955 — Do not apply to proceedings under S. 10 of Madras Act (14 of 1952) — But operation of S. 4 (1) could not be excluded from the "debt" constituted by the arrears of rent due by a tenant under Act (14 of 1952). See Debt Laws—Madras Indebted Agriculturists (Repayment of Debts) Act (1 of 1955), S. 3 (1). (1957) 2 Mad L J 108.

——S. 10 (2) (c)—Application for eviction on ground of non-payment of rent—Procedure.

There are two stages in the disposal of an application for eviction on the ground of non-payment of rent. The first stage is an inquiry into the objections raised on behalf of the tenant, followed by a decision by the revenue Court. If the decision is against the landowner, the application is dismissed straightway. But if the decision is in favour of the landowner, a notice is issued calling upon the tenant to tender the rent in arrear and costs. Then the next stage is after the expiry of thirty days from the date of the notice. If by that date, the tenant does not comply with the notice, that is, does not pay up the arrears of rent and costs, the revenue Court shall pass an order for his eviction. But before the issue of a notice, there should be a decision by a revenue Court of the exact amount of arrears due.

A notice issued before the determination of the question of arrears cannot be said to have been intended as a final order impliedly holding that the amount claimed by the landowner is lawfully due. The order of eviction passed on non-compliance of such a notice is in disregard of the provisions of S. 10 (2) (c) and therefore is liable to be quashed. A I R 1955 N U C (Mad) 4332 (DB).

——S. 10 (1) (f)—'Has been'—Meaning of—Conduct of tenant prior to Act — No ground for eviction—(Words and Phrases — Interpretation of Statutes)—(Civil P. C. (1908), Preamble — Retrospective operation).

Though the expression 'has been' in Cl. (f) of S. 10 (1) of the Madras Act may include past conduct also the proper construction of the clause read along with the other clauses and in the context would be to confine it only to conduct or behaviour of the tenant subsequent to the passing of the Act.

The mere fact that certain rights are conferred upon the tenants as from 1st December 1951 does not lead to the conclusion that the acts of those tenants subsequent to that date and prior to the passing of the Ordinance or the Act should afford grounds for eviction. That certainly is not the object of the Legislature and the terms of S. 10 read with S. 6 do not warrant such construction. It is only the acts done by the tenants subsequent to the Act that entitle the landlord to invoke the terms of S. 10. A I R 1955 N U C (Mad) 1570 (DB).

——Ss. 12, 13—Order by Conciliation Officer under S 12 (3) — Not appealable — Order not covered by provisions of S. 13 (2).

There is no right of appeal conferred against an order under S. 12. Section 12 is an express provision in regard to particular class of disputes between landlord and a pannaiyal, namely, that relating to his dismissal. That category of disputes between a landlord and pannaiyal is taken out of the ambit of the authority given to the Conciliation Officer under S. 13, by the expression 'save as otherwise expressly provided in the Act' occurring in it. And, therefore, S. 13 does not apply to cases covered by S. 12. (1962) 75 Mad L W 152 : I L R (1962) Mad 719 : (1962) 2 Mad L J 164.

——Ss. 12 (1) and 13 (1) — Power of Conciliation Officer to decide incidental questions — Appealable orders.

It is no doubt ture that S 12 (1) does not specifically enable a Conciliation Officer to decide the questions whether a particular person is a pannaiyal or not and whether a landlord is entitled to the exemption under the Act. Those questions could nevertheless be considered as incidental or collateral but only as incidental to the adjudication of the question of re-instatement of the dismissed pannaiyal under S. 12 (1) of the Act. If, however, the question of such relationship is a substantial point in dispute, the jurisdiction of the Conciliation Officer could be exercised only under S. 13 (1) of the Act and any order made under that sub-section will be appealable under S. 13 (2) of the Act. (1959) 2 Mad L J 418 : 72 Mad L W 721.

——S. 13 — Section 12 is an express provision in regard to particular class of disputes between landlord and a pannaiyal, namely, that relating to his dismissal. That category of disputes between a landlord and pannaiyal is taken out of the ambit of the authority given to the Conciliation Officer by the expression 'save as otherwise expressly provided in the Act' occurring in it. And therefore, S. 13 does not apply to cases covered by S. 12. (1962) 2 Mad L J 164 : I L R (1962) Mad 719.

——S. 13 (1) and (2) — Scope — Madras Cultivating Tenants Protection Amendment Act (14 of 1956), Ss. 10 and 11—Effect of on proceedings under earlier Act.

Since the provisions of S. 13 (2) of the Tanjore Act are not overriden by any contrary provision of the Cultivating Tenants Protection Act the provisions of Ss. 10 and 11 of the Amending Act of 1956 relating to transfer of proceedings cannot apply to cases under S. 13 (2) of the Tanjore Act as there is no provision in the Act of 1955 corresponding to S. 13 (2) of the Act of 1952. The appellate jurisdiction of the Revenue Court under S. 13 (2) of the Tanjore Act is not therefore in any way affected by the Madras Act (14 of 1956). Similarly a vested right of appeal under S. 13 (2) of the Tanjore Act to the Revenue Court from a decision of the Conciliation Officer, is a vested right which cannot be taken away by the mere fact that S. 11 (2) of the Madras Cultivating Tenants Protection (Amendment) Act (14 of 1956) superseded the powers of the Conciliation Officer under S. 13 (1) of the Tanjore Act. If, at the commencement of the Amending Act, any proceedings under S. 13 (1) of the Tanjore Act were pending, they would be disposed of by the Revenue Divisional Officer under the later Act. But where no such proceedings were pending but were disposed of before the new Act, the right of appeal under the original Act cannot be taken away, though the claim as to restoration to possession by a cultivating tenant under S. 13 (1) of the Tanjore Act is also covered by S. 4 of the Cultivating Tenants Protection Act. 71 Mad L W 272 : (1958) 1 Mad L J 317.

—— S. 13 (2) — Principles of natural justice—Violation of — In an appeal under S. 13 (2) the petitioner is given an ample opportunity, (which he avails himself of) to participate in the further enquiry held by conciliation officer — Order that further evidence be taken — It is not violation of principles of natural justice. See Constitution of India. Art. 226. A I R 1955 N U C (Mad) 3197.

——S. 13 (2)—Petitioner submitting to jurisdiction of revenue Court—Bar of grant of relief under Art. 226 of Constitution. See Constitution of India, Art. 226. A I R 1955 N U C (Mad) 3197.

——S. 13 (2) — Appeal under S. 13 (2) — Power of Revenue Court to call for further evidence — (Civil P. C. (1908), O. 41, R. 27).

There is nothing in the Act or in the rules framed thereunder to indicate that when the revenue Court calls for further evidence and had that evidence recorded by the conciliation officer, the revenue Court acts without jurisdiction.

Even under R. 5 (b), the power given to civil Courts for the examination of parties and witnesses would be sufficient to clothe the revenue Court as an appellate Court with power to provide for the examination of witnesses by the tribunal inferior to it. AIR 1955 N U C (Mad) 3197.

——S. 1—Applicability—Eviction or surrender prior to Acts—Law applicable.

Where a claim for compensation for improvements made by the tenant is concerned the law governing the matter shall be taken as on the date of eviction or surrender of the property. Where the defendant has surrendered the property to the plaintiff by 1125 M. SECTION 2

——Ss. 2 (c), 4 (2), 6—Kudikidappukaran — Permission to occupy—Who can grant—Person put in possession by lessee or assignee of Kudikidappukaran—Right to protection—(Interpretation of statutes.)

In order to satisfy the test of a kudikidappukaran a party must be able to establish that he comes within all the tests laid down by the definition in Cl. (c) to S. 2. Applying the test contained in S. 2, Cl. (c), the only interpretation that could be placed upon sub-clause (2) of S. 4 is that the legislature takes in all those cases of persons who would have been in possession of a portion of the property and who have constructed buildings or other homesteads on a portion of the property in the actual possession of the owner. Further, S 6 imposes an embargo upon the right of a kudikidappukaran to alienate the rights That gives an indication that the right is conferred and intended to be conferred by the Act is a personal right of a kudikidappukaran as such who is able to satisfy the test laid down in that Act and it does not recognise any such right in the transferees. Under the new Act neither the person put in possession by the lessee nor the transferee from such person is entitled to claim protection on the basis of being a kudikidappukaran and they cannot effectively challenge the right of the owner to get a decree for eviction in his favour. 1959 Ker L R 1151 : 1959 Ker L T 1287 ; 1960 Ker L J 1 : ILR (1960) Ker 24 : AIR 1960 Ker 158 (162, 163) (Pt C) (Prs 20, 22, 23).

Held, that the plaintiff's remedy must be limited to recovery of mortgage money and interest thereon at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum from 1117. It was true that michavarom was also taken into account in fixing the Jenmikarom of Jenmom properties coming within the purview of the Jenmi and Kudiyan Act. But this did not mean that michavarom as such continued to exist after the date of the amending Act of 1108. The property mortgaged was the michavarom payable by the Kanom tenants and such michavarom formed one of the several items of payment due from kanom tenants. It could not be said that michavarom was due from the tenants after the Jenmikarom due on the property was settled. The liability sought to be imposed on the defendant was not one arising under the mortgage in which case alone the question of accounting would arise. 1958 Ker L T 39 : 1958 Ker L J 191.

A subsequent wrong registry of the property by the Sirkar as if it were a Puthuval land will not in any way affect the pre-existing rights as between the Jenmi and his Kanom tenant if the property was really Jenmon property at the time of the demise. What really matters is the nature of the property at the time of the original demise in favour of the tenant. 4 TL J 117 : 5 T L J 258 and 32 T L J 164. AIR 1952 Trav-Co 382 (382) (Pr 2) (DB).

—S. 3—as amended by Act (12 of 1108) — Applicability—Jenmon lands—Essential characteristics of —Test to decide.

The question whether a property is jenmom land or not has to be decided, for purposes of the Jenmi and Kudiyan Act, with reference entirely to the definition of the term 'Jenmom land' in that Act.

The mere fact that the lands comprised in the deed are stated to be 'Theetam' makes no difference and cannot derogate from the rights of the proprietor or owner who has full rights. 1950 Ker L T 327.

SECTION 5

—S. 5—Applicability — Holder of Kanom right — 'If jenmi'—Mortgagee if kanomdar—Right to benefit of S. 5.

The holder of a Kanom right cannot be treated as a jenmi within the definition of that term in S. 5 and therefore his mortgagee cannot claim the benefit of S. 5 of the Act and resist a suit for redemption. 37 T L R 252 (FB), Rel. on. 1957 Ker L T 458.

——Ss. 5 (2), 42—Kanom of Jenmon property—Right to demand surrender of holding for jenmi's own cultivation—Redeemability—(T. P. Act (1882), S. 60).

Where a kanom demise of jenmom property of a non-Malyalee Brahmin Jenmi, contains a provision as to redemption conditional on the jenmi kovilakom requiring the land for its own cultivation and what is stated is that if it be not so needed, the tenant shall take a renewal as per the custom and practice of the kovilakom to entitle the jenmi to get surrender of the holding, it must prima facie be shown that the Jenmi bona fide requires the property for his own use. 1956 Ker L T 529 : ILR (1956) Trav-Co 533.

——S. 5 — S. 5 applies to demise granted by non-Malayalee Brahmin Jenmi granted before Act 5 of 1071 — Demises granted after Act came into force being governed by S. 43. 30 Trav L J 596, Not foll. AIR 1955 N U C (Trav-Co) 6033 (DB).

——S. 5 (as amended by Act 12 of 1108) — Permanent tenancy is conferred only in respect of kanom holding. AIR 1955 N U C (Trav-Co) 2210 (DB).

——S. 5 — Essential condition for creation of Kanom demise, stated. AIR 1955 N U C (Trav-Co) 2210 (DB).

——S. 5, Cl. (2)—'Period of 25 years' refers to period prior to coming into force of Act. AIR 1955 N U C (Trav-Co) 2210 (DB).

——S. 5—S. 5 does not apply where express provision for surrender is made. AIR 1952 Trav-Co 447 (448) (Pt A) (Pr 3) (DB).

——Ss. 5 and 42 — Applicability — Kanom pattom granted when Act of 1071 was in force — Kudiyan given option to take renewal or to surrender — No right in jenmi to resume or redeem—Effect Kudiyan holding over and paying Michawaram—Act 12 of 1108 coming into force—Effect —Right to redeem.

Where in the case of a kanom granted by a Jenmi to a kudiyan when the Act of 1071 was in force, the kudiyan or tenant is given an option to take a renewal or to surrender the property to the Jenmi or landlord if he so chose, but no right is given to the Jenmi to redeem the property after 12 years, the document does not fall within the exception contemplated by S. 42 of the Act. If in such a case there has neither been a renewal nor any offer from the kudiyan to surrender the property on payment of the kanarthan and the value of the improvements, and the kudiyan continues to hold the properties, the presumption is that he holds on the same terms as are contained in the deed of demise. If during that holding by the tenant, paying the michawaram stipulated in that deed to the landlord, the amending Act of 1108, comes into force, the provisions of S. 1 of the Act as amended are attracted to the tenure. From and after the date of the amended Act the kudiyan becomes the owner of the property subject only to the liability to pay Jenmikaram. The Jenmi has no longer any right to seek redemption of the property and no question of any further renewal can arise. The properties become irredeemable under S. 5 of Act 5 of 1071 as amended by Act 12 of 1108. 1950 Ker L T 327.

——S. 9—Compulsory sale for arrears of Jenmikarom —Doctrine of lis pendens does not apply. See T. P. Act (1882), S. 52. AIR 1954 Trav-Co 122 (DB).

——Ss. 9, 17 — Liability of one parcel of land in holding for other parcels.

A holding under the Jenmi and Kudiyan Act, was defined to mean a parcel of land or parcels of land held under one Kanapattom instrument and one set of conditions. Section 9 has to be read with cl. (1) of S. 17. So if a holding consisted of more parcels of land than one, the Jenmi's right would be only to receive the Jenmikaram fixed for each parcel of land. That would not entitle him to claim a charge on one parcel of land for the Jenmikaram due from another parcel of land in the same holding. ('51) 1951 Ker L T 236 (DB).

——Ss. 17 and 9 — Liability of one parcel of land in holding for other parcels.

A holding, under the Jenmi and Kudiyan Act, was defined to mean a parcel of land or parcels of land held under one kanapattom instrument and one set of conditions. Section 9 has to be read with Cl. SECTION 33

——Ss. 33, 34 — Decree for jenmi dues — Appeal against order in execution—(Travancore Civil Courts Act (2 of 1951))—Travancore Civil Courts Act (2 of 1084), S. 14 (e) — (Civil Procedure Code (1908), S. 7 and O. 21, R. 89)—(Travancore Civil Procedure Code (8 of 1100, M. E.), O. 21, R 87.)

An order rejecting an application under O. 21, R. 87, Travancore Civil Procedure Code, to set aside a sale in execution of a decree for jenmi dues passed in a suit filed under S. 33, Travancore Jenmi and Kudiyan Act, is not appealable after the enactment of the Civil Courts Act (12 of 1951) or under the Civil Procedure Code (1908), which has been extended to the State by the Civil Courts Act (2 of 1951). Therefore where the sale had taken place before the Civil Courts Act was passed and before the C. P. Code came into force in the State and the application to set aside the sale also was filed before those statutes came into force the question whether an appeal will lie against the order of rejection must be determined with reference to the provisions of S. 14 (e), Travancore Civil Courts Act (2 of 1084) which was the law then in force and thus the order passed is appealable. 1953 Ker L T 557 : ILR (1953) Trav Co 776 : AIR 1954:Trav-Co 125 (126) (Prs 3, 4) (DB).

——S. 33 — Entertainment of claims under, as original suits — (Travancore Civil Courts Act (II (2) of 1084), S. 12.

Section 33 only prescribes a summary procedure for recovery of claim on account of the Jenmikarams not exceeding Rs. 100 and does not expressly prohibit the entertaining of such claims as original suits. The exercise of ordinary jurisdiction in respect of such claims is only an irregularity which can be set right by directing a retrial in an appeal or revision against the decree passed. But where there has been no such appeal or revision and the decree has become final the executing court cannot ignore that decree as a nullity since it cannot be said that there was a total absence of jurisdiction for the Court to pass the decree. I L R (1952) Trav-Co 256 : 1952 Ker L T 298 : A I R 1952 Trav-Co 439 (440) (Pr 2) (DB).

——S. 34 — Execution of decree for jenmi dues—Appeal against order dismissing application under O. 21, R. 87, Travancore Civil Procedure Code—Maintainablility is to be determined with reference to the provisions of S. 14 (e) Travancore Civil Courts Act which was the law then in force and thus the order passed is appealable. See Tenancy Laws — Travancore Jenmi and Kudiyan Act (5 of 1071), S. 33. AIR 1954 Trav-Co 125 (DB).

——S. 42 — Express stipulation by jenmi reserving right to redeem—Subsequent acceptance of renewal fee—Effect of, on right to redeem.

Where the jenmi demising his property makes an express stipulation in the document reserving his right to redeem the property at any time after the specified date, the statutory provision of S. 42 which preserves this right of the jenmi has to prevail and it is no answer to such a right that the jenmi had accepted Adukkuvathu or renewal fees subsequent to the date of the document. Such a conduct by itself is not sufficient to replace the contract of redeemability as embodied in the document or to nullify the effect of the statutory provisions. The subsequent conduct of the parties is not relevant in gathering the intention of the parties clearly expressed in the document. 1955 Ker L T 649.

——S. 42—Kanom granted by Jenmi to a kudiyan or tenant when the Act of 1071 was in force—Tenant given option of renewal or to surrender to the landlord as per landlord's option - No right to the Jenmi to redeem after 12 years — Document does not fall within the exception contemplated by S. 42 of the Act — No surrender nor renewal and the kudiyan continues to hold the property - Presumption is that he holds properties on terms in the deed of demise. Under S. 44 a kudiyan can be absolved from liability to pay jenmi-karam only if he or his predecessor-in-interest has held the holding for more than fifty years preceding the date of the Travancore Jenmi Kudiyan Act of 1071 (and not for more than 50 years preceding the date of the Travancore Jenmi and Kudiyan (Amendment) Act of 1108) without paying michavaram and other dues or without taking any renewal within the said period of fifty years. A I R 1954 Trav-Co. 287 (288) (Pr 2).

——Cl. 8—Applicability — Lease held did not come within the clause and was redeemable. AIR 1955 NUC (TC) 1911.

——Cl. 8—Clause applied only to fresh leases granted after proclamation and not to renewals of old leases —Clause had reference only to Jenmam land, held on payment of renewal fees and customary dues by tenants. AIR 1955 N U C (Trav-Co.) 1095.

——Cl. 8 — Applicability—Travancore Jenmi and Kudiyan Act (5 of 1071 M. E.), S. 3—Scope of.

The Proclamation of 1042 which purports to lay emphasis on and elucidate the Royal Edicts 1005 and 1007 will make it obvious that the Proclamation of 1042 and the previous Edicts dealt with only demises of Jenmi's lands in respect of which renewal fees and customary fees were payable. Cl. 8 of the Royal Proclamation of 1042 has therefore application only to such demises. The Jenmi and Kudiyan Act which was enacted in supersession of the Royal Proclamation of 1042 also dealt with only such demises. This is clear from the definition of the term "Jenmon lands" in S 3 (1) and the term "Kanapattom" in S. 3 (4) of the Jenmi and Kudiyan Act (1071 M. E). ILR (1952) T C 29 : AIR 1952 T C 431 (431) (Pr 4) (DB).

——S. 6 (as amended in 1355 T. E.) — "Kole Jote tenancy"—Nature of.

The section does not intend that the "Kole Jote" must be a tenancy under a cultivating tenant or a rayat. It is immaterial whether the Proja under whom it is held is a rayat or a Madhyabaratt. A I R 1952 Tripura 11 (13) (Pt B) (Pr 15).

——S. 6 (as amended in 1355 T. E.) — Korfa—Incidents of tenancy — Liability of tenant for eviction—Burden of proof — (Bengal Tenancy Act (8 of 1885), Chap. 7)—(Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101-103).

The Tripura Tenancy Act does not define either the status or incidents of the Korfa Tenancy. Since no specific legal rights are provided by the Act itself they are to be governed by the agreed terms of the tenancy and the tenant can be evicted according to those terms.

When the plaintiff seeks to evict alleging that the tenancy is one at will according to a long established custom the onus would be on him to prove the custom and that heavily when the tenant sought to be evicted had admittedly been in long possesion.

Where the local law is silent on any point the practice in the Tripura State permits the law in West Bengal being followed. The Korfa tenant would under the Bengal Tenancy Act (8 of 1885) be an under-rayat when the plaintiff seeking his eviction is a rayat but not when he is found to be otherwise. Nevertheless where the plaintiff claims rayati right the nearest approximation of the Korfa's right would be that of an under-rayat under Chapter VII of the Bengal Tenancy Act. He cannot be evicted, by the plaintiff who can claim no better right than that of a rayat under the Act, when there is nothing on record to show that he had rendered himself liable on any of the grounds on which an under-rayat can be evicted under the Bengal Act. AIR 1952 Tripura 11 (13, 14) (Pt C) (Prs 15 to 23).

——S. 6 (as amended in 1355 T.E.)—(Korfa Tenancy —Heritability—Tenancy Laws—Bengal Tenancy Act (8 of 1885), S. 48-G (2).

The Tripura Tenancy Act itself is silent on the question of the heritability or otherwise of a Korfa Tenancy. Therefore when a contract or custom is not proved either way a korfa tenancy with an occupancy right must be held heritable, following the provisions of S. 48-G (2), Bengal Tenancy Act, by virtue of which the tenancy of an under-rayat with an occupancy right is inherited by his heirs exactly as the heirs of a rayat inherit under S. 26 of that Act. AIR 1952 Tripura 11 (14) (Pt D) (Pr 25).

——S. 12 (as amended by Act 1 of 1355 T. E.) — Consent of landlord—Custom.

A custom is a rule which, in a particular family or in a particular district, has from long usage obtained the force of law. It must be ancient, certain and reasonable and being in derogation to the general rules of law, must be construed strictly. It is essential that the alleged custom should be established to be prevalent by clear and unambiguous evidence.

Held, that the custom set up by the defendants that a tenant could execute a sale-deed without the consent of the landlord was not proved to be prevailing an Alepasa mouza. The mere fact that a person did not take consent of the landlord and the latter did npt raise any objection on account of his being a lawyer will not prove the alleged custom. AIR 1955 Tripura 13 (16) (Pt D) (Pr 15).

——Ss. 53, 68 to 76 (as amended in 1355 T. E.) — Right to acquire tenancy land — (Bengal Tenancy Act (8 of 1885), S. 84.

Under Ss. 68 to 76 of the Tripura Tenancy Act it is only the Sirkar or Bhumyadhikari who can acquire the lands of any tenancy. A person who, within the definition of S. 4, is neither, has no right to acquire the tenancy land unless he can prove a contract or custom in support of his claim. Section 84, Bengal Tenancy Act (8 of 1885) also cannot help when he has not framed his plaint in accordance with the provisions of that section and has not obtained the necessary certificate from the Collector.

—S. 78 — Suit under S. 9, Specific Relief Act, by tenant dispossessed by landlord is not barred — Nature of suit under Tenancy Act and S. 9, Specific Relief Act.

The basis for a suit under S 9, Specific Relief Act is the fact of possession and the Courts are not concerned with the right of the person dispossessed to be in possession of the property. The fact that the plaintiff raises a plea that he was a korfa tenant under the defendant is besides point. In a suit under S. 9, Specific Relief Act, the only question is whether the plaintiff was in possession. Such a suit is not barred by S. 78 of the Tripura Tenancy Act (1 of 1296, T. E.).

The suits provided under the two sections are quite different in their character and civil Courts can entertain both suits. A I R 1955 Tripura 13 and A I R 1956 Tripura 26, Dissented from. A I R 1962 Tripura 58 (60, 61) (Prs 10, 11, 12).

—S. 78 — Scope of.

Section 78 of the Tripura Tenancy Act, 1296, T. E. provides that if a tenant enjoying any right be dispossessed unjustly and illegally, he shall be entitled to recover possession of the land within 2 years from the date of dispossession by recourse to a Civil Court. That is the period of limitation for a tenant who is outside to get back possession. The section does not prescribe the period of limitation of 2 years for a landlord to file a suit for eviction against the tenant in possession. And that section cannot be availed of in holding that no landlord can evict a tenant after a period of two years. A I R 1962 Tripura 1 (7) (Pt C) (Prs 43, 47).

—Ss. 6 and 7—Bhumidari rights—Acquisition of — Declaration under S. 6—Effect.

By virtue of a declaration under S. 6 of Act (10 of 1949), a party does not become a bhumidar and is not protected under S. 7 of the Act from ejectment from the land in respect of which the declaration has been obtained. The tenures provided in the U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act, 1951 will come into being only on the repeal of the U. P. Tenancy Act of 1939. So long as this latter Act remains in force, the tenures provided in it shall continue. The U. P. Tenancy Act shall be repealed with effect from the date of publication of the Notification prescribed under S. 4 of the Act of 1951. 1951 All W R (Rev) 207 : 1951 R D 211.

——Ss. 6, 7 — Grant of declaration under S. 6 is no bar to determination of suit or appeal. 1951 All W R (Rev) 207 : 1951 R D 211.

——Ss. 6, 7, 12 — Sanad obtained under—Effect.

A mere production of the Sanad embodying the declaration obtained under S. 6 of the U. P. Agricultural Tenants (Acquisition of Privileges) Act, is no ground for the dismissal of the application, proceeding, suits, appeal or revision that may have been filed before a competent Court by the opposite party.

If a party against whom this declaration is produced wants to get it cancelled, the Court should grant him an opportunity to do so.

This declaration does not oust the jurisdiction of competent Court to adjudicate upon the rights of the persons concerned.

The persons holding the declaration will not be ejected from his land merely because a decree or order for his ejectment already exists or has been passed after the declaration has been granted.

On the basis of such a decree or order for ejectment it will be proper for the S. D. O. to cancel the declaration.

The decree or order for ejectment of the person holding the declaration will be executed after it has been cancelled. 1951 A W R (Rev) 131 : 1951 R D 172.

——S. 6 — Obtaining of a declaration under pending an appeal by the defendant against a decree for ejectment in a suit under S. 180 of the Tenancy Act — If bars hearing of appeal.

Where a plaintiff who claimed to be an expropriatary tenant obtains a decree against the defendant in a suit under S. 180 of the Tenancy Act and pending an appeal by the defendant obtains a declaration under S. 6 of the U. P. Agricultural Tenants (Acquisition of Privileges) Act, that would not by itself bar the hearing of the appeal. A tenant who is out of possession cannot by merely making the deposit and obtaining a declaration under S. 6 be entitled to recover possession automatically, except by decree or order of competent Court. 1951 R D 165 : 1951 A W R (Rev) 192.

——S. 7 (1) (b) — Validity of Act—Act if repugnant to Contract Act — (Contract Act (1872), S. 37) — (Government of India Act (1935), S. 107 (2) and Sch. 7, List 2, Entry 21 and List 3, Entry 10).

A reference to S. 37 of the Contract Act, would indicate that there is no repugnancy between the provisions of the Contract Act and the provisions of U. P. Act 10 of 1949. The fresh liability that is imposed or the right that is conferred by the U. P. Act 10 of 1949 is not by virtue of any new contract, nor does it derive its force from any agreement between the parties. It owes its origin to the orders of a Court acting under a statute. An agreement for payment of rent between landlord and tenant in respect of an agricultural holding would be a contract relating to agricultural land. It would, therefore, fall outside the sphere of entry No, 10 of List III. Applying the principle of pith and substance, the Act would more naturally fall within the range of entry No. 21 of List II than of entry No. 10 of List III. The Act could not, therefore be impugned on the ground that it was not reserved for the consideration of the Governor-General or for the signification of His Majesty's pleasure as required by S. 107 (2), Government of India Act. 1957 All L J 712 : AIR 1957 All 644 (646) (Prs 8 to 10) (DB).

——S. 7 — Declaration under — If makes the person a bhumidar — When a person obtaining a declaration becomes a bhumidar.

If a person obtains a declaration under S. 6 of the U. P. Act 10 of 1949, he does not become a bhumidar by virtue of the declaration and is not protected under S. 7 of the Act from ejectment from the land in respect of which the declaration has been obtained. The tenures provided in the U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act, 1951, will come into being only on the repeal of the U. P. Tenancy Act of 1939 and that can be repealed with effect from the date of publication of the notification prescribed under S. 4 of the Act of 1951. 1951 A W R (Rev) 207 : 1951 R D 211.

——S. 7 — The declaration under S. 6 does not oust the jurisdiction of the competent court to adjudicate upon the rights of parties concerned. A person holding declaration will not be ejected merely because a decree or order for ejectment has been passed already or after the grant of declaration. Such a decree or order for ejectment will be executed after the declaration has been cancelled. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Agricultural Tenants (Acquisition of Privileges) Act (1949), S. 6. 1951 All W R (Rev) 131 : 1951 R D 172.

——S. 10 (as amended by Act 7 of 1950) — Applicability—It is the pleadings of the parties which would determine whether a suit or proceeding falls within the provisions of S. 10 of Act 7 of 1950. The entry in the records is necessary only in respect of the occupation of the land by another person. The absence of an entry about khudkasht does not affect the application of S. 10, if the plaintiff claims the land to be his khudkasht, and the defendant is recorded as an occupier of it in the records of 1356F. 1951 All W R (Rev) 207 : 1951 R D 211.

—Ss. 12, 13—Order refusing cancellation of Sanad — Appeal.

The language of S. 13 shows that any order passed by the Assistant Collector under S. 12 is appealable. It was not intended to make only orders cancelling a sanad appealable. —Ss. 12, 6, and 7—Declaration under S. 6—Effect on pending proceeding — Jurisdiction to adjudicate on rights of persons concerned if ousted.

If the party against whom this declaration under S. 6 is produced wants to get it cancelled under S. 12, it is only fair that the Court should grant him an opportunity to do so.

This declaration does not oust the jurisdiction of competent Courts to adjudicate upon the rights of the persons concerned.

The person holding the declaration will not be ejected from his land merely because a decree or order for his ejectment already exists or has been passed after the declaration has been granted.

On the basis of this decree or order of ejectment, it will be proper for the S. D. O. to cancel the declaration.

—S. 13—Order under—Revision under C. P. C.—Maintainability—Civil P. C. (1908), S. 115.

U. P. Agricultural Tenants (Acquisition of Privileges) Act (10 of 1949) lays down special procedure according to the rules framed by the Provincial Government under S. 16 of the Act. Therefore, the general procedure laid down in the Code of Civil Procedure would not apply to a proceeding under the Act which it self-contained.

Therefore, the Code of Civil Procedure would not apply to U. P. Act 10 of 1949 and consequently S. 115 of the Code.

Hence, no revision lies under S. 115 of the Code against an order passed under S. 13 of the Act. 1944 R D 325, Dist. 1952 All L J (Rev) 145 : 1952 R D (BR) 191.

—S. 13—Order under—Revision—Maintainability—(Tenancy Laws — U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act (1 of 1951), Ss. 333 and 340.

Section 333 of the U. P. Act 1 of 1951 empowers the Board to revise an order passed by a subordinate Court in a suit or proceeding referred to in Sch. II of the Act. Section 340 of the Act provides for the amendment made in U. P. Act 10 of 1949 to apply with retrospective effect by sub s. (1), and sub-s. (2) of S. 340 also validates retrospectively all orders made, proceedings taken, declarations granted and jurisdiction exercised under Act 10 of 1949. None of the above two sections is an authority for the Board to interfere in revision against an order of the Commissioner passed under S. 13 of U. P. Act 10 of 1949. 1952 All L J (Rev) 145 : 1952 R D (BR) 191.

The U. P. Agricultural Tenants (Acquisition of Privileges) Act of 1949, amended by Act 7 of 1950, although it refers to tenancy matter is not a part of the U. P. Tenancy Act of 1939 but an independent Act, and the procedure is provided in the Act independently of the Tenancy Act. Therefore the argument, that the order of the Additional Commissioner passed in an appeal under S. 13 of the U. P. Agricultural Tenants (Acquisition of Privileges) Act should be deemed to be an order under the U. P. Tenancy Act to which S. 275 applies is untenable. 1952 All L J (Rev) 50 : 1952 All W R (Rev) 5 : 1951 R D 263.

In the absence of any notification extending the U. P. Tenancy Act, 1939, to the erstwhile Banaras State, it would appear, that in the territory of the erstwhile Banaras State, the Banaras State Tenancy Act (3 of 1949) is still in force, as it is referred to in the schedule attached to the U. P. Agricultural Tenants (Acquisition of Privileges) Act 1949 as amended in 1950 and Ordinance No. 3 of 1951.

From S. 10 of the U. P. Act 7 of 1950 it appears that so far as the proceedings under the Banaras State Tenancy Act, 1949, are concerned, only those under Ss. 97, 99, 154 and 159 of that Act have been stayed subject to the Proviso that cases under S. 159 have been stayed only where the plaintiffs are proprietors. But where in a suit under S. 159, the plaintiffs are tenants then they are not to be stayed. 1952 R D (B R) 27 : 1952 All W R (H C) 131 : 1952 All L J 104 : AIR 1952 All 940 (941) (Pt B) (Prs 7, 8, 9, 10).

——S. 10—Case under S. 63/180, U. P. Tenancy Act (1939) for declaration — Additional Commissioner passing decree on 30-12-1949 but staying appeal so far as it related to relief of ejectment under S. 180—Order and decree are not in contravention of S. 10 of U. P. Act 7 of 1950. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (17 of 1939), S. 63. 1952 All L J (Rev) 87.

——S. 10—'Suit' includes appeal.

The word 'suit' in S. 10 of U. P. Act 7 of 1950 includes an appeal which is merely a continuation of the suit and in any case the words "suits, applications and proceedings" are wide enough to include appeals. Hence a pending appeal in a suit for ejectment under S. 175 of the U. P. Tenancy Act must be stayed under that section. Even if it be held that it cannot be stayed it would be useless to hear the appeal as the decree eventually passed cannot be executed under the provisions of that Act. 1951 All W R (H C) 56 (DB).

——S. 10 — Applicability — Absence of entry about Khudkhast—If affects.

The absence of an entry about khudkhast cannot affect the applicability of Act 7 of 1950 if the plaintiff claims the land to be his khudkhast and the defendant is recorded as an occupier of it in the records of 1356-F. 1951 All W R (Rev) 207 : 1951 R D 211.

—U. P. AGRICULTURAL TENANTS (ACQUISITION OF PRIVILEGES) AMENDMENT AND MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS ACT (23 of 1951)

——S. 5—Applicability—Stay of revision proceedings before Board.

Where no revision lies in law from an order in a proceeding under U. P. Act 10 of 1949, the proceedings before the board for revision cannot be a proceeding in law and cannot be stayed under S. 5.

Moreover, S. 5 provides for the stay of a proceeding against an occupier and sub-s. (2) of the section indicates that sub-s. (1) applies to a proceeding in the Court of the Assistant Collector. The section cannot apply to a proceeding before the Board where no valid proceeding lies. 1952 All L J (Rev) 145 : 1952 R D (B R) 191.

——Ss. 5 and 6—Scope.

Sections 5 and 6 of the Act do not at all justify the stay of an appeal from a decree passed under S. 63/180 of the U. P. Tenancy Act. Section 5 provides for the stay of a proceeding against an occupier on any ground mentioned in Clause (c) of sub-s. (1) of S. 12 of the Act and S. 6 provides for the revival of a declaration which has been cancelled under the above provisions of the Act. They do not refer to any other proceeding. 1952 All L J (Rev) 87 : 1952 R D (B R) 161.

SECTION 6

——S. 6 (3)—Applicability — Order for cancellation of certificate under S. 12 (1) (c)—Subsequent order of Commissioner setting aside order under S. 6 (3) of Act (23 of 1951) is valid. —U. P. CONSOLIDATION OF HOLDINGS ACT (5 of 1954) ——Preamble—Validity—Does not contravene Art. 14 of the Constitution. See Constitution of India, Art. 14. A I R 1957 All 297 (DB).

PREAMBLE

——Preamble—Scope and effect of—Procedural provisions — Violation of principles of natural justice. See Constitution of India, Art. 226. A I R 1957 All 297 (DB).

——Preamble—Object of.

The object of the U. P. Consolidation of Holdings Act is to allot a compact area in lieu of scattered holdings so that large scale cultivation be made possible and all its attendant advantages may accrue to tenure holders. The consolidation of holdings is intended to encourage the development of agriculture. 1956 All W R (H C) 643 : 1956 All L J 878 : A I R 1957 All 297 (299) (Pt A) (Pr 5) (DB).

——S. 3 (as amended by U. P. Act 38 of 1958), Ss 15 (1) (a), 42 (4)) (as amended by U. P. Act 24 of 1956) —Permission granted by Assistant Commissioner, at Mathura—Validity of—Assistant Director at Mathura, made ex-officio Deputy Director — Still permission granted by him is not valid in view of specific provision of S. 15 (1) (a).

Under the provisions Clause (a) of sub-s. (1) of S. 15 of the Consolidation of Holdings Act it is the Director of Consolidation who is authorised to grant permission and since the permission in question was granted by the Deputy Director of Consolidation it had no validity and was not a permission as required by law.

A notification issued by the Government under S. 42 (1) of the Act appointing the Assistant Director concerned as ex-officio Deputy Director of Consolidation does not cure the inherent infirmity for the simple reason that the notification has not been issued under S. 42 (4) which authorises the Government to empower Deputy Director to discharge the functions of the Director of Consolidation as may be specified in the notification.

Even if it be assumed that the use of the word ex officio in the notification dated 21.9.1956 was intended to confer upon the Deputy Director, Consolidation of Mathura the powers of the Director under S. 15 (1) (a) of the Act which hitherto were enjoyed by the Assistant Director, Consolidation, Mathura by virtue of the notification dated 28-7-1955, it would fail to achieve that object for the same reason that the notification dated 21-9-1956 was not a notification under sub-s. (4) of S. 42 of the Act. 1965 All W R (H C) 716 : I L R (1965) 2 All 879.

——S. 3 (4)—'Director'—Definition requires appointment as Director and not conferment of powers of Director. See Tenancy Laws—U. P. Consolidation of Holdings Act (5 of 1954), S. 11 (2). 1965 All W R (H C) 666 : 1965 All L J 718.

——S. 3 (2), (5), Explanation (4) (c) (as added by U. P. Act 38 of 1958)—Grove land is land as defined in S. 3 (5)—Act applies to such land.

The expression 'land' as defined in Cl. (5) of S. 3 means 'land held or occupied for purposes connected with agriculture, horticulture and animal husbandry'. Grove land is thus land for the purposes of the Act. A holding as defined in Clause (4) (c) of the section means a parcel or parcels of land and therefore includes a grove land except for the purposes of consolidation, i. e., rearrangement of holdings. Thus all that is meant by Explanation to Cl. (2) is that though a grove land is land (as defined in Cl. 5) and therefore, may be included in a holding when holdings of tenure-holders are rearranged for consolidation, grove land forming part of them will be left out and only the remaining lands of the holdings will be arranged. This is not the same thing as saying that the Act does not apply to grove lands; only the provision regarding rearrangement will not apply to them and the rest will apply. 1962 All W R (H C) 506, Overruled. 1962 All L J 584 : 1962 All W R (H C) 391 ; I L R (1962) 2 All 359.

——Ss. 11, 12, 20 to 24, 29, 31, 33, 34 and 36 (after amendment by Act 16 of 1957)—Scope and construction — Necessity for the aggrieved party to file an objection at each stage — Reference under S. 12 (4), if not finally decided, has to be stayed — Consideration as to inconvenience or expenses to party not material. 1962 All W R 450 held Overruled on one point by 1964 All W R 424 (DB).

Once the statement of proposals is confirmed under S. 23 of the U. P. Consolidation of Holdings Act, the Civil Judge hearing a reference under S. 12 (4) in respect of the same subject-matter, must decide it in accordance with the statement of proposals so confirmed, especially when no objection has been filed under S. 20 (2) of the Act. However, a reference made under S. 12 (4), if not finally decided will have to be stayed on the publication of the statement of proposals even though the stay may cause unnecessary inconvenience and expenses to the parties.

It is so for the reason that provisions under Ss. 12 (7) and (1), 22 (4), 20 (2) and 34 (1) compel an inference that the aggrieved party has got to file an objection at each stage, irrespective of whether the question of title had earlier been determined or finally determined or not, if the entry in the statement published under S. 11, or Statement of Proposals, or the order passed under Ss. 29, 31 and 33 of the Act is against him.

Similarly, the difference in the phraseology of Ss. 12 (4), 22 (1) and 36 (1) of the Act also suggest that a party filing an objection under S. 12 (1) should make an objection under S. 20 (2) and 34 (1) also if the entry in the statement of proposals, or order contemplated under S. 34 (1) of the Act is against him. 1963 All L J 957, Foll; 1962 All W R 450, held Overruled on one point by 1964 All W R 424 (DB). 1965 All W R (HC) 245.

Section 20 (2) is one of the provisions which prevents the decision of Consolidation Officer from becoming final under S. 12 (3). There is nothing in S. 20 (2) to show that the objection under it must be confined to some particular matter or that the objection cannot raise the same point which has already been raised under S. 12 but in respect of which the decision has not become final; and in view of the provisions of S 22 (2) it cannot be said that this involves unnecessary duplication of proceedings, which provides for automatic staying of suits or proceedings after the publication of statement of proposals under S. 20 (1). 1962 All W R (H C) 450.

——Ss. 12 and 54—Rules under S. 54, R. 34 (3) — If ultra vires— (U. P. Consolidation of Holdings Rules, R. 34 (3)).

Rule 34 (3) of the U. P. Consolidation of Holdings Rules framed under S. 54 of the Act, providing for an appeal from an order of a Consolidation Officer under S. 12 (2), is a rule for the purpose of carrying into effect the provisions of the Act and is not ultra vires the rule making power of the State Government under the Act and therefore it is valid. Under S. 12 (3) of the Act the Consolidation Officer's order is not necessarily final; it will be final only if provision to the contrary is not made "by or under this Act" A provision for appeal from the order would come within the expression "otherwise provided" within the meaning of the sub-section. The phrase 'under the Act' means 'by the Act or under rules made under the Act.' ——S. 12 (2)—Scope — Non-compliance — Effect — Rules under Act, R. 34 (1)—Scope.

Where the Assistant Consolidation Officer neither consulted the Land Management Committee before preparing his report under S. 12 (2) of the Act nor did he forward the views of the Committee to the Consolidation Officer, this is a breach of the mandatory provisions of S. 12 as well as of rules made under that Act. The non-compliance vitiates the entire proceedings and the order passed by the Consolidation Officer is contrary to law. 1959 All L J 209.

4. Reference to arbitrator — Sub-s. (4).

——S. 12 (4) — District Judge erroneously taking view that civil Judge had no jurisdiction to decide reference under S. 12 (4) and failing to hear appeal on merits — District Judge does not exercise jurisdiction vested in him — High Court can in revision, remand appeal for hearing on merits. See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 115. 1965 All L J 741 : 1965 All W R (HC) 374.

——Ss. 12 (4) and 36-A — U. P. Consolidation of Holdings (Amendment) Act (16 of 1957), Ss. 18 and 21 — U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act, 1950 (1 of 1951), S. 332-A — Object of enacting S. 36 A—Reference under S. 12 (4) in disregard of S. 332-A—Civil Judge's jurisdiction to decide reference — District Judge can hear appeal against order of civil Judge.

Section 36-A was introduced to make it clear to the consolidation authorities that the provision applies to proceedings under the Consolidation Act also. The incorporation of a saving clause in S. 21 of the Amending Act, was apparently made to ensure that matters already finally determined may not become a nullity and without jurisdiction and references already made, wrongly, be disposed of by the authority to whom already referred. The courts can assume that the saving clause in S. 21 of the Amending Act was meant to protect the disregard of S. 332-A of the Zamindari Abolition Act also. In this view of the matter a reference already made to the civil Judge under S. 12 (4) of the Consolidation Act in disregard of the provisions of S. 332-A of the Zamindari Abolition Act, though initially invalid, can be heard and decided by the civil Judge in accordance with the law, i. e. after making a reference to the Arbitrator. The civil Judge, therefore, has the jurisdiction to decide the reference after disposal of the objections to the award of the Arbitrator, and the District Judge can hear an appeal against the order of the civil Judge setting aside or refusing to set aside the award. 1965 All W R (HC) 374: 1965 All L J 741.

——S. 12 (4) — Controversy over the status of "bhumidars" can be a question of title and the Consolidation Officer can make a reference to Arbitrator. 1965 All W R (H C) 206.

——S. 12 (4)— Scope — Question of title — What is.

What is required by sub-s. (4) of S. 12 is not that the objection should itself raise a question of title but that it should "involve" a question of title; and so an objection against an entry which is an entry about title is an objection involving a question of title within the meaning of sub-s. (4). In the instant case entry was of Sirdari rights and was, therefore, not an entry of title and the appellant himself did not claim Bhumidhari rights; so neither aspect of his objection raised a question of title and the objection could not be said to be one which involved a question of title. 1964 All L J 487 : 1964 All W R (H C) 371 : ILR (1964) 2 All 548 : AIR 1964 All 360 (362) (Pt B) (Pr 6) (DB).

Reading R 32 (4) of the Rules framed under the Act along with Ss. 10A and 12 of the Act the question as to the extent of a tenure-holder's share in the case of two or more joint tenure-holders relates to a question of title within the meaning of sub-s. ——Ss. 22 (2) (as it stood prior to 1959), 20, 12, 49, 17, 21, 38 & 41 — "Court"—Expression does not include consolidation authorities under the Act since they are not 'Courts' within the strict meaning of the term, 1962 R. D. (H. C.) 107 Overruled—(Words and Phrases—'Court.')

Though the several provisions of the Act give the consolidation Authorities the trappings of a Court, these are not 'Courts' in the strict and accepted meaning of the term and hence, proceedings before consolidation authorities under S. 12 are not to be stayed under S. 22 (2) upon publication of the statement of proposals under S. 20 (1).

This is so firstly because nowhere in the Act the authorities are described as 'Courts' and the reference to 'suit' in S. 49 is an improper and loose user of the term. Further, provisions such as Ss. 12, 17, 20 21 amply make it clear that the views of the Consolidation Committee which is a purely executive body, have to be taken into account and given due weight by the Consolidation authorities in making decisions about a number of controversies under the Act. This circumstance strongly militates against the contention that they are Courts. 1959 A L J R 209, Foll.

Under S. 38 the authorities are invested with only certain of the 'powers, rights and privileges as are vested in a Civil Court' so much so the restricted form of the power makes it manifest that those authorities cannot be construed to be Courts in the proper sense of that term.

The mere fact that under S. 41 the procedure which the authorities constituted under the Act have to follow is the same which is to be followed by revenue Courts, does not necessarily mean that those authorities have the status of Courts. 1960 R D (HC) 75, Civil Misc. For a reference under S. 22, existence of a question of title on the date the reference is made is essential and unless there is such a subsisting question, a reference which did not involve a question of title is an invalid reference.

Where, therefore, the reference under the section was in respect of Sirdari rights, which under the newly added S. 36-A had ceased to be a question of title before the date of reference the reference was held as illegal and without jurisdiction. 1962 All W R (HC) 25.

——Ss. 24 to 27 (as amended in 1958) — Finality of statement of proposal — Subsequent proceedings cannot be challenged.

Proceedings under Ss. 24 to 27 and under subsequent sections up to S. 52 can be taken on the basis of the statement of proposals finalised under S. 23 and unless there be any irregularity or illegality in those proceedings themselves those proceedings would not be invalidated on the ground of pendency of proceedings under S. 21— Only the finality of the statement of proposals could be challenged and not those subsequent proceedings. 1963 All L J 975.

——S. 30 — "Private source" of irrigation includes source previously owned by former tenure-holder — Interpretation of Statutes—Intention of legislature.

"A private source" of irrigation as contemplated in S. 30 includes a source proviously owned by the former tenure-holder The word 'private' has been used in the aforesaid section in contradistinction to the word "public". The language in which S. 30 is couched does not indicate that the intention of the Legislature was that if the former tenure holder was the owner of the source of irrigation he would not have the benefit of irrigating his field from that well on the allotment of the plot in which the well lay to another tenure-holder.

The intention of the Legislature has to be gathered from the words used and such words are normally to be given their ordinary and etymological meaning. 1964 All WR (HC) 594.

——S. 30—Former tenure-holder need not specifically claim benefit of irrigation at time of consolidation proceedings.

By virtue of S. 30 of the Act the benefit of irrigation which was previously enjoyed by the former tenure-holder has been expressly saved and there is thus no necessity for him specifically to claim such a right during the course of the consolidation proceedings. 1964 All W R (HC) 594.

Consolidation of Holdings Act a power to review its own decision is conferred upon all Deputy Directors of Consolidation is wrong. Section 48 does not expressly nor by implication confer upon him the power to set aside his earlier order and pass another order in its place. Section 14 of the Arbitration Act makes it clear that the notice of the making and signing of the award, and also of the filing of the award, has to be given in one case by the Arbitrators or the Umpire and in the other by the Court to all the parties to the arbitration agreement and not merely to those who had put in appearance before the Arbitrators or Umpire. Under sub-rules (3), (4) and (7) of Rule 63 U. P. Consolidation of Holdings Rules, the intimation of the date of appearance before the Civil Judge, Arbitrator and the Civil Judge again, as the case may be, has to be given to the parties present and it is not necessary to serve a notice on the parties not present.

The two provisions can be barmonised by laying down that the rules strictly falling within Clauses (rr) and (rrr) of Section 54 (2) of U. P. Consolidation of Holdings Act shall prevail over the corresponding provisions of the Arbitration Act and such rules shall govern the arbitration proceedings, and in other respects the arbitration shall be governed by the provisions of the Arbitration Act. Therefore, that part of Rule 63 of the U. P. Consolidation of Holdings Rules which enables the Civil Judge to pass a decree on the basis of the award or to set aside the award or remit it for reconsideration without serving notice of the filing of the award, on absentee parties is not valid; and it is necessary for the Civil Judge to serve a notice of the filing of the award on the absentee parties also. 1965 All WR (HC) 620: 1965 All LJ 1097.

It is evident from the implication of the whole scheme of adjudication envisaged by Sections 7 to 10 of U. P. Act (39 of 1952), incorporated in Section 4 of the U. P. ——S. 5 (2) — Scope and object of.

The concept of 'ceiling area' is directly and inseparably co-related to the concept of 'surplus land'. The determination of the ceiling area inevitably results in the determination of the surplus land. Indeed the two things are the parts of one and the same process. If that is so, then it would appear that the legislature intended that the post-August 20 transfer should be ignored both for ascertaining the ceiling area and the surplus land.

Section 5 (2) does not confine itself to a transfer of land only; it also eclipses a partition of land, if made after August 20. A post-August 20 partition is made ineffective because the legislature has raised a presumption that it has been brought about for the purpose of defeating the provisions of the Act. The legislature has likewise presumed that a post-August 20 transfer has been made for the same purpose. The object of Section 5 (2) thus is to frustrate shifts and contrivances to defeat the beneficent provisions of the Act. 1964 All WR (HC) 430: 1964 All LJ 311.

——S. 5—Plots in question not recorded in the name of the society at the commencement of the Act i.e., on 3-1-1961 — Recorded later in Jan. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Imposition of Ceiling on Land Holdings Act (1961), S. 6 (15). 1964 All WR (HC) 240.

——S. 5 (2) — In view of Sections 308 and 309 the words be deemed to be transferred to' occurring in Section 298 cannot be construed to mean 'as effecting a transfer of members' interest in the land. SECTION 6

——S. 6 (6) —Violates Article 14 of Constitution — Hence invalid under Art. 13 of Constitution.

To exempt tea, coffee and rubber plantations without granting exemption to sugar-cane plantations amounts to unconstitutional discrimination. Clause (vi) of Section 6, violates Article 14 of the Constitution. The clause is, therefore, invalid under Article 13 of the Constitution. 1963 All LJ 793: 1963 All WR (HC) 669: ILR (1964) 1 All 211: AIR 1965 All 175 (180) (Pt B) (Pr 25) (DB).

——S. 6 (18) — Exemption under is reasonable.

The object of Cl. (18) of Section 6 is to encourage people to bring uncultivated land under cultivation. The exemption under Clause (18) appears to be reasonable. The exemption is confined to land let out after the enforcement of the Act. If land has already been reclaimed, there is little point in granting exemption to such people for the purpose of increased agricultural production. Some date had to be fixed for differentiating land already brought under cultivation and land yet to be brought under cultivation. There should be no objection in fixing the date of enforcement of the Act as the line of demarcation. 1963 All LJ 793: 1963 All WR (HC) 669: ILR (1964) 1 All 211: AIR 1965 All 175 (180) (Pt D) (Pr 26) (DB).

——Ss. 6 (xv), 298, 5 — Interpretation of Section 6 (xv).

The opening of Clause (xv) of Section 6 is 'land held by and in its own name by a co-operative society'. It is a compound clause consisting of two parts namely (1) land held by a co-operative society and (2) land held in its own name by a co-operative society. Land 'held in its own name' is land held not on permission from the real owner but by virtue of law. The word 'held' does not mean 'recorded'; it means possessed lawfully.

Where the plots in question were not recorded in the name of the society at the commencement of the Act, that is on 3rd January 1961 and they were recorded in its name much later in January/February, 1962 but however the plots stood transferred to and held by the society on 28th November, 1959, the date of its registration, by virtue of the provisions of Section 298 of the Act.

Held, that the Clause (xv) of Section 6 applied to the case. The view, that the clause would only apply to a case where the land of a tenure holder has been recorded in the name of the society at the commencement of the Act was erroneous. 1964 All WR (HC) 240.

——S. 7 — Violates Article 14 of the Constitution.

A second appeal arising out of a suit under Section 180 of U. P. Tenancy Act was pending in the Board and it was stayed under Rule 4 (v) of the Rules under the Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act. Application under Rule 5 (3) was made to restart the same.

Held: No question relating to the competence of the Governor to pass the order of 1952, having been raised by either side, the order lay down valid law which has to be administered by Courts until it is modified or rescinded.

Clause 2 of the Order is subject to the express provisions of the U. P. Z. A. and L. R. Act or the rules thereunder. The second appeal has to remain stayed so long as Rule 4 (v) remains in the rules and until it is allowed to be restarted under Rule 5 (3). When so restarted the appeal can be heard under the provisions of U. P. Tenancy Act, 1939, as provided for by Cl. 2 of the Order. The question of restarting under Rule 5 (3) were adjourned for inquiry as the rules were being reconsidered as a matter of expediency. 1952 AWR (Rev) 192: 1952 ALJ (Rev) 242: 1952 RD 366.

——Cl. 2 — Effect of — (Tenancy Laws — U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Rules, Rules 4 and 5).

The section makes it competent for the Court to hear and decide proceedings pending before it on 30-6-1952 according to the provisions of the U. P. Tenancy Act only when there is no express provision to the contrary either in the U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act or the Rules made thereunder. It does not abrogate Rules 4 and 5 of the U. P. Zamindari Abolition Land Reforms Rules and therefore, where an appeal before the Board has been stayed under Rule 4 (5) of those rules, Clause 2 cannot make it competent for the Board to hear the appeal until the issue has been allowed to be restarted under Rule 5 (3) of those rules. 1952 All WR (Rev) 192: 1952 RD (BR) 366: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 242.

The fact that there was a subsequent representation made by the landlord and that a report was put up by the planning officer and an order passed thereon could not wipe off the effect of the failure to give notice under Section 3 (2) according to law. 1953 All LJ 278: AIR 1953 All 585 (DB).

——Ss. 3 and 6 — Ex parte order under Section 3 on finding proper service of notice on landlord — No legal evidence — Order made without jurisdiction — Provisions of S. 6 — Effect on the powers of High Court under Arts. 226 and 227.

An ex parte order under S. 3 of the U. P. Land Utilisation Act (5 of 1948) was passed by the Collector after finding that notices prescribed under S. 2 had been served on the landholders properly in the absence of a verified report of the process server as provided under Rule 78 of the Revenue Manual. The process server was not examined on oath by the Court to supply the omission. The application of the landholders for review of the order was also refused.

Held,: 1. The finding of the Collector of the due service of notices issued under Section 2 of the Act 5 of 1948 based on the unverified report of the process server is not sustainable in law.

2. The order passed ex parte consequent on that finding is made without jurisdiction. The omission to serve the notices under Section 2 a necessary preliminary requisite to proceed under Section 3 of the Act is fatal.

3. The provisions of Section 6 cannot affect the jurisdiction of the High Court under Articles 226 and 227 of the Constitution or curtail, modify or otherwise affect its powers thereunder. B the appellant before the Board contended that he did not agree to have the partition made between the parties including himself nor did he sign the lots of properties before the partition officer and so the lots should not have been accepted and the orders of the Courts below were wrong in confirming the partition so made.

Held,: Rule 28 (2) (d) of the rules lays down that all the parties must sign the lots, prepared by the parties themselves, before the Partition Officer and that the lots could be accepted only if they had been so signed.

The Partition Officer should have proceeded, under the circumstances, to make the partition himself under Rule 26; it was the only course open under the law. 1952 ALJ (Rev) 317.

SYNOPSIS

(Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (1939), Section 3.)

1. Applicability.
2. Grove land.
3. Holding.
4. Improvements.
5. Khudkasta.
6. Land.
7. Landholder.
8. Landlord.
9. Registered.
10. Rent.
11. Sub-tenant.
12. Tenant.

1. Applicability.

——Ss. 3 (1), 231 — Assignee of right to recover profits — Suit for share of profits.

Section 3 (1) does not explicitly say that an assignee shall be in the same position as a co-sharer, but the terms of the sub-section are sufficiently wide to include assignees. A successor must be the successor in the whole of the right, title or interest of a co-sharer. An assignee of the right to recover profits, is a co-sharer within the meaning of Section 231 of the U. P. Tenancy Act of 1939 and a suit by him for recovery of his share of profits should be instituted in the Revenue Court. in view of group A serial No. 15 of the 4th Schedule of the U. P. Tenancy Act. C. R. No. 10 of 1947 (All), Overruled. 1958 All WR (HC) 536: 1958 All LJ 407.

——S. 3 (1) — Restoration condition — Land in possession of successor in interest of the landlord who acquired it — Liability. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy (Amendment) Act (10 of 1947), Section 28. ('52) 1952 All LJ (Rev) 51 (DB).

2. Groveland.

——S. 3 (6) — Grove-land — What is.

The land containing 13 mango trees fully grown and big in size and covering the major portion of the land is grove-land within the definition contained in Section 3 (6), in spite of the fact, that there had been some cultivation on the land. The definition of grove-land in the Act does not exclude cultivation altogether but merely says that the number of trees should be large enough to prevent the land from being used primarily for any other purpose. 1963 All WR (HC) 518: AIR 1963 All 413 (415) (Pt C) (Pr 7).

——S. 3 — Grove-land — 'Considerable portion' — Meaning of — Ex-proprietary rights, if can be acquired in (Section 26 (9)) — Decision of Courts — Right to third appeal — (Section 213, Land Revenue Act).

Where M sold his proprietary rights in 2 plots of lands and claimed ex-proprietary rights therein and in the second appeal arising out of the proceeding under Section 36 of the Land Revenue Act the Commissioner held that one of the plots was a grove-land wherein ex-proprietary tenancy could not be acquired—Vide Section 26 (9) of the Tenancy Act—and the other being khudkast at the time of transfer ex-proprietary tenancy had accrued to M. M preferred a third appeal and R the respondent a cross-objection.

Held,: The decision against R in second appeal does not offend any specified law or usage or custom having the force of law and, therefore, it cannot be challenged in a third appeal even by way of cross-objection. (Vide Section 213, Land Revenue Act). Nor the decision that the other plot was grove land, accepting the finding of the Collector in appeal is appealable in third appeal as there is no question of offending any usage or custom having the force of law.

'Considerable portion' in the definition of 'Grove land' in Section 3 (3). Tenancy Act, does not necessarily mean major portion. 1951 AWR (Rev) 205: 1951 RD 228.

——S. 3 — "Considerable portion" — Meaning of.

"Considerable portion" does not necessarily mean major portion. The word "considerable" indicates that the nature and the location of the trees are also to be considered to arrive at a conclusion whether they preclude, or when full grown will preclude, the entire land or any considerable portion thereof from being used primarily for any other purpose. Crops may be grown even under the shade of the trees and the bulk of the land may be used for cultivation in this way. But it would not prevent the land being grove-land if the primary purpose is not cultivation. ('51) 1951 RD 228: 1951 All WR (Rev) 205.

——S. 3 — Grove-land — Complete absence of cultivation, if contemplated.

The definition of grove-land does not contemplate complete absence of cultivation. Therefore, the presence of certain crops in whole or in any portion of the land cannot prevent the land from being grove-land if the primary use is for the purpose of growing trees. ('51) 1951 RD 228: 1951 All WR (Rev) 205.

3. Holding.

——S. 3 (7) — 'Holding' — Definition must be understood as subject to anything repugnant in the subject or context — The word 'holding' has to be understood in a broad sense — In case of trespasser the word 'holding' means the land previously occupied by him. Kedar Nath v. Jamuna, 1964 All WR (HC) 219: 1964 All LJ 442: ILR (1964) 2 All 398: AIR 1965 All 116 (118) (Pt B) (Pr 8) (FB).

——S. 3 (7) — Word "Land" in U. P. Act (1 of 1951) has been used not as synonym for "Holding" but to distinguish it from "holding" as defined in U. P. Tenancy Act (17 of 1939), Section 3 (7). See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act (1 of 1951), Section 134. 1964 All LJ 1017.

4. Improvements.

——Ss. 3 (7) (8) (c) and 10 — Application for reinstatement by tenant evicted under S. 171 of the U. P. Tenancy Act — House standing on the land at the time of eviction — Land not converted into Abadi — Reinstatement over the area covered by the House also. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy (Amendment) Act (10 of 1947), S. 27 (1). ('52) 1952 RD (BR) 241.

5. Khudkashta.

——S. 3 (a) — Khudkashta Rights — Source of — Cultivatory possession and not possession over proprietary rights can be source of khudkashta rights — Only that co-proprietor who is in cultivatory possession becomes khudkashta holder — Possession over proprietary rights by itself does not confer khudkashta holders rights. 6. Land.

——S. 3 (10) — Bhumidhari right — Lessees of land, which was never used for growing of crops or for purposes of agricultural or animal husbandry are not competent to apply under S. 6 for obtaining bhumidhari rights inasmuch as they are not tenants of land within meaning of Section 3 — Sanad granted to such persons, held, as a nullity and unenforceable at law. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Agricultural Tenants (Acquisition of Privileges) Act (10 of 1949), Section 3. 1965 All LJ 654: 1965 All WR (HC) 429.

——S. 3 (10) — Occupancy tenancy — Lease giving right to lessee to use land as the liked and for purposes of building houses etc. — Benefit of Section 33 (1). See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (17 of 1939), Section 33. AIR 1955 NUC (All) 2686 (DB).

——S. 3 (10) — Reinstatement — Holding — Portion — Converted to Abadi — Not "land" — Excepted. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy (Amendment) Act (10 of 1947), Section 27 (3) and (4). ('52) 1952 RD (BR) 150.

——S. 3 (10) — Tenant ejected — Application for reinstatement — Holding let out by Zamindar to objector primarily for cultivation — Also for planting trees and building houses — Trees planted, well constructed, a house under construction — Continues to be land as defined in S. 3 (10) — Liability to pay compensation for improvements. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy (Amendment) Act (10 of 1947), Section 27 (3) and (4). ('52) 1952 All LJ (Rev) 102.

——Ss. 3 (10) and 94 — Land let out for building purposes — Right of lambardar to realize rent.

The powers of a lambardar to act on behalf of the co-sharers are confined, under the U. P. Tenancy Act, to 'land' as defined under that Act. A lambardar has no right to act on behalf of the proprietary body owning the land which is let out or held for building purposes and which ceases to be land as defined in the U. P. Tenancy Act. Therefore, in such a case the right to realise rent cannot vest in the lambardar. ('51) 1951 AWR HC 84.

7. Landholder.

——S. 3 (11) — Definition of "Landholder" is applicable to U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act — Sirdar and bhumidhar are included in definition. 1964 All LJ 910: ILR (1965) 1 All 309.

——S. 3 — 'Landholder, in Section 183 — Suit for possession by tenant against co-sharers not entitled to eject — Whole body of cosharers would constitute the "landholder" and any one of the co-sharers cannot claim to be landholder as he is not person to whom the rent is payable — A suit for possession against some of the co-sharers woulld not lie under Section 183. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (17 of 1939), Section 183. AIR 1955 NUC (All) 4161 (DB).

8. Landlord.

——S. 3 (12) — 'Landlord' does not include lambardar — Notice has to be sent to co-sharer landlords — There is no discretion. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Land Utilisation Act (5 of 1948), Section 3. AIR 1955 NUC (All) 2647 (DB).

9. Registered.

——Ss. 3 (17) and 57—Lease attested under Section 57 when takes effect — Registration Act (1908), Section 47.

The definition of the word 'registered' in Section 3 (17), U. P. Tenancy Act includes attestation under Section 57 of that Act. Hence, the principle of Section 47, Registration Act, would apply to a lease duly attested under Section 57, U. P. Tenancy Act and the lease would take effect from the date of its execution and would prevail over a perpetual lease executed subsequent to the date of its execution. AIR 1951 All 622 (622, 623) (Pra 2, 3) (DB).

10. Rent.

——S. 3 (18) — Occupancy tenancy — Lease giving right to lessee to use land as he liked and for purposes of building house etc. — Benefit of Section 33 (1) — Held, that it was not land as defined in the Act and the sum payable by him was not rent. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (17 of 1939), Section 33. AIR 1955 NUC (All) 2686 (DB).

——S. 3 (18) — Requm sewai if cess or rent.

There can be no hard and fast rule that requm sewai must in all cases be regarded as a cess. It may, however, be said that where an agreement to pay a sum (whether it be in cash or in kind) is intended by the parties to constitute recompense to the landlord for the use and occupation of agricultural land by a tenant, it would constitute 'rent' notwithstanding that it is called by the parties by a different name. ('50) 1950 AWR 693: ILR (1951) All 656 (DB).

11. Sub-tenant.

——Ss. 3 (22) and 192 — Retrospective effect, if any — Holder of land from a rent-free grantee under Oudh Rent Act — Difference between Agra Tenancy Act and oudh Rent Act — If becomes a sub-tenant under U. P. Tenancy Act.

The Assistant Collector decreed the suit by P under Section 59/183 of the U. P. Tenancy Act; it was set aside by the Additional Commissioner in appeal holding that P was only a sub-tenant as holding the land from a rent-free grantee under Section 3 (22) of the U. P. Tenancy Act until rent is fixed on the land held rent-free under Section 192. Second appeal under Section 267, U. P. Act was preferred.

Held,: No doubt a person holding land under a rent-free grantee, as P was is only a sub-tenant under Section 3 (22) and he becomes a hereditary tenant only when the rent or revenue is fixed on the rent-free grant. But under the Oudh Reet Act, P was a statutory tenant and not a sub-tenant as in Agra Tenancy Act. Section 6 (c) of U. P. General Clauses Act saves the rights of P and U. P. Tenancy Act is not retrospective to affect the rights acquired under the Oudh Act prior to the passing of the U. P. Tenancy Act. The statutory tenant becomes a hereditary tenant unde S. 29 (a), U. P. Tenancy Act. 1952 ALJ (Rev) 308 (2).

——Ss. 3 (22), 3 (23), 175 — Tenant of maufidar — Position of — Liability of ejectment.

The actual payment of rent was not the test of tenancy under Section 3 (10) of the Oudh Rent Act. All that was necessary under that Act was the existence of a potential liability for payment. The present definition of 'tenant' in Section 3 (23) of the U. P. Tenancy Act contains the same conception in clearer language and further, Section 3 (22) expressly includes persons holding land from rent-free grantees within the definition of a sub-tenant. Under the Oudh Rent Act, a rent free maufi holder was never immune from the liability for fixation of rent in view of Section 107-A. A maufidar must, therefore, be regarded as being a tenant before the passing of the Act (17 of 1939), and having acquired the rights of hereditary tenant under Section 29-A of the new Act. In this view a person holding under him is only a sub-tenant and is liabile to be ejected under Section 175 as a non-occupancy tenant. Case law reviewed. ('51) 1951 All WR (HC) 643 (DB).

●——S. 3 (23) — Tenant includes sub-tenant — AIR 1947 Oudh 104 (FB), Overruled.

A sub-tenant would be included within the meaning of the word "tenant" for the purposes of the Act unless a contrary intention appears from the context where the word is used. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (17 of 1939), Section 180 (before amended in 1947). AIR 1958 All 403 (FB).

——Ss. 3 (23), 242 and 288 — Question in civil suit whether party is grove holder — Power to refer issue.

The definition of "tenant" contained in Section 3 would show that unless there is some other provision in the U. P. Tenancy Act which has the effect of conferring upon a grove-holder the same status as a tenant, he would not be regarded as a tenant, and his rights could not be the same as the right of a tenant. The rights and liabilities of grove-holders are set out in Section 206 of the Tenancy Act and sub-sections (e) and (f) thereof make certain provisions of the U. P. Tenancy Act applicable to him as if he were a tenant. In neither of these two sections is there any reference to Section 288. All that those sub-sections say is that for matters covered by the specific section mentioned therein a grove-holder is to be regarded as a tenant. In other words, he is to be regarded as a tenant for the limited purposes stated therein and no other. It is obvious therefore, that when one of the issues in a suit is whether a party is a grove-holder or not the Civil Court cannot refer that to the revenue Court, but must decide the same itself. ——S. 3 (23) — Occupancy tenancy — Lease giving right to lessee to use land as he liked and for purposes of building house, etc.—Benefit of Section 33 (1) — Held, that it was not 'land' as defined in the U. ——S. 4 — Occupancy tenancy — Lease giving right to lessee to use land as he liked and for purposes of building house, etc. — Benefit of Section 33 (1). See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (17 of 1939), Section 33. AIR 1955 NUC (All) 2686 (DB).

——S. 4 — Agreement not to claim commutation under Section 113 — Void under Section 4 for it is the tenant's right to have the rent commuted under S. 113, which is sought to be prevented by the agreement. See U. P. Tenancy Act, Section 113. 1952 RD 189: 1952 ALJ (Rev) 225.

——Ss. 4 and 113 — Agreement not to commute rent — Agreement is void — Decision to contrary cannot operate as res judicata — (Civil P. C. (1908), Section 11).

Principle of res judicata is only a form of estoppel and there can be no estoppel against a statute. An agreement that the rent of the land would never be commuted from grain to cash is mainfestly void under Section 4 of the U. P. Tenancy Act. For under Section 113 it is tenant's right to get grain rent commuted into cash and the Court shall decree the suit if the tenant sues for commutation. No option is left to the Court to refuse commutation. Therefore, no agreement in contravention of the provisions of Section 113 is enforceable in law and any decision to the contrary cannot operate as res judicata. ('52) 1952 RD (BR) 189.

——S. 4 — Section 11 is not exhaustive — Creation of perpetual lessee's right in sir — A perpetual lease of sir land is perfectly valid and enforceable under Section 4 (4). See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (1939), Section 11. ('52) 1952 RD (BR) 71 (DB).

——S. 4 (1) — Scope and applicability.

The scope of Section 4 (1) of the U. P. Tenancy Act is not restricted to agreements between land-holders and tenants only but extends also to agreements between tenants themselves. Hence, the rights of division in a joint holding secured to a tenant by Section 49 of the Tenancy Act cannot be opted out of by one co-tenant permanently and any agreement that purports to restrict him in enforcing that right should be held to be void under Section 4 (1) of the Act. 1951 AWR (Rev) 136: 1951 RD 69.

——Ss. 4, 180 — Mortgage of sir plots— Acquisition of exproprietary rights.

One G mortgaged his sir plots and transferred the actual possession to the mortgagee without claiming exproprietary rights. The mortgagee also held a proprietary share in the mahal in which the plots lay and the entry in the village records was made as a proprietor's Khudkasht and not mortgagee's khudkasht when the mortgagee sold his proprietary rights the land in dispute, as it was declared sir, was carved out into an exproprietary holding of the mortgagee. After redemption the mortgagor came into possession.

Held, that the entry made in the record in favour of the mortgagee was incorrect and declaration of exproprietary rights in his favour on sale of his rights was clearly illegal. The declaration was not binding on G. The latter regained possession on redemption on specific plots and was entitled to cultivate them as proprietor thereof and the mortgagee could not question G's lawful occupation on the ground that the other co-sharer's consent was needed for this occupation. 1941 RD 864 and 1940 RD 150, Disting.; 1938 RD 391, Rel. on. ('51) 1951 RD 115.

——S. 4 (4) — Agreement relating to transfer of zamindar's proprietary rights is valid but if it is intended to transfer tenancy rights, it would be void — If it is intended to confer occupancy right, S. 4 (4) has no application. ('51) 1951 RD 236: 1951 All WR (Rev) 218.

——S. 5 — Agent — Karinda if agent.

The very word 'karinda' in the common parlance means a person who simply carries on work from day to day; while mukhtar-i-am means a person to whom some power or authority has been delegated by a person appointing him as his agent. The mere fact that a person supervises the cultivation of the Zamindar, collects rents on his behalf from his tenants or even accepts surrenders of land from them does not necessarily mean that the Zamindar has given him the authority to settle land with tenants, enhance their rents or eject them from their holdings. Any tenant taking land from any person on behalf of the Zamindar must find out whether that person has or has not the authority of the Zamindar to settle that land with anybody. If he does not take even this ordinary precaution, he must suffer the consequences. ('51) 1951 RD 181: 1951 All WR (Rev) 179.

——Ss. 5, 45 (f), 183 — Right barred by limitation prior to coming into force of Act — No revival of right — Suit under S. 183 does not lie.

Where the right of a tenant to recover possession is extinguished under Section 38 (1) (f) of the Agra Tenancy Act before the U. P. Tenancy Act, 1939, came into force which repeals the same provision in its Section 45 (f), there is no provision in the latter Act which can revive the tenant's right and hence no suit lies under S. 183 for recovery of possession. 1951 All WR (Rev) 58.

——Ss. 6 and 9 — Nature and accrual of Sir right.

The right of a Sir holder is a personal right, acquired in certain circumstances mentioned in the definition of Sir in Section 6. It is not a right which can accrue except on a gift to a donee of the proprietary right or on exchange. The transferee from a Sir holder's cannot acquire any Sir rights in the plots transferred. 1951 AWR (HC) 228: 1951 ALJ 459: AIR 1952 All 308 (308, 309) (Pt A) (Pr 6).

——S. 9 — Landlord and Tenant — Sir plots — Transfer (Muhammadan Law — Sharers). Transfer of joint Sir plots by Muhammadan widow — She not obtaining possession of ex-proprietary rights in such plots over six months — Share of the widow ceased to be Sir and became khalsa land over which the transferees could remain in possession only as khudkasht holders — Other heirs were entitled to joint possession along with the transferees over the entire Sir plots with a right to have their shares demarcated in the revenue Court. 1953 All WR (HC) 192: 1953 All LJ 271: AIR 1953 All 522 (523) (Pr 6).

●——Ss. 10, 16, 20 — Applicability to persons who are not tenants.

Sections 10, 16 and 20 of the U. P. Tenancy Act presuppose that the person claiming rights thereunder is a tenant, and when the Court finds that the parties are not tenants, there is no scope for invoking the said provision. 1959 All WR (HC) 440: 1959 All LJ 557: 1959 All Cr R 337: 1959 Cri LJ 1223: (1959) Supp (2) SCR 798: 1960 SCJ 892: AIR 1959 SC 960 (963) (Pt B) (Pr 9).

——S. 10 — Void mortgage — Mortgagor's right to recover possession on payment of money — Claim in respect of exproprietary tenancy and occupancy tenancy land — Jurisdiction of Civil Court — It cannot be contended that the claim being for recovery of possession of an under-proprietary tenancy land and occupancy tenancy land, the Civil Court has no jurisdiction — The Court in granting relief adjusts equities between the parties and this can be done only by the Civil Court and not Revenue Court — Sections 59, 10 and 182 of the Tenancy Act have, therefore, no application to the case. See Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 60. AIR 1956 All 639.

——S. 11 — Co-sharers partitioning Sir plots as between themselves — Widow of one transferring plots — Sir rights, if pass on to the surviving co-sharer.

Where after a complete partition of the Sir plots between the two co-sharers each has been accepted as the exclusive owner of the Sir plots in his sole occupation, and on the death of one of the co-sharers his widow transfers the plots in her husband's possession it cannot be regarded as a transfer by a 'joint Sir holder' with the result that Sir rights would not pass on to the other co-sharer. 1951 AWR (HC) 228: 1951 ALJ 459: AIR 1952 All 308 (308, 309) (Pt A) (Pr 6).

——Ss. 11 and 26— Ex-proprietary rights under S. 10 of the Agra Tenancy Act, 1901 — Not claimed within the period — Effect — Distinction between the Acts of 1901 and 1926 —Land alleged to be let by mortgagee on the eve of redemption — Tenancy rights if acquired by lessee.

Sir land was mortgaged with possession by the proprietor prior to 1926 Act. The mortgagee was in possession of the land keeping it under her own cultivation for about 20 years. Suit for redemption was filed in July, 1944 and redemption allowed. The suit for a declaration under Section 59 of the U. P. Tenancy Act, 1939, on the allegation that the land was settled with the plaintiff's by the mortgagee under an unregistered lease dated 22nd October 1943 was dismissed by the Collector and the Additional Commissioner in appeal decreed the suit. The mortgagor appealed therefrom.

Held: The land lost its character of sir as the mortgagor did not exercise his rights of ex-proprietary tenancy under Section 10 of the Agra Tenancy Act, 1901, therein; the land became khalsa and sir right could not revive on redemption as there was no provision in the Act corresponding to sub-section (5) of S. 15 of the Agra Tenancy Act, 1926.

But in the circumstances of the case the conclusion of the trial Court that the alleged lease on the eve of redemption to the plaintiffs-respondents was not in the usual course of prudent management of the property but to prevent the land from passing to mortgagor on redemption without encumbrance was fully justified; no tenancy rights were acquired by them. 1952 RD 203: 1952 ALJ (Rev) 226.

——Ss. 11 and 26 — Usufructuary mortgage of Sir plots before Agra Tenancy Act (3 of 1926) came into force — Exproprietor not claiming within or continuing in possession of sir plots for six months from date of transfer — Exproprietary rights held were extinguished and land became khalsa and sir rights could not revive subsequently on redemption — Fact that mortgagee kept the land under his own cultivation until it was let to some other person held would not change nature of land. ('52) 1952 RD (BR) 203.

——Ss. 11, 29 and 180 — Mortgagee of Sir land letting it to plaintiff not in usual course of prudent management of property but when redemption suit is pending or in any case imminent to prevent land passing to mortgagor without encumbrance — Plaintiff acquires no tenancy rights which can enure after redemption — Plaintiff is a mere trespasser who can be ejected by mortgagor after redemption — (T. P. Act (1882), S. 76 (a)). ('52) 1952 RD (BR) 203.

——Ss. 11 and 29 — Plaintiffs claiming to be occupancy tenants of sir plots under permanent lease executed in favour of their ancestor — Contesting defendants failing to produce evidence whatsoever regarding any subsequent settlement of land with plaintiffs on present recorded rent — Plaintiffs held were in law hereditary tenants with special rights in accordance with perpetual lease and not non-occupancy tenants — Present entries regarding plaintiffs' status and rent held wrong. ('52) 1952 RD (BR) 182.

——Ss. 11 and 4 — Section 11 not exhaustive — Creation of perpetual lessee's right in sir.

Section 11 of the U. P. Tenancy Act is by no means exhaustive as regards the ways in which sir rights may be extinguished. There is nothing to prevent a landholder from conferring a perpetual lessee's rights in his sir land on a tenant. A perpetual lease of sir land is perfectly valid and enforceable under sub-section (4) of section 4 of the Act. ('52) 1952 All LJ (Rev) 47: 1952 All WR (Rev) 73: 1952 RD (BR) 71.

——Ss. 11 and 180 — Mortgagee of Sir plots admitting tenant — Status and rights of such a tenant on redemption.

It is not correct to think that a tenant admitted by a mortgagee of Sir plots becomes a tenant of Sir land. He is a tenant of the land in possession of the mortgagee and when on redemption Sir rights revive, it would be wrong to deprive a Sir holder of the rights of possession by holding that such a person, admitted by the mortgagee was a tenant of Sir lands, whom the redeemer was bound to recognize. The mortgagee has only a right to keep this land with himself or settle it with some one for that period. If the tenant remained in possession for more than 12 years, and if the Sir right could not revive, only in that case would be Sir holder lose his right. In other cases the tenant is liable to ejectment as trespasser on redemption. 1951 RD 100: 1951 AWR (Rev) 115.

——S. 11 — Joint Sir — Rights of co-sharers inter se — Transfer by mortgage of proprietary rights by some without claiming ex-proprietary rights — Effect — Mortgagor's right to recover Sir on redemption.

Where Sir is jointly held by a number of co-sharers their interests extend to every part of it and if some of the co-sharers transfer their proprietary interests and do not claim ex-proprietary rights or get the area to which their rights extend demarcated, the Sir character of the whole Sir is retained and it remains the Sir of the co-sharer or cosharers who have not transferred their share or shares. Sir jointly held shall only cease to be Sir when and if joint Sir holders get their shares demarcated out by formal proceedings and to that extent only, otherwise the whole land retains its character of Sir. As the rights of each Sir holder extend to every inch of it, there is no reason why a mortgage of his share by one of them should put an end to the rights of the remaining co-sharers.

It follows that a mortgagor co-sharer who has failed to claim ex-proprietary rights cannot recover his Sir rights on redemption if he does not get the relevant area demarcated. 1951 AWR (Rev) 127: 1951 RD 94 (2).

——S. 26 — Exproprietary right — How and when arises — Claim for such rights — If and when necessary.

Exproprietary right accrue to a proprietor in his Sir land automatically as he transfers his proprietary rights and in case even after the transfer, the proprietor continues in possession of the land, his exproprietary rights cannot get extinguished. It is only in those cases where the person acquiring exproprietary rights is out of possession that it is necessary for him to put in a claim in respect of his exproprietary rights. 1952 AWR (HC) 55: AIR 1953 All 508 (509) (Pr 4).

——S. 26 (5) — Ex-proprietary tenancy— Fixation of rent — Power of Collector — (U. P. Land Revenue Act (3 of 1801), S. 36).

Where an ex-proprietary tenancy has been specified or demarcated already or where it does not require specification or demarcation the rent can be fixed vide Section 26 (5) of the Act by the Collector who is the officer empowered to do so under Section 36 of the U. P. Land Revenue Act. Where the applicant claims possession and that is admitted by the other Sir and Khudkasht holders and the applicant's prayer is only that he should be recorded as exproprietary tenant and the rent fixed thereon. no question of specification or demaration of the land in which exproprietary right has accrued arises and the Collector can therefore fix the rent under Section 26 (5) of the Act. 1952 RD (BR) 367: 1952 All WR (Rev) 233: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 252.

——S. 26 — Exproprietary rights — Mortgage of Sir land — S. 7-A of Oudh Rent Act — Sir rights subsist and revive on redemption — Property in possession of transferee at the time of redemption — Accrual of rights.

In the case of a mortgage of sir land the sir rights subsisted under Section 7-A of the Oudh Rent Act so long as the mortgagee remained in possession and the rights revived on redemption. Hence ex-proprietary rights arose if, at the time of redemption the proprietary and under-proprietary rights of the sir holder are in the possession of a transferee. 1952 AWR (Rev) 130: 1952 RD 321: 1952 ALJ (Rev) 207.

Khudkasht rights are not transferable and on the transfer of proprietary rights, the transferee cannot tack on the period of Khudkasht of his transferor even if he gets into possession and so if he in turn makes a voluntary transfer of his proprietary share within three years he cannot claim ex-proprietary rights. 1951 AWR (Rev) 161: 1951 RD 121.

——S. 29 (a) — Scope — Agricultural lease not protected by S. 76 (a), T. P. Act — Acquisition of — Rights of hereditary tenant under — (T. P. Act (1882), S. 76 (a)).

The true scope of sub-section (a) of S. 29 is that it posits that there is on the date of the commencement of the Act a person who is lawfully a tenant and proceeds to confer on him certain rights. Where, however, the person who purports to grant the lease has no authority to do so, whatever the rights inter se between the lessor and the lessee, as against the true owner the latter does not, in law, acquire the status of a tenant, and Section 29 (a) has no application to him. But where the transaction is not one which could be upheld under Section 76 (a), then there is no admission of tenant by any person having authority to do so, and such a transaction though valid as between the mortgagee and the lessee, cannot form the foundation on which any rights under Section 29, subsection (a) of the Act could be based. ——Ss. 29, 3 (23) — Trespasser — Oudh Rent Act (27 of 1886), S. 127).

Every person who was at the commencement of the U. P. Tenancy Act of 1939, that is, on the 1st January, 1940, a tenant of land became a hereditary tenant.

A person taking or retaining possession of land without being entitled to such possession could become liable for rent under Section 127, Oudh Rent Act as it stood on 1st January, 1940, only after he had been treated as a tenant by the landlord. So long as that option was not exercised by the landlord that person in occupation could not be held liable for payment of rent, and so long as he was not liable under the law for payment of rent, he could not be covered by the definition of the word 'tenant' in Section 3 (23) of this Act. The fact that the person was in possession of the land even before Section 127, Oudh Rent Act, was amended in 1921 would not affect the result since even before the amendment the section by implication, required the landlord to recognize a person as a tenant, before he could be made liable for rent, and the amendment of 1921 only amplified this implication in explicit terms. 1954 All WR (HC) 16: 1954 All LJ 149: AIR 1954 All 359 (359, 360) (Prs 6, 7, 8).

——S. 29, Explanation — Holder of Sir lands — Wakf by him — Lease to sons — Qabuliyat by N to S — Status of — Hereditary rights not acquired.

A Sir holder executed a wakf of his properties and constituted himself a Mutwalli. He then as Mutwalli leased the properties to his son S. S leased the same to N. S sued N for arrears of rent due under the qabuliyat executed by N. N raised the plea he was the tenant of the father of S and not of N and the suit was not maintainable.

Held, that S's father was the registered Sir holder as per the village records. N could not therefore, acquire tenancy rights in Sir lands. If the wakf is believed the father become the exproprietary tenant and N could not become hereditary tenant. In any view the lease to S cannot be held to be for preventing the acquisition of rights by N as contemplated by S. 29, Explanation.

Further N is estopped by S. 116, Evidence Act from challenging that the plaintiff is his landholder for the reason he had executed the qabuliyat when the transaction is not otherwise invalid in law, as offending S. 29, Explanation. 1952 ALJ (Rev) 329.

——S. 33 — Creation of tenancy — Person recorded as occupancy tenant in violation of law.

It is true that Section 33 of the U. P. Tenancy Act 1939 and Section 23 of the Agra Tenancy Act 1926 do not provide for all cases of co-tenancy and cases may arise in which a person becomes a co-tenant by estoppel but where a person is recorded as a co-tenant of the land in dispute in violation of the law it cannot inevitably lead to the conclusion that he has become a co-tenant. ('52) 1952 RD (BR) 199.

——S. 33 — Rights of co-tenancy— Person not a legal heir to the deceased tenant — Recorded as co-tenant — Joint institution of suit along with the real heir against the recorded sub-tenants — If rights accrued.

Where the plaintiff claimed one half of the holding in a suit under Section 49 of the U. P. Tenancy Act on the ground that he had succeeded to the same on the death of the previous tenant, he has been recorded as such, and that he had filed suit against the sub-tenants along with the legal successor or to the tenancy and the suit was decreed to the extent of a third share of the holding, a section appeal was filed against the same.

Held: Under Section 22 of the Agra Tenancy Act (2 of 1901) then in force, neither the daughter nor the husband can succeed to the holding acquired by the tenant deceased; it devolves not on the heirs under the personal law, but under the special line of succession provided under the section. The plaintiff whose name was wrongly entered as a co-tenant and as such was also joined as plaintiffs in the suit against sub-tenants in possession, as under law it should be done does not thereby acquire the rights to be a co-tenant. Though a co-tenancy can accrue outside the scope of Section 33 of the U. P. Tenancy Act or Section 22 of the Agra Tenancy Act by the principle of estoppel still on the facts of the case it has not accrued to the plaintiff; there can be no estoppel against statute. 1952 RD 199: 1952 ALJ (Rev) 290.

——S. 33 (2) — Power to recognize a co-tenant under — Agent of landlord having general power of attorney — Person recognized as co-tenant — If should attest the recognition.

An agent of the landlord possessing a general power of attorney must be presumed to have the power to recognize a co-tenant under sub-section (2) of Section 33. It is for the person denying the specific authority to prove that he has no such power.

The law does not require that the person recognized should attest the recognition. The absence of any such attestation cannot be raised as an objection by another co-tenant. 1951 RD 72: 1951 AWR (Rev) 55.

——S. 33 (2) — Co-tenancy — Admission to, by widow with the consent of the landholder — Effect.

The admission to co-tenancy even though with the consent of the landholder, by a life tenant of a widow will not survive after death. The extinction of the tenancy, however, will not prevent the landholder from allowing the co-tenant to continue in possession of the holding as tenant-in-chief with or without making a fresh admission and no body can challenge this right of the Zamindar except the rightful heir of the widow. 1951 RD 16: 1951 AWR (Rev) 15.

——S. 33, Proviso — Applicability— Parties who have become co-tenants by succession.

A fixed rate tenancy khata held under a permanent lease is heritable and transferable tenancy and, therefore, succession to it should be governed by personal law and, therefore, a daughter's son takes precedence over a brother.

Upon the death of an occupancy tenant, his daughter's son, who was in the womb of his mother at the death of his maternal grandfather, can inherit the latter's tenancy rights. The rule of general jurisprudence that a child in embryo at the death of the holder of a proprietary interest, if born alive after his death is deemed to be living at his death applies to Sections 38 and 45 and so also to S. 35. Irrational hardships would follow if that rule is excluded from the material provisions of the Act. Since the words of Sections 35, 38 and 45 are quite wide to admit of the application of the rule, the Court should prefer that rule to avoid hardships. 1956 All LJ 693 and 1963 All WR 354, Overruled. AIR 1954 SC 379, Rel. on. 1965 All LJ 1142: 1965 WR (HC) 755.

——Ss. 35, 36 — Succession under — Principles of Hindu Law — Not applicable — Legal personality does not commence until birth — Hindu Law — Succession — Unborn child — Status of.

The general rule seems to be that, legal personality does not commence until birth. The U. P. Tenancy Act lays down a special rule of succession, and the principles of Hindu Law cannot be made to govern the provisions of the U. P. Tenancy Act. Therefore where a person was in womb when a succession to tenancy opened, that circumstance would not invest him with a right of succession under Sections 35 and 36 of the U. P. Tenancy Act. 1956 AWR (HC) 752, Rel. on. 1963 All WR (HC) 354: ILR (1963) 2 All 572.

——S. 35 (a), Proviso — Scope — Law laid down by the proviso.

The proviso to Section 35 (a) of the Tenancy Act only embodies the principle laid down by the decisions of the Board in 1935 RD 424 and 1936 RD 568 that the grandson of a deceased tenant would not succeed along with his father to a holding left by his grandfather and so long as the father is alive he has no vested interest but only a contingent interest and it does not lay down the rule of Hindu Law that an uncle would exclude the nephew. 1951 All WR (Rev) 202: 1951 RD 187.

A sister's son is no heir under S. 35 of the U. P. Tenancy Act. 1951 AWR (Rev) 65: 1951 RD 42.

——Ss. 35, 36 and 45 (a) — Succession to tenancy — Daughter's son in the womb when succession opened — Right to succeed — Tenancy rights if extinguished under S. 45 (a).

It is true that inheritance cannot remain in abeyance in expectation of the birth of an heir but in the case of Hindu this doctrine applies only where an heir was not conceived at the time when succession opened. This rule of Hindu law entitling a son in the womb to inherit is not inconsistent with the devolution of tenancy rights under Sections 35 and 36 of the Tenancy Act and so a daughter's son who though not born when the tenancy opened for succession but who had been conceived at that time would be a rightful heir and successor to his mother's father's tenancy. In such a case there is no extinguishment of tenancy rights under S. 45 (a) of the Tenancy Act, the succession remaining in abeyance till the birth of the daughter's son. 1951 AWR (Rev) 120: 1951 RD 67.

——Ss. 35, 36 —Admission to co-tenancy by life-tenant.

A person cannot confer on another any right higher than what he or she possesses and the admission to co-tenancy, even though with the consent of the landholder, by a life tenant, a widow will not survive after her death. Extinction of the tenancy, however, will not prevent the landholder from allowing the co-tenant to continue in possession of the holding as a tenant in-chief with or without making a fresh admission and no third person can challenge this right of zamindar except a rightful heir of the widow under the U. Section 36 applies when a female tenant (other than a tenant mentioned in Section 34) held the property in her capacity as a widow or other female mentioned in the section. It does not apply to the case of a female holding a tenancy in her own right. Succession to a female tenant holding a tenancy in her own right is governed by Section 37. 1953 All LJ 516: 1953 All WR (HC) 523: AIR 1954 All 70 (70, 71) (Pr 4).

—Ss. 36, 37 — Succession to holding as widow.

In order to find out whether the woman succeeded to an interest in the land in suit as a widow, one has to go back to the law as it stood on the date when the husband died and the succession opened. Held, that the law, as it applied when the husband died (Avadh Rent Act (1886)) granted no tenancy rights to the widow in the land of which the husband had been the tenant and the execution of the new lease in her favour was that the conferment of new rights of tenancy on her. Consequently, S. 36 was not applicable and the succession must be governed by Section 37. 1953 All WR (HC) 502: 1953 All LJ 569: AIR 1954 All 66 (66) (Pr 3).

—Ss. 36 and 35 — Section 36 applies only where widow inherits as a widow of her deceased husband— It has no application where she is in possession in her own right under a fresh contract and not as widow of her husband — In such a case upon her death tenancy does not devolve in order of succession laid down in Section 35 on heir of last male tenant. ('51) ILR (1951) 2 All 28 (35): AIR 1953 All 256 (257) (Pr 6) (DB).

—Ss. 36, 37 — Scope — Widow, meaning of — Widow of a pre-deceased son succeeding to a statutory tenant — Subsequent surrender by her in favour of her daughter's son — Succession is governed by S. 36 and not by S. 37. 1952 All LJ 370: AIR 1953 All 48 (49) (Prs 5, 6) (DB).

—S. 36 — Applicability — Ordinary tenant under Oudh Rent Act (22 of 1886 as amended in 1921) is entitled to remain in possession for seven years from date when tenancy began — After that, it ceases to exist — Death before seven years — His heir (widow) remaining in possession for unexpired portion — No question of renewal — Widow's right ceasing in 1901 — Widow, however, continuing in possession and landlord accepting rent — Widow's possession after 1901 is in her own right — Oudh Rent Amending Act 4 of 1921 coming into force — Death of widow in 1939 — S. 48 as amended in 1921 applies and the widow had become statutory tenant when she died — After her death, it is her heir and not the heir of her husband who was ordinary tenant under Act 22 of 1886. who is entitled to remain in occupation — Sections 36, 37, U. P. Tenancy Act (17 of 1939) which came into force on 1-1-1940 have no application. See Tenancy Laws — Oudh Rent Act (1886) (as amended by Act 4 of 1921), S. 48. AIR 1952 All 854 (DB).

—S. 36 — Applicability — Death of the statutory tenant before 1914 in Oudh — Tenancy succeeded by his widow — Surrender of tenancy in 1950 —Succession under the section —Daughter's son in preference to brother's son of the husband.

W came into possession of the tenancy plots as the widow of the deceased tenant T prior to 1914 (under Section 48 of the Avadh Rent Act). She surrendered the holding in 1950 and the plots were settled on K found to be the daughter's son of T. R and another brother's sons of T claimed to be in possession and entitled to it under Section 36 Tenancy Act.

Held: K's right to the plots in question cannot be maintained as the heir to the widow because W succeeded to the property as the widow of the deceased T and not in her own right.

The contention of R that the succession on the surrender by W is governed by Section 36 and therefore, Section 36 applies is no doubt correct. But K being the daughter's son is to be preferred to the brother's sons of the last male tenant. 1952 ALJ (Rev) 232.

—S. 36 — Oudh Rent Act, S. 48 — Widow coming into possession of holding as such — Oudh Rent Act in force — Possession for more than 8 years before U. P. Tenancy Act — Widow, if entitled in her own right as hereditary tenant — Admission under O. 10, C. P. Code — Conclusive for that proceeding.

The suit by a widow under Section 183 of U. P. Tenancy Act was decreed by the trial Court; she had succeeded, as heir to her husband, to the holding under Section 48 of the Oudh Rent Act in 1930 and she had remarried 12 years before suit which remarriage did not extinguish her rights. But on appeal the Additional Commissioner dismissed the suit holding she had remarried two years before suit and had thereby extinguished her rights in the holding (of her former husband) under Section 36 of the U. P. Act.

She had also stated under O. 10, Civil P. C. that she got herself remarried two years before suit and had filed an application during trial that it was by inadvertence and really she remarried 12 years prior to suit; but no order was passed on the application. She preferred a second appeal.

Held: Her possession of the holding for 8 years prior to the U. P. Act had not resulted in the acquisition of the hereditary tenancy in her own right; but having succeeded to the holding as heir of her former husband Section 36 of the U. P. Tenancy Act is applicable and she had lost her right to the holding by her remarriage after the said Act and 2 years prior to suit.

She could not contend against the admission made by her under O. 10, Civil P. C., that she had remarried 2 years before suit; a statement under Order 10, C. P. Code, is not an admission relevant under Section 3 of the Evidence Act but is a part of the pleadings and is conclusive and no more evidence need be adduced to prove it. Any finding contrary to such admission by the trial Court was outside its jurisdiction. 1952 ALJ (Rev) 205.

——Ss. 36 and 37 — Scope of — Female inheriting tenancy from her husband — Re-marriage — Effect on succession.

It is only when a female tenant acquires tenancy rights which do not have their origin in inheritance that the case can be taken out of the ambit of Section 36 and be governed by Section 37. Case law referred to.

Thus where a female tenant inherits the tenancy of her husband and her interest is revived by the landlord after her re-marriage, succession to her is governed by Section 36 as her interest had originated from her first husband and the heirs of the first husband and not those of the second are entitled to succeed. ('52) 1952 RD (BR) 59: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 27: 1952 AWR (Rev) 175.

The provisions of Cl. (b) of S. 45 contemplate ejectment of a tenant under a decree which has become final not merely in the sense that it is effective and liable to be obeyed but in the sense that it is no more open to being set aside by a superior Court. So long as it is open to be set aside, any ejectment of a tenant in execution of that decree will not lead to the extinction of his tenancy though it leads to his being dispossessed of the land in suit. And such a tenant against whom a decree for ejectment is made and executed but against which decree an appeal is pending cannot be said to have lost his subtenancy status by the time the U. P. SECTION 49

(Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (1939), S. 49.)

1. Division of holding — Suit for.
2. Necessary parties.
3. Nature of final decree.
4. Settlement of record — Evidentiary value of.
5. Appeal.

1. Division of holding — Suit for.

——S. 49 — Division of holding — No written consent of landholder — Binding nature as between tenants inter se.

The suit under S. 183 of the U. P. Tenancy Act was filed by a person who at one time was a co-tenant with the defendants on the allegation that he was the tenant entitled to the suit plots allotted to his share on partition in pursuance of a decree in a suit for division of the holding under S. 37 of Act 3 of 1926; it was contested by the defendants on the ground that the landlord had taken delivery of the properties in proceedings under S. 163 of the Act and subsequently let it to the defendants. But finally in the said proceedings the parties to this suit and others had taken redelivery of the entire holding the subject-matter of the suit for partition under S. 37 aforesaid.

Held, that status quo was restored by the redelivery and as between the tenants inter se the parties were bound by the prior division though the landholder might not be bound because of the want of consent and the suit plots having been allotted to the plaintiff he was entitled to a decree. 1952 ALJ (Rev) 200.

——S. 49 — Division of holding — Suit for — Paper entries — Presumptions — Estoppel — If created.

Mere paper entries without proof of possession or title cannot create an estoppel. 1952 RD 142: 1952 ALJ (Rev) 121: 1952 AWR (Rev) 104.

——S. 49 — Suit for division of holding — Co-tenancy existence — Necessary — 12 years rule of limitation — When applies.

Suit by plaintiff against defendant for division of a holding once recorded as held by them as co-tenants but recorded in the name of the defendant as the sole tenant after the "dakkal" through Court secured by the Zamindar in execution of a decree for arrears due by the parties jointly and severally. The Additional Commissioner in appeal set aside the decree in favour of the plaintiff holding that the 'decree' and 'dakkal' were perfectly legal and the 'co-tenancy was thereby determined and dismissed the suits.

Held, on second appeal, confirming the decree in appeal, the co-tenancy was legally determined on "dakkal" in 1940 secured by the landlord. Nothing is shown as payment of rent by the plaintiff subsequently or that he had been in possession of the holding or part thereof or any other facts for assuming that the co-tenancy continued in spite of the said proceedings. There is no warrant for the application of the rule of 12 years limitation where co-tenancy has not been proved to exist. 1952 ALJ (Rev) 104: 1952 RD 154.

——S. 49 — Division of holding between co-tenants inter se without Zamindar's consent — Effect — Zamindar not objecting to division for over 30 years — Presumption of acquiescence.

In the case of a division of a holding between co-tenants inter se without the Zamindar's consent, though because of the absence of such consent it may not bind the Zamindar or the tenants in their relation to him, it would be binding on the tenants inter se. Further, where the Zamindar does not object to the groups of fields as separate holdings for 30 years he will be presumed to have acquiesced in the division made by the co-tenants inter se. 1952 ALJ (Rev) 59: 1952 RD 97: 1952 AWR (Rev) 200.

——S. 49 — Claim to co-tenancy on the ground of land being ancestral — Essentials.

In order to entitle a party to claim co-tenancy in a holding on the ground of its being ancestral it is essential that the identity of the holding must have remained unchanged throughout the period. If the identity has changed by subdivision of the holding, the claim cannot succeed. 1952 RD 83: 1952 ALJ (Rev.) 45: 1952 AWR (Rev) 109.

——S. 49 — Right of division — Agreement between co-tenants not to enforce — Rights of division in a joint holding secured to a tenant by S. 49 of the Tenancy Act cannot be opted out by one co-tenant permanently — Any agreement that purports to restrict him from enforcing that right should be held to be void under S. 4 (1) of the Act. See U. P. Tenancy Act (17 of 1939), Ss. 4 (1) and 49. 1951 RD 69.

2. Necessary parties.

——S. 49 (2) — Suit under Tenancy Act — Necessary parties — Addition of Government as respondent in appeal. See Tenancy Laws — Banaras State Tenancy Act (3 of 1949), S. 32 (2). 1956 All LJ 760.

——S. 49 — Suit under — Minor plaintiff (the son of a co-tenant presumed to be dead) — Presumption under S. 108, Evidence Act — Zamindar — Necessary party — Not joined in appeal — Appeal abates.

As suit under S. 49, Tenancy Act by a minor represented his mother alleging that the father disappeared and was not heard of for over 7 years and the uncle had performed the death ceremonies of the father was decreed in spite of the objection of the co-tenants. Patwari had stated as a witness that he was heard of 5 years previously and he was a lunatic and died 4 or 5 years ago, in appeal the question of presumption as to death alone was argued and found against the objectors and the decree of the Court of 1st instance confirmed. Hence the second appal.

Held: The dead man's wife or any other near relation is the person "who would have naturally heard about him if he were alive" rather than the patwari. When she had stated he was not heard of as alive within 7 years the presumption of death arises.

Zamindar is a necessary party to the suit under S. 49. Though he was a party to the suit he had not been made a party to the first appeal or in the second appeal. The appeal had abated. 1952 ALJ (Rev) 324.

——S. 49 — Suit under — Appeal — Heirs of land-holder not brought on record within time on death of land-holder — If fatal.

In a suit under S. 49 of the U. P. Tenancy Act the land holder is a necessary party and the failure to implead on his death his heirs within time is a fatal defect. It cannot be cured by the heirs themselves applying for substitution of their names beyond time. 1952 RD 94: 1952 All WR (Rev) 165: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 231.

——S. 49 — Suit under — Appeal — Zamindar impleaded in trial Court not impleaded in appeal — Defect — If fatal.

In a suit under S. 49 of the U. P. Tenancy Act, the Zamindar's interest is in most cases concerned only with the division of rent. Though he may be a necessary party, if he has been impleaded in the suit and he is indifferent to the controversy about the shares between the tenants, a failure to implead him in the appeal is not fatal to the appeal. 1952 RD 64: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 35.

——S. 49 — Suit under S. 49 — Compromise — Landlord not party to compromise — Suit cannot be decreed under O. 23, R. 3, Civil P. C. — (Civil P. C. (1908), O. 23, R. 3). ('52) 1952 RD (BR) 253.

——S. 49 — Sub-tenancy — Suit for division by sub-tenant — Zamindar if necessary party.

A sub-tenant can maintain a suit for division of sub-tenancy holding against his co-tenant if he makes his landholder, who is the tenant-in-chief, a party. It is needless to say that the zamindar has no concern with this division among the sub-tenants, as it is an arrangement between the co-sub-tenants which does not go beyond the tenant-in-chief. Hence the zamindar is not a necessary party in such a suit. ('51) 1951 RD 184: 1951 All WR (Rev) 176.

3. Nature of final decree.

——S. 49 — Sch. 4, Group F, Serial 7 and Limitation Act (9 of 1908), Art. 181 — Final decree in a suit for division of holding — Nature of — Application for — Limitation.

The final decree in a suit for the division of a holding is not in the nature of execution of the preliminary decree but it is a part of the decree itself and the suit for division is not concluded until the final decree is passed. No application is necessary as it is the Court's duty to pass a final decree. Therefore, the period prescribed in Section 7 of Group F of Sch. 4 of the Tenancy Act or in Art. 181 of the Limitation Act is not applicable to a proceeding for making a final decree after a preliminary decree is passed. 1951 All WR (Rev) 107: 1951 RD 110.

4. Settlement record — Evidentiary value of.

——S. 49 — Decree in suit under— Actual division on the spot by the co-sharers — No entries as separate khatas in the village records — No delivery through Court — Whether separation of shares or no.

It is neither necessary that a decree for division should be followed by a formal delivery through Court; nor is it necessary that it should be followed by a record of separate khatas. What is necessary is that there should be an actual division on the spot between the co-tenants; the mistake of the Patwari in the manner of giving effect to the division in the village records will not affect the rights of parties. 1952 ALJ (Rev) 183: 1952 AWR (Rev) 173: 1952 RD 352.

On the contention by the defendants that their ancestor was shown in the land records as the only tenant and the plaintiffs had no right to any share of the holding which is sought to be partitioned in the suit under S. 49 of the Act.

Held, it was a common practice in the last century to enter in the land records only the name of the head of the joint Hindu family. 10 RD 121, Foll. 1952 RD 136: 1952 AWR (Rev) 99.

Held, that the brother who was the other respondent could not insist on the dismissal of the appeal as having abated when the present zamindar-lambardar whatever his motive might be, admitted the appellant's claim and the other co-sharers had made no objection. ('52) 1952 All LJ (Rev) 94: 1952 RD (BR) 89.

——Ss. 59 and 61 — Sir plots of the Zamindar and Sirdar of the village — Permanent lease to predecessor in title of plaintiff as a fixed rent — Nature of tenancy — Entry in patwari papers — Effect.

In a suit by plaintiffs under Ss. 59 and 61 of the Tenancy Act it was proved that they derived their title to the plots in dispute under a permanent lease at a fixed rent granted by the then zemindar and sir-holder. The defendants (respondents) had not proved any subsequent settlement of the land with them. The suit was decreed by the Collector; but Commissioner modified it declaring the plaintiffs as non-occupancy tenants at a rent of Rs. 9-5-4. The plaintiffs appealed to the Board.

Held: The entry in the patwari papers omitting the words 'Pattadar istimrar' was wrong and the plaintiffs held the land under the terms of the permanent lease at a fixed rent and not merely as non-occupancy tenants as declared by the Commissioner in the first appeal. 1952 RD 182: 1952 ALJ (Rev) 228.

——S. 59 — Plaintiff in adverse possession against tenant-in-chief — Becomes hereditary tenant — Non-mention in plaint of the fact of plaintiff perfecting his title by adverse possession — Effect. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (1939), S. 180. ('52) 1952 RD (BR) 172.

——Ss. 59 and 61 — Suit under — Previous decision of Civil Court upon tenancy rights — Res Judicata.

In a suit under Ss. 59 and 61, U. P. Tenancy Act, 1939, previous adjudication by Civil Court declaring rights as a tenant operates as res judicata as Civil Courts were competent under Act 18 of 1873 to decide the matter and it is not open to the parties actually represented in the Civil Suit to repudiate the decision merely because the zamindar was not a party to it. 3 All 83, Rel. on. ('52) 1952 RD (BR) 74: 1952 All WR (Rev) 69: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 30.

Where a suit under S. 59 of the Tenancy Act has been dismissed, the Zamindar respondent who has not been properly served is not entitled to ask for a restoration of the suit under S. 151, Civil P. C. 1951 All WR (Rev) 204: 1951 RD 207.

——S. 59 — Suit allegation of admission to tenancy by mortgagor prior to suit not proved — Plaintiff stating to have been in occupation during currency of mortgage — Admission to tenancy admittedly not by mortgagee — Plaintiff is only a trespasser. ('50) 1950 All WR Rev 72: 1950 RD 163 (164).

2. Suit for declaration — Maintainability.

——Ss. 59, 180 and 183 — Suit for redemption and possession of occupancy plots under usufructuary mortgage deed decreed in terms of compromise — Compromise decree amounting to sale of certain suit plots in consideration of mortgage money — Mortgagees no longer in permissive possession and becoming hereditary tenant under S. 180 after expiry of period of limitation for filing suit under S. 180 or 183 — Suit by mortgagors under S. 59 for mere declaration of right and title as occupancy tenant is barred by S. 42 of the Specific Relief Act. 1963 All WR (HC) 734.

——S. 59 — Suit for declaration without prayer for possession — Maintainability — Co-tenancy.

The argument that plaintiffs not in possession would not be entitled to a declaration under S. 59 of the U. P. Tenancy Act, where they do not seek relief for recovery of possession, has no force where the plaintiffs have been recorded as co-tenants and there is no division of the holding according to the law separating the share of the plaintiffs from that of others. 1951 RD 252: 1952 ALJ (Rev) 19: 1952 AWR (Rev) 16.

——S. 59 — Suit for declaration of plaintiff as a tenant under S. 59 of the tenancy Act instituted after its repeal by the U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act is not maintainable — As the right claimed has been converted into right as Sirdar under the U. P. Zamindari Abolition Act, Cl. (2) of the U. P. Land Tenures Legal Proceedings Removal of Difficulties Order 1952 does not apply to case — Under S. 229-B of the Abolition Act the plaintiff can file a suit for the declaration of his right as a sirdar. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act (1 of 1951), S. 229-B. 19(All LJ 90.

——S. 59 — Plaintiff not in possession — Suit for declaration without relief for possession — Maintainability — (Civil P. C. (1908), O. 2, R. 2) — (Specific Relief Act (1877), S. 42, Proviso).

The law does not encourage multiplicity of litigation and with that end in view requires that all the reliefs which can be claimed at the same time should be claimed in one and the same suit. Failure to do so is penalized both by the proviso to S. 42, Specific Relief Act, and by O. 2, R. 2, Civil P. C. Where, therefore, a plaintiff not in possession and hence entitled to seek a relief for possession also, sues only for declaration under S. 59 of the U. P. Tenancy Act, the suit is not maintainable. ('52) 1952 RD (BR) 231: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 132.

——Ss. 59 and 62 — Single declaratory suit in respect of more than one holding — Maintainability — Conditions.

Under Section 62 of the U. P. Tenancy Act a single suit may be instituted under the provisions of Section 59 of the Act in respect of a number of holdings only if the parties are the same. This is a necessary condition. 1952 RD 12: 1952 ALJ (Rev) 11: 1952 AWR (Rev) 19.

——S. 59 — Suit for declaration without a prayer for possession — Plaintiff not in possession — Suit is barred under Section 42 of Specific Relief Act (1877). 1951 RD 229: 1951 AWR (Rev) 214.

——S. 59 and U. P. E. E. Act (25 of 1934), S. 11 — Suit for declaration regarding property sold not included in list published under S. 11 (1) of U. P. E. E. Act — Maintainability.

Where property not included in the list published under S. 11 (1) of the U. P. Enc. Est. Act is sold by mistake the owner of the property can file a suit for declaration under Section 59 of the U. P. Tenancy Act and it is not barred either by Section 11 (2) of the U. P. Tenancy Act or O. 21, R. 92, Civil P. C. 1951 RD 167: 1951 AWR (Rev) 152.

——S. 59 — Suit for declaration when defendant in possession as sub-tenant — When can be decreed — Specific Relief Act (1 of 1877), S. 42, Proviso.

When a plaintiff sues for a declaration of his right as a tenant being the heir of a previous tenant and the defendant's possession is found to be only permissive, he being a sub-tenant, the declaration can be granted even though no possession is asked for. The plaintiff in such a case must be deemed to be in constructive possession. 1951 AWR (Rev) 104: 1951 RD 81.

——S. 59 — Suit under — Plaintiff not in possession — Declaration if can be given — Specific Relief Act (1877), S. 42, Proviso.

Where a person claiming to be in possession of certain land brings a suit for mere declaration of his title as tenant under Section 59, U. P. Tenancy Act, but it is found that he is not actually in possession on the date of suit, he cannot be granted declaration in view of proviso to Section 42, Specific Relief Act. ('51) 1951 AWR (Rev) 1 (2).

3. Necessary parties.

●——Ss. 59, 180 and 183 — Suit under Section 59, U. P. Tenancy Act or appeal arising out of it — Zamindar, after abolition of Zamindari, is neither a necessary nor proper party. See C. P. Code (1908), O. 1, R. 10. AIR 1963 All 549 (FB).

——S. 59 — Suit under Section 59 or appeal in such a suit — Zamindar although has a limited interest is a necessary party — Omission to implead her is fatal defect. 1947 RD 49, 1947 RD 207; 1951 RD 40, Foll. ('51) 1951 RD (Rev) 268 (DB).

4. Reference to arbitration.

——S. 59 — Suit under — Reference to arbitration — Parties to agreement — Some of zamindars not appearing before Court — Want of their consent to reference — Effect.

In a suit under Section 59 it cannot be said that all the zamindars are not interested in the declaration as to who is to be adjudicated as the tenant of the land. The same argument applies when a few of the zamindars set up the claim that the land is their khudkasht. Therefore it is necessary that if the dispute is to be referred to arbitration all of them, as well as the persons claiming to be the tenants, or as khudkasht-holder of the land, must agree to do so. The mere fact that some of the zamindars may not appear in Court does not imply that they are not interested parties as they may not want to put in appearance when the dispute is to be decided by a Court of law, but their consent is certainly necessary before the matter can be referred to arbitration. ('51) 1951 RD 185: 1951 All WR (Rev) 162: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 65.

5. Co-tenancy.

——S. 59 — Sole tenant — Death of — One member of the family recorded as sole tenant — Effect of — Rights of brothers.

Where on the death of a recorded sole tenant a member of the family is recorded as the tenant in his place and the other members of family filed a suit under Section 59 of the U. P. Tenancy Act, it was found that the recorded successor had not proved that he was the adopted son of the deceased all the three brothers of the deceased alive on the death of the originally recorded tenant succeeded to the property as co-tenants. 1952 RD 174: 1952 ALJ (Rev) 223.

——S. 59 — Parties entered as co-tenants over number of years — Presumption — Question of adverse possession — (Limitation Act (1908), Art. 144).

If the parties are related and are entered as co-tenants over a number of years and if neither party is able to prove satisfactorily the pedigree set up by it entitling it to be treated as nearest collateral, co-tenancy should be presumed and no question of adverse possession by one party as against the other arises. 1950 RD 16, Rel. on. ('52) 1952 All WR (Rev) 11: 1951 RD 284: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 97.

——S. 59 — Suit for declaration of co-tenancy with the recorded tenants — Evidence — Onus of proof — Marfat kasht entries of faslis 1349 to 1351 — Some entries for 40 years showing defendants alone as tenants.

In a second appeal by the plaintiffs against the concurrent decrees dismissing the suit by them under Section 59, U. P. Tenancy Act, for a declaration of their rights as co-tenants by succession to the tenancy of a collateral S deceased.

Held: To establish their right it is necessary for the plaintiffs to prove that they or their predecessors in title were the nearest heirs of the deceased tenant and that they shared in the cultivation of the holding at his death. The defendants, recorded tenants for 40 years, need not prove in defence of their rights to the tenancy how they were acquired; the plaintiffs cannot rely on the weakness of the defendant's case. The Marfat kasht entries of Faslis 1349 to 1351 alone wherein the plaintiffs' names were found, were rightly disregarded by the Courts under the circumstances. 1951 RD 258: 1952 AWR (Rev) 171.

——S. 59 — Persons cannot acquire co-tenancy rights against express provision of law— There is no estoppel against law — Name of respondent wrongly entered as co-tenant on death of co-tenant — Respondent not co-tenant from commencement of tenancy or by succession or by specific recognition by land-holder — Respondent cannot acquire co-tenancy right against express provision of law — Subsequent intention or actions of persons who were entitled to be recorded as co-tenants in place of respondent will not operate as estoppel — (Evidence Act (1872), S. 115). ('52) 1952 All LJ (Rev) 126: 1952 RD (BR) 176.

——Ss. 59, 180 — Entry of name of widow of holder of fixed rate holding as co-tenant, though she was not entitled to succeed — Effect.

Where the name of a widow, who is not entitled to succeed to a deceased tenant, is recorded as a co-tenant, the entry must be presumed to have been with the consent of the collaterals by way of consolation. She is only a licensee with a limited life interest which must terminate on her death. ('51) 1951 All WR (Rev) 16: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 19: 1951 RD 252.

——Ss. 59, 180, 183 and 242 (before amendment by Act 10 of 1947) — Suit by tenant against trespasser — Jurisdiction of civil Court.

Where a person brings a suit before the amendment of Ss. 180 and 183 in 1947 alleging that he is a tenant of the plots in dispute and that the defendant has forcibly taken possession of the same and is occupying them as trespasser, the allegations are not covered by any of the three Sections 59, 180 and 183 and the jurisdiction of the civil Court is not ousted. 1950 All WR (HC) 573: AIR 1950 All 449 (449) (Prs 3, 5).

●——Ss. 59/183 — Suits under — Decreed in appeal — Second appeal pending before the board — U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act, 1951, enforced — Effect — Jurisdiction of Revenue Courts — Procedure — Parties Gaon Sabas — Substitution or addition.

Suits under Sections 59/183 were dismissed as barred by limitation while the plaintiffs were found to be tenants. On appeal the Additional Commissioner holding they were not barred by time decreed the suits. Hence the appeals to the Board. While the appeals were pending the new Act of 1951 came into force. The respondents contended that the rights claimed in appeal by the landholders have evaporated into the thin air by the abolition of the class as well as rent and the appeal could not be maintained in view of the change in the law and the change in jurisdiction also there being no provision corresponding to Section 242 of the old Act.

Held, under S. 6 of U. P. General Clauses Act, 1924, the result of the repeal of an Act does not take away the rights vested. But this is subject to a different intention appearing in the repealing Act.

(1) After the enforcement of the U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act, 1951, the Revenue Courts have still the jurisdiction left to try and dispose of all pending cases of the U. P. Tenancy Act (and the Land Revenue Act) not covered by Rules 4 and 5 of the Rules under the new Act of 1951 and therefore covered by Rule 7 of the same. They will be disposed of throughout all the stages including appeals, references, etc., by the Revenue Courts.

(2) The procedure to be followed by the Revenue Courts in cases under the Tenancy Act will be under the new Act.

(3) Gaon Sabas as the agent of the State which acquires under the new Act the rights of the landholder a necessary party in the proceedings, may be added as a party to the proceedings where the Court considers it necessary. ——S. 62 — Scope and effect of.

Section 62 of the U. P. Tenancy Act does not restrict the provisions of O. 1, R. 1, Civil P. C. but it extends it. It does not say that a single suit will not lie even if it is maintainable under O. 1, R. 1 unless the parties are the same. The only effect of S. 62 is that in a case where the parties are not the same, a single suit will not lie if it is not maintainable under O. 1, R. 1, Civil P. C. If it is maintainable under O. 1, R. 1, Civil P. C., S. 62 would not make it defective. 1951 All WR (Rev) 172: 1952 RD 193.

——S. 82 (3) — Oral surrender with transfer of possession — Validity and effect.

An oral surrender accompanied with transfer of possession is a valid surrender under S. 82 (3) of the Act although it is neither by sending a registered notice to the landholder nor by an application to the Tahsildar under S. 82 (1) or 84 respectively. It has the effect of extinguishing the rights of the person surrendering under Section 45 (c) of the Act. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 192.

——S. 82 — Oudh Rent Act (1886), S. 20 — Tenancy right mortgaged — Possession with mortgagee — Relinquishment of tenancy by tenant — Validity of.

A mortgagee who holds the mortgage of tenancy rights has no privity of contract with the landlord and he cannot, therefore, prevent him from accepting the surrender from his tenant. Where the tenant is in actual physical possession, delivery of possession is an essential ingredient of a valid relinquishment. 7 OC 265; 1923 RD 466; 1948 RD 125, Rel. on. ('51) 1951 All WR (HC) 585.

——S. 82 — Applicability to grove-holder.

Section 82 of the U. P. Tenancy Act which deals with surrender of a tenant's holding is not applicable to a grove-holder. 1951 RD 157: 1951 AWR 159.

——S. 86 (1) and (4) — Abandonment — Requisites.

The words "ceases to cultivate and leaves the neighbourhood" in Section 86 (1) and (4) contemplate an intention of the tenant to sever the connection with his holding permanently and do not include a temporary absence from the neighbourhood. It cannot be said that there is an abandonment when the holding continues to be looked after by a relative of the tenant and rent continues to be paid to the landholder. 1952 RD 104: 1952 All WR (Rev) 58: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 79.

——Ss. 87 (4), 88 and 183 — Scope.

Where a tenant in possession is imprisoned and does not leave any person in charge of the land responsible for payment of rent nor gives any notice to the landholder about it he will be presumed to have abandoned the holding under S. 84 (4). But landholder who enters upon a holding in contravention of the provision of Section 88 shall be deemed to have "ejected" the tenant otherwise than in accordance with the provisions of this Act within the meaning of Section 183. The tenant is therefore, entitled to the benefit of S. 19 of the Act 10 of 1947. 1952 RD (BR) 378: 1952 All WR (Rev) 244: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 275.

——Ss. 87, 88, 88-A, 89 and 183— Abandonment — Presumption — When can be raised — Entry by landholder or non-landholder on abandonment — Difference in status.

A tenant who ceases to cultivate the land and leaves the neighbourhood without leaving in charge of the holding a person responsible for the payment of rent as it may fall due and giving notice to the landholder for the payment of rent, must be presumed to have abandoned the holding. Once the above basic facts are proved the presumption of abandonment must be raised and the consequences of abandonment must follow.

In spite of the abandonment of the holding by the tenant the landholder however, will not have the right to enter upon the land unless the procedure of S. 88 is followed by him. If he does enter upon the land without following the procedure of S. 88, his entry will be questionable under S. 183, U. P. Tenancy Act.

So far however, as non-landholders are concerned they are not encumbered with any such responsibility as the landholder is. They can, therefore, enter upon the land and acquire such rights as the law may give them on a vacant holding. In other words, remedy of S. 88-A is barred to the landholder who has not complied with S. 88 but is permissible to non-landholder in spite of procedure of S. 88 not having been adopted by the landholder. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 263: 1952 RD (BR) 380: 1952 All WR (Rev) 188.

——Ss. 87 and 88 — Absence of notice — Plea of abandonment.

The provision of a notice by the landholder through the Tahsildar as provided for in S. 88 is a step to be taken by the landholder and the fact that such action was not taken by the landholders will not prevail against a plea of abandonment against the co-tenants. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 259.

——S. 87 (1) and (4) — Abandonment of holding — Presumption of — Evidence of intention to sever connection permanently is necessary. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 68: 1952 RD 103: 1952 All WR (Rev) 164.

——S. 87 (1) and (4) — Abandonment of holding — Evidence of — Absence of notice to landholder — Effect.

It is necessary to prove that the tenant had (a) ceased to cultivate and (b) left the neighbourhood without leaving a person in charge and making arrangement for payment of the rent. A written notice to the landholder of such arrangement is also necessary but not indispensable. ('52) 1952 RD (BR) 104: 1952 All WR (Rev) 68: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 79.

——Ss. 88 and 87 — Absence of Notice — Plea of abandonment — A notice by the landholder through the Tahsildar is a step to be taken by the landholder and the fact that such action was not taken will not prevail against the plea of abandonment against the co-tenants. 1952 All WR (Rev) 188: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 259 :1952 All LJ (Rev) 275.

——S. 88 — Abandonment — When effective.

An abandonment of a holding by a tenant does not become complete and effective by the mere recording of an order of the Tahsildar that the holding be treated as abandoned. It should be shown that after the abandonment either the zamindar himself entered upon the land or legally put some other tenant in possession or that it was held by a third person adversely to both the zamindar and the tenant who had abandoned. 1951 RD 162: 1951 All WR (Rev) 154.

——S. 91 — Object of S. 91 and its interpretation — Charge levied on weaver for weaving in house — Charge amounts to cess and cannot be levied.

The object of the Legislature in enacting Section 91, appears to have been to curtail the right of the zamindar to levy customary dues or services of a vague and uncertain nature. In interpreting this section it should be remembered that no suit can lie for the recovery of any cess which is levied in accordance with village custom unless it is sanctioned by the provisions of subsection (2) of the section. ILR (1954) 2 All 294: 1953 All LJ 636: AIR 1954 All 211 (212) (Prs 7, 8, 9) (DB).

——S. 94 — Rented grove — Land ceasing to be grove — Fixation of Rent.

On the land ceasing to be groveland the right of a grove-holder cannot be enjoyed by a person who becomes a hereditary tenant of such land. He can have the rights and liabilities of a hereditary tenant not of a grove-holder. Hence the rent to be fixed under S. 94 is not the rent that the grove-holder was liable to pay so long as the land retained the character of a grove. 1951 All WR (Rev) 84: 1951 RD 77.

——Ss. 100 and 59 — Jurisdiction — Civil and Revenue Court — A suit for declaration is essentially of a civil nature, and not of the nature of a suit specified in the Fourth Schedule of U. P. Tenancy Act — Revenue Court has, therefore, no jurisdiction in respect of such suits. See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 9. 1960 All LJ 676.

——S. 117 — Applicability — Existence of — Agreed rate of rent — Effect.

Where there is an agreed rate of rent in existence between the landlord and tenant, the limitation to such enhancement as is laid down in S. 117 of the Tenancy Act should apply irrespective of whether the tenant is a tenant or a grantee of favourable rent. 1951 RD 272: 1952 All WR (Rev) 12.

——S. 157 — Scope and applicability.

Section 157 only safeguards rights of a tenant against ejectment by some 'procedure' other than the provisions of the U. P. Tenancy Act. It does not apply to a case where a person has not resorted to the provisions of law at all for ejectment, but has taken possession of some land by force. ——Ss. 161, 175, 178, 183 — Tenant ejected in accordance with law — Maintainability of suit under S. 183.

A suit by the tenant under S. 183, for recovery of possession from the landholder cannot succeed unless the plaintiff is able to establish fraud. Any technical defect in the service of notice under S. 161 would amount to an irregularity but not to a fraud so as to render the proceedings void. 1951 RD 32: 1951 All WR (Rev) 32.

——Ss. 163 and 183 — Ejectment non-representation of minor tenant — Validity — Suit under S. 183 — Maintainability — Civil P. C. (1908), O. 32, R. 3.

As the minor was not properly represented in the proceedings the order of ejectment was without jurisdiction and void and therefore, the suit under S. 183 was maintainable. 1951 All WR (Rev) 9.

——Ss. 163 to 165 — Object of.

The provisions of Ss. 163 to 165 of the U. P. Tenancy Act have been enacted for the purposes of securing speedy recovery of rents of Zamindars from the tenants. They were never intended to be utilized for purpose of securing their ejectment. 1950 RD 122: 1951 All WR (Rev) 3.

——Ss. 163, 165 and 171 — Application under S. 163 — Suit for ejectment under S. 171 filed simultaneously — Order for ejectment passed under S. 165 (1) during pendency of suit — Subsequent withdrawal of suit — Held landlord was entitled to simultaneous proceedings — Order for ejectment under S. 165 (1) cannot become illegal on ground that landlord had treated defendants as tenants by continuing suit. 1950 All WR (Rev) 12: 1950 RD 194.

——S. 163 — Nature of proceedigs under — Object of the Legislature.

Proceedings under S. 163 were enacted as a special procedure for the express purpose of enabling zamindars to collect and realise rents expeditiously. The intention was not to secure ejectment of tenants from their holdings for the benefit of the zamindars. 1950 RD 194: 1950 All WR (Rev) 12.

——S. 163 — Suit under — Jurisdiction of Tahsildar — Plea of land being under water.

Where in a suit under Section 165 the tenants in the first instance admitted the tenancy but later on pleaded that the land was under water, the plea does not in any way affect the jurisdiction of the Tahsildar and the ejectment would not be illegal. 1950 RD 133.

——Ss. 164, 163, 165 — Object of — The provisions of Sections 163 to 165 have been enacted for the purposes of securing speedy recovery of rents of Zamindars from tenants. They were not intended for securing their ejectment. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (1939), S. 163. 1951 AWR (Rev) 3.

——S. 165 (4) — Applicability — Landholder taking back possession in restitution — Deposit of amount due subsequent under the section — Validity — Period of one month in subs. (4) — Starting point — Application under Section 144, C. P. Code — Nature of.

The application for restitution is not an application for execution of a decree; the order under Section 144 restored the status quo and therefore merely confirmed the fact that the tenants were duly ejected for non-payment of arrears in June, 1942. The deposit required to be made under Section 165 (4) not being within one month of that date will not avail.

Further, the order of the Board restoring the order for ejectment was before the enactment of the provision of sub-section (4) of S. 165 and the landholder was entitled to its benefit and be put in the position which he occupied on delivery to him in 1942. 1952 RD 258: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 342.

——S. 165 (1) and (2) — Scope — Provisions are mandatory — Deposit of dues before delivery of possession — Effect.

In case of default by the tenant to pay arrears of rent and the instalments falling due by 31st of May, the Tahsildar is bound under sub-sections (1) and (2) of Section 165 to make an order for ejectment. Where however the dues are deposited before the delivery of possession either or after the ejectment order, the order must be cancelled. 1951 RD 107: 1951 An WR (Rev) 78.

——Ss. 165, 164, 163 — Object of — The provisions of Sections 163 to 165 have been enacted for the purposes of securing speedy recovery of rents of Zamindars from tenants. 1. Applicability and scope.

●——S. 180 — Scope — "Taking and retaining possession' — Meaning of — Possession under order under S. 145, Cr. P. Code — Nature of — No defence to suit for ejectment — (Cr. P. Code 1898), S. 145).

Under Section 180, a person entitled to admit another to a plot of land can file a suit in a Revenue Court to eject him. The latter can defend the suit only on two grounds, namely, (1) that he has taken possession or retained possession of the said plot with the consent of the former; and (2) that he took possession or retained possession in accordance with the provisions of law for the time being in force. The dichotomy between taking and retaining indicates that they are mutually exclusive and apply to two different situations. The word 'taking' applies to a person taking possession of a land otherwise than in accordance with the provisions of the law while the word 'retaining' applies to a person taking possession in accordance with the provisions of the law but subsequently retaining the same illegally. A provisional order of a Magistrate under Section 145, Cr. P. Code, in regard to possession irrespective of the rights of the parties, cannot enable a person to resist the suit under Section 180 of the Act. Bhinka v. Charan Singh, 1959 All WR (HC) 440: 1959 All LJ 557: 1959 All Cri R 337: 1959 Cri LJ 1223: (1959) Supp (2) SCR 798: 1960 SCJ 892: AIR 1959 SC 960 (965, 966) (Pt D) (Prs 12, 14, 15, 16).

——Ss. 180 (1) and (2), 30 (2) — Land — Suit for possession of land in river bed used for casual or occasional cultivation — Suit is entertainable as Section 180 (1) applies to any 'land' irrespective of right which may or may not accrue in it to person in occupation, if no suit is brought against him. 1965 All LJ 70: AIR 1965 All 514 (516) (Pt C) (Pr 10).

——S. 180 — Applicability — Land — Ingredients of.

In order to make the provisions of S. 180 U. P. T. A. apply the following are essentials:— (1) The suit must be in respect of a plot of land. (2) It must be filed by a person entitled to admit the defendant to occupy such plot. (3) The occupation of the defendant must be otherwise than in accordance with law. (4) The suit must be filed within the period of limitation prescribed. In order to be land it must first be a land which is held for growing of crops or as grove land or for pasturage, and secondly, it must not be a land which is occupied by buildings or appurtenant thereto other than building which are improvements. The land contemplated by Section 180, is the land which is agricultural in nature and is either let out or is meant to be let out to or held by a tenant. Land to which somebody cannot be admitted as a tenant, even though used for the purpose of a grove, would not be land within the meaning of S. 180. See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 9. AIR 1958 All 500.

——S. 180 (1) — Applicability — Conditions.

In order that Section 180 of the U. P. Tenancy Act, may be attracted it must be shown that on the date of suit the retention of possession was without the consent of the person entitled to admit. AIR 1958 All 500 (501) (Pt C) (Pr 13).

A sub-tenant would be included within the meaning of the word 'tenant' for the purposes of the Act unless a contrary intention appears from the context where the word is used. There is nothing in the wording of Section 180 or in the context in which the word 'tenant' has been used to indicate that the word 'tenant' does not include a sub-tenant. ●——S. 180 — "Otherwise than . . . . in force" — (Tenancy Laws — U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act (I of 1951), S. 20).

The Zamindari Abolition Act is a part of the law for the time being in force. ——S. 180 — Applicability — Plaintiff claiming possession alleging unlawful ejectment by defendant.

Where the only allegation is that the defendant has unlawfully ejected the plaintiffs from possession and there is no allegation of the defendant claiming to be a tenant, it is not a case which falls under Section 180 of the Tenancy Act and consequently Section 242 of the Act would not apply and the Civil Court will have jurisdiction to try the case. 1952 AWR (HC) 64: AIR 1953 All 733 (733) (Pr 7).

——S. 180 (as amended in 1947) — Suit under — Necessary parties.

The law under the amended Section 180 does not make all the co-sharers in a mahal necessary parties to the suit. Unless it is shown that they have something to do with the disputed land, it is wrong to assume that they are necessary parties. 1951 AWR (Rev) 61: 1951 RD 9.

3. Acquisition of right by prescription — Sub-s. (12).

——S. 180 — Mortgage with possession of occupancy holding — Suit for possession of land mortgaged by mortgagor — Cause of action for such suit — Possession of mortgagee when becomes unlawful.

The cause of action for recovery of possession accrues on the mortgagor's demand for possession upon payment of the mortgage-money and refusal thereof by the mortgagee. The possession of the mortgagee does not become unlawful so long as the amount due to him has not been offered. The mortgagee accordingly never becomes liable to ejectment under Section 180 of the U. A suit for possession of an agricultural plot by the tenant against a trespasser filed in 1945 in a civil Court could rightly be maintained in that Court. The mere fact that the amending Act (10 of 1947) has added an explanation to Section 180, U. P. Tenancy Act, 1939, does not mean that Section 180 as it originally stood was applicable to a suit by a tenant against a trespasser. AIR 1947 Oudh 104 (FB), Rel. on. 7. Jurisdiction of Civil Courts.
(A) Revenue Courts.

7. Jurisdiction of Civil Courts.

——S. 180 — Suit for possession — Not falling within definition of 'land' — Jurisdiction of Civil Court, if barred — Test.

The test which should be applied, when the question arises as to whether the suit for possession of certain plot of land instituted in Civil Court is not cognisable by that Court but is cognisable by the Revenue Court in view of Section 180 is to see the nature of title which may have been set up by the defendant before the institution of the suit; in other words the state of affairs which existed before the institution of the suit. If, therefore, the State of affairs existing prior to the institution of the suit and of which the plaintiff was aware pointed out that the title set up by the defendant was that he claimed to be the tenant of the plot then the jurisdiction in respect of a suit for possession would belong to the Revenue Court. 1957 All LJ 623: 1957 All WR (HC) 631.

The jurisdiction of the Court depends upon the state of affairs which existed at the time of the institution of the suit. ——Ss. 180, 183, 242 — Jurisdiction — Suit under S. 9, Specific Relief Act — (C. P. Code (1908), S. 9).

That the plaintiff could obtain a relief on the cause of action that had accrued by means of a suit under Section 180 or S. 183, U. P Tenancy Act, is a circumstance which divests a civil Court of its jurisdiction. In order to confer jurisdiction upon a Revenue Court the plaint must allege a cause of action in respect of which it can grant relief. Section 9, Specific Relief Act, certainly provides a speedy and summary remedy to a person who has been wrongfully dispossessed by another; but the ban imposed by Section 242, U. P. Tenancy Act, on a Civil Court, to entertain suit includes a suit even under Section 9, Specific Relief Act. If the jurisdiction of a Civil Court is barred, even a suit under Section 9, Specific Relief Act, cannot be filed. ——S. 180 (before amendment of 1947) and S. 242 — Suit against co-sharer in peaceful possession — Forum — (C. P. Code (1908), S. 9).

A suit by one co-sharer against another who was in peaceful possession of a particular plot of land instituted in 1945 would be governed by the law as it stood on that date both as regards substantive and procedural rights. Hence the suit in question could not be covered by S. 180 so as to become a suit exclusively within the jurisdiction of the revenue Court under S. 242. Such a suit is rightly instituted in Civil Court. 1953 All WR (HC) 615: 1953 All LJ 687: AIR 1954 All 191 (191, 192) (Pt A) (Pr 6).

C. (1908), S. 9 — Such a suit is maintainable in a civil Court. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (17 of 1939), S. 183. AIR 1952 All 650 (DB).

——Ss. 180, 242 — Reliefs for possession and injunction — Civil P. C. (1908), Ss. 9, 115.

If in a suit for possession of tenancy land and damages a prayer for injunction be added which is based on the same cause of action the jurisdiction of the revenue Court will not be ousted. But where the two claims are based on different causes of action, the relief based on the claim for possession and damages is within the jurisdiction of the revenue Court and the relief based on the claim for injunction is within the jurisdiction of the civil Court. 1951 All LJ 265: 1951 All WR (HC) 462: AIR 1951 All 611 (612, 613) (Pt C) (Prs 6, 8, 10).

——Ss. 180, 242 — Perpetual lease by karta — Suit for possession by junior members of family — Lease alleged to be in excess of karta's power — Plaintiffs not claiming either in plaint or in proceeding to be persons entitled to admit tenant to suit land — Suit does not fall under Section 180 — Trial of suit by Civil Court is not barred. ('51) 1951 AWR 48: AIR 1951 All 581 (582) (Pr 8).

——S. 180 — Applicability — Defendant pleading proprietary title. Section 180 has no application and the suit is rightly instituted in Civil Court. 1951 All WR (HC) 6: AIR 1951 All 437 (437, 438) (Prs 5, 11, 12) (DB).

——Ss. 180 and 242 — Suit for ejectment by tenant against trespasser — Competency of Civil Court to entertain.

A suit for ejectment by a tenant against a trespasser does not lie under Section 180. Consequently the jurisdiction of the civil Court to entertain such a suit is not barred by reason of that section. 1951 All WR (HC) 370.

——S. 180 — Exclusive jurisdiction of Revenue Courts — Civil P. C. (1908), S. 9.

Where the dispute between the plaintiffs and the defendants related to proprietary rights and none of the defendants asserted that they were in possession only under a claim of tenancy and the suit was not only for possession but for possession and an injunction to restrain the defendants from digging sand from the plots in suit, the civil Court has clearly jurisdiction to entertain the suit. 1951 All WR (HC) 199 (DB).

——S. 180 — Trespasser on grove — Suit for ejectment under S. 180 — Maintainability.

The suit by a grove-holder against a trespasser on the grove does not lie in the revenue court, and Section 180 is not applicable. His remedy for ejectment lies only in civil Court 1951 RD 226.

——Ss. 180, 60 — Suits for cancellation of lease — Jurisdiction of civil Court — Civil P. C. (1908), S. 9. To grant the relief of cancellation of the lease, therefore, Civil Court alone is the proper forum. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (1939), S. 60. AIR 1950 All 532.

——S. 180 — Suit for ejectment of trespasser from grove land — Jurisdiction of civil Court — Civil P. C. (1908), S. 9.

A suit for ejectment of a trespasser from a groveland is triable by a civil Court and not by a revenue Court as Section 180 under which a suit for ejectment of a trespasser can be filed by a landlord, has no application to a groveland. 1950 All WR 487: 1952 All LJ 384: AIR 1950 All 528 (528) (Pt A) (Pr 5).

——S. 180 — Suit under — If barred by mere possession over abandoned holding for a long time.

Mere possession over an abandoned holding for any number of years is not enough to make a suit against the person in possession time-barred unless it is shown that such possession was unlawful to the knowledge of the Zamindar. 1951 AWR (Rev) 158: 1951 RD 188.

——S. 180 — Zamindar's right to sue trespasser against tenant on abandonment by the latter — Limitation — Starting point.

The Zamindar's right to sue under S. 180 of the Tenancy Act a trespasser against the tenant on abandonment by the latter does not arise until he enters upon the abandoned holding according to the provisions of S. 88 of the Act. 1951 AWR (Rev) 125: 1951 RD 98.

——S. 180 (2) — Commencement of period of limitation for purposes of — Plaintiff suing in 1944 for declaration that defendants are trespassers after failing to get possession under ejectment decree of Civil Court in 1943. ——S. 180 — Suit under — Limitation — Starting point.

The trespass of the defendants who, till the High Court decree, were claiming to be proprietors and heirs themselves, obviously started only after the final decree in 1946, and the suit against them, which was filed only about a month later, could not be held to be bevond time. 1951 All WR (Rev) 61: 1951 RD 9.

——S. 180 (2) — Applicability— Plaintiff's title recognised by Civil Court as against defendant who had obtained mutation — Suit by plaintiff under S. 180 within two months of decree to eject defendant as trespasser — The defendant cannot turn round and plead that he had become a hereditary tenant under S. 180 (2) before the suit was instituted. SECTION 182

——S. 182 — Scope — (Specific Relief Act (1877), S. 9).

Decrees passed under the U. P. Tenancy Act are passed both by the revenue Courts and Civil Courts and evidently the reference to decrees by the Civil Courts in S. 182 of the U. P. Tenancy Act is to decrees passed under the U. P. Tenancy Act and not to decrees passed under any other law. A decree passed under Section 9 of the Specific Relief Act does not have any reference to the title of the parties to the propety and is passed solely on the ground that a person has been dispossessed without recourse having been taken to law and should, therefore, be put back in possession of that property and can be executed. It cannot be said that S. 182 of the U. P. Tenancy Act applies to decrees passed by Civil Courts in respect of agricultural land. 1956 All LJ 948: 1957 All WR (HC) 263.

(U. P. Tenancy Act (1939), S. 183.)

1. Applicability.
2. Suit cognisable by Revenue Court.
3. Suit cognisable by Civil Court.
4. Parties to suit.
5. Right to sue.
6. Maintainability.
7. Bar to suit.
8. Proviso.
9. Miscellaneous.

1. Applicability.

——S. 183 — Applicability — Tenancy at fixed rate — Alienation by widow — Suit for possession by reversioner, against alience after widow's death — Civil Court's jurisdiction — The suit is maintainable in the Civil Court and is not barred under S. 180 or S. 183 of the Act. See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 9. AIR 1958 All 500.

——S. 183 — Suit under — Limitation — Computation — Limitation Act, S. 6 — Applicability — The exception contained in S. 6, Limitation Act cannot be availed of in a suit under the Act. See Limitation Act (1908), S. 29. AIR 1958 All 311 (DB).

——S. 183 — Applicability.

A suit by a tenant against a person who is holding a land either on behalf of the landlord or who has been allowed to continue in possession of the land belonging to a tenant by a landlord would lie under S. 183 of the Tenancy Act in the Revenue Code. 1950 All LJ 642: 1953 All WR (HC) 717: AIR 1954 All 192 (192, 193) (Prs 6, 7).

Although S. 183 in terms applied only to tenants, and grove-holders are not tenants except for certain purposes, yet S. 206 (b) which applied to grove-holders, makes S. 183 applicable to grove-holders as well. Further S. 183 applies when the disputed property is a holding. A suit filed before the repeal of U. P. Tenancy Act by the U. P. Zamindari (Abolition and Land Reforms) Act is a suit governed by S. 183, U. P. Tenancy Act, and cognisable only by the revenue Courts. ——Ss. 183, 182 and 186 — Decree in a suit under Section 183 — Execution for delivery — Section 182 not applicable — "Reinstatement" in Section 186 provides that the provisions of Section 181 shall apply to the execution of the decree for reinstatement of the tenant — The rights to get possession of the successful party in a suit under Section 183 is unfettered by the provisions of Section 182 — He is entitled to get possession at any time of the year under Section 181. The pendency of an appeal against the decree does not deprive the decree holder of his advantage. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (1939), S. 182. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 319.

——S. 183 — Scope of — Suit under — Decree or order of ejectment — Objections.

A decree or order of ejectment that has become final can be questioned under Section 183 of U. P. Tenancy Act only on the ground of fraud and not any other ground of illegality or material irregularity. 1952 RD 149: 1952 AWR (Rev) 97: 1952 ALJ (Rev) 125.

——Ss. 183, 3 (23) — Halwaha to whom Sir plots are given in lieu of wages becomes a sub-tenant of the plot and if he is forcibly dispossessed by the Zamindar can recover possession under Section 183. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (1939), S. 3 (23). 1952 ALJ (Rev) 93.

——S. 183 — Right to claim restoration — Irregularities in ejectment — Extension of limitation under S. 19 of the U. P. Tenancy (Amendment) Act, 1947 is for tenants wrongly ejected.

Mere irregularity or even illegality in the conduct of the sale or ejectment proceedings taken long ago should not be held to be sufficient to entitle the ejected tenant to claim restoration under S. 183 of the Act. 1952 AWR (Rev) 60: 1952 RD 85: 1952 ALJ (Rev) 49.

——Ss. 183, 87, 88, 88-A and 89 — Abandonment — Presumption — When can be raised — Entry by landholder or non-landholder on abandonment — Difference in status.

If he enters upon the land without following the procedure of Section 88, his entry will be questionable under Section 183 of the Act. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (1939), S. 87. 1952 All WR (Rev) 188.

——Ss. 183 and 175 — Tenant ejected under Section 175 — Proper remedy lies by way of appeal or revision and no fresh suit under Section 183, of the Act will lie. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (17 of 1939), Section 175. 1952 RD (BR) 286.

——S. 183 — Scope and applicability — Suit by co-tenant N against other co-tenants— Name of N, the heir of a deceased co-tenant not recorded in the khatauni — Effect — Rights of N if extinguished for failure to file a suit under Section 183.

Held: The decision of the Additional Commissioner is not contrary to any specific provision of law and so not liable to be set aside in third appeal.

There was no allegation of dispossession of N the daughter of a deceased co-tenant by the appellants claiming through the landholder and so a suit by N under Section 183 is not maintainable; and her title as the right successor to her father cannot be held to be extinguished by her failure to institute such a suit.

A suit by her for joint possession with the others can lie only in a civil Court and the period of limitation for such a suit is 12 years.

Her application for the correction of khatauni should not be thrown out as she was not in actual possession of her share but only in constructive possession through co-tenants. 1952 ALJ (Rev) 297: 1952 RD 239.

——S. 183 — Section does not contemplate suit by co-tenant against other co-tenants — Co-tenant's title to rent-free grant cannot therefore be extinguished by his omission to sue within three years of his dispossession. ('52) 1952 RD (BR) 239.

——S. 183 — Decree or order of ejectment — Ground on which it can be questioned.

A decree or order of ejectment which has become final can be questioned by a suit under Section 183 only on the ground of fraud and not on the ground of any other illegality or irregularity. ('52) 1952 RD (BR) 221.

——S. 183 — Suit under — Ejectment order in a suit under Section 171 — Legality of order can be gone into. 1951 AWR (Rev) 231: 1951 RD 260.

——S. 183 — Suit under, is not barred by reason of possession of defendant obtained at on execution sale held without authority — Such possession cannot be deemed to be lawful. 1951 RD 167: 1951 AWR (Rev) 152.

——S. 183 — Co-sharer — Illegal ejectment of tenant by — Suit for damages by tenant — Section 183, if applies.

A suit by a tenant for possession and damages will not be covered by Section 183 and will not be cognizable exclusively by Courts of Revenue. ('50) 1950 AWR (HC) 691.

——Ss. 183 and 275 — Suit under S. 183 — Tenant wrongly ejected under S. 165 (2) — Not pursuing ultimate remedy against it by way of revision to Board — Relief, if can be given.

Section 183 of the Tenancy Act can certainly be invoked. The mere fact that the tenant did not pursue his remedy would not affect his right to seek restoration under Section 183. His suit can be decreed by the Board as under Section 275 it has a right to interfere in revision in all cases where a Subordinate Court has acted illegally or with material irregularity in the exercise of its jurisdiction. 1950 RD 157.

2. Suit cognisable by Revenue Court.

——Ss. 183, 180 — Suit by tenant against landlord who was preventing plaintiff from occupying his land, lies in revenue Court. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (1939), Ss. 180 and 183. AIR 1950 All 96 (DB).

——Ss. 183, 180, 242 — Suit under S. 9, Specific Relief Act — (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 9) — (Specific Relief Act (1877), S. 9) — AIR 1950 All 407 and ILR (1951) 2 All 16 and AIR 1954 All 199 and AIR 1946 All 486 and 1950 All LJ 645 and AIR 1953 All 733, Diss. from.

The ban imposed by Section 242 of the Act, on a civil Court, to entertain suit includes a suit even under Section 9, Specific Relief Act. It the jurisdiction of a Civil Court is barred, even a suit under Section 9, Specific Relief Act cannot be filed. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (17 of 1939), S. 180. AIR 1958 All 48 (DB).

——Ss. 183, 59, 180 and 242 (before amendment by Act 10 of 1947) — Suit by tenant against trespasser — Jurisdiction of civil Court.

A suit by tenant before the amendment of Ss. 180 and 183 in 1947 alleging that he is the tenant of the plots in dispute and that the defendant has forcibly taken possession of the same and is occupying them as trespasser, the allegations are not covered by Ss. 59, 180 or 183 and the jurisdiction of the Civil Court is not ousted. ——Ss. 183, 100, 242 — Specific Relief Act (1877), S. 9 — Jurisdiction — Civil and Revenue — Suit for ejectment in respect of agricultural holding framed under S. 9 — (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 9).

If the suit is on the basis of his previous possession or dispossession, it is cognizable by Civil Court; but if the plaintiff alleges his title to the land and also possession and dispossession by the defendants the suit is cognisable by the Revenue Courts under S. 180 or S. 183. See Specific Relief Act (1877), S. 9. AIR 1950 All 407 (DB).

4. Parties to suit.

●——S. 183 — Civil P. C. (1908), O. 1, R. 10 and O. 22, Rr. 1, 2 and 10 — Suit under S. 59, U. P. Tenancy Act or appeal arising out of it — Zamindar, after abolition of zamindari, is neither a necessary nor proper party — Civil Misc. Writ No. 1338 of 1961, D/- 5-9-1961 (All), Overruled. See Civil P. C. (1908), O. 1, R. 10. AIR 1963 All 549 (FB).

——S. 183 — Divided holding — Suit by only one co-tenant — Joinder of other co-tenant allowed by Court but not carried by Court staff — Suit under Section 183 was competent. See Civil P. C. (1908), O. 6, R. 18. 1952 RD (BR) 344.

——Ss. 183 and 246 — Co-tenants — Suit by same alone — Not maintainable — Suit by all — Withdrawal of some — No permission of Court recorded under O. 23, R. 1 (4) — Continuance of suit — Validity.

Held: The withdrawal of some of the plaintiffs would not be allowed without the consent of the others and in the absence of any record to show such consent the withdrawal, if any, does not affect the maintainability. 1952 RD 178: 1952 ALJ (Rev) 123.

——S. 183 — Zamindar not impleaded — Defect is fatal. ('52) 1952 RD (BR) 151.

——S. 183 — Suit under — Non-impleading of co-sharer landholders — Fatal.

The omission to implead other landholders (co-sharers) in a suit under S. 183 of the Tenancy Act is a fatal defect and the suit should be dismissed straightway. 1952 RD 151: 1952 ALJ (Rev) 217.

——S. 183 (1) (a) — Suit by tenant evicted by landholder subsequent to Amendment Act of 1947 — Benefit of S. 19 — No necessity to plead under O. 7, R. 6, C. P. Code — Necessary parties. Held: In a suit under S. 183 (1) (a), the lambardar having been joined as defendant he will be deemed to represent all the co-sharers of the mahal (vide S. 245, U. P. Tenancy Act).

It is optional for the plaintiff in such a suit to join the brothers and other co-sharers in cultivatory possession; the absence of co-sharers in the khewat as parties does not render the suit bad for their non-joinder. The suit is not under Section 183 (1) (b) when they may be necessary parties. 1952 ALJ (Rev) 309.

——S. 183 — Parties to suit under — Civil P. C. (1908), O. 1, R. 10.

Where there are more than one tenant in a holding all must join in a suit under S. 183. Where some of the co-tenants had abandoned the holding, they having ceased to be tenants their non-joining the plaint does not render the suit bad and incompetent. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 259.

——S. 183 — Scope — Suit by two of four co-tenants — Others alleged to have abandoned — Dispossession by defendants in collusion with the landholder — Joinder of several persons in possession.

The suit under Section 183 was maintainable as the dispossession was with the collusion and help of the landholder. 1952 ALJ (Rev) 259.

——S. 183 (a)— Necessary parties to suit under — Landholder — Not the entire body of proprietors — Impleading of the person claiming the right to eject — Sufficiency.

Held: A suit under Section 183 of the Act lies under Cl. (a) of it not only against the landholder but also against any person claiming to have the right as a landholder to eject the tenant.

It is not necessary to implead the lambardar or the entire body of proprietors in the suit under Cl. (a) of Section 183 of the Act. 1952 ALJ (Rev) 158: 1952 RD 302.

——Ss. 183 and 246 — Holding joint at the time of suit under S. 183 — Necessity for joining all co-tenants as parties.

It becomes imperative that all the co-tenants should have been joined and in their absence the suit will be defective by reason of the provisions of Section 246 of the Act. 1951 AWR (Rev) 13.

5. Right to sue.

——Ss. 183 and 295-A — Surrender by tenant-in-chief after Tenancy Amendment Act 10 of 1947 — Sub-tenant in possession under S. 295-A — Dispossession of — Right of suit under Section 183.

There can be no sub-tenant without a tenant-in-chief. Therefore when he was dispossessed along with the tenant-in-chief he cannot be deemed to be a tenant as contemplated by Section 183 of the Act to be able to recover possession thereunder. His remedy if any lies in the civil Court against the persons who dispossessed him. 1952 ALJ (Rev) 168: 1952 RD 347.

——S. 183 — Right to sue under — Person whose rights have been extinguished prior to the Tenancy Act coming into force, cannot be said to be a person who is deprived of his possession otherwise than in accordance with law for the time being in force who is entitled to sue for recovery of possession under S. 183 of the Act. 1951 AWR (Rev) 58: 1951 RD 41.

——S. 183 — Right to sue under — Tenant who has been ejected in accordance with the provisions of Section 175/178 of the Tenancy Act cannot be said to have been ejected otherwise than in accordance with the law and therefore he cannot succeed in a suit under Section 183 of the Tenancy Act unless he is able to establish fraud. 1951 RD 32: 1951 AWR (Rev) 32.

6. Maintainability.

——Ss. 183 and 3 — Suit for possession by tenant against co-sharers not entitled to eject — Suit is maintainable in civil Court. AIR 1955 NUC (All) 4161 (DB).

——Ss. 183, 180 (before amendment in 1947) — Lease by one co-sharer without consent of other co-sharers — Suit for declaring lease to be invalid and for possession — Jurisdiction of Civil Court — Such a suit is maintainable in a Civil Court. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (1939), Section 180. 1952 ALJ (Rev) 304.

——S. 183 — Suit under — Maintainability.

Where the plaint and the written statement support the view that the plaintiff had been dispossessed by the defendant through the agency of the landholder the suit by plaintiff under Section 183 is maintainable. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 259.

——Ss. 183, 175 — Tenant ejected under Section 175 — Proper remedy — Appeal or revision — Suit under Section 183 — Not maintainable. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (1939), S. 175. 1952 AWR (Rev) 209.

——S. 183 — Suit under — Maintainability — Persons treated as sub-tenants sued and ejected under Section 175 of the Tenancy Act who had allowed those proceedings to become final cannot maintain a suit under Section 183 on the ground that their ejectment was not in accordance with law unless they establish fraud. 1952 RD 116.

——S. 183 — U. P. Tenancy (Amendment) Act, S. 19 — Suit under — Plaintiff (legal representative of a tenant ejected in execution of a decree under S. 61 of the Oudh Rent Act — Application for execution in April, 1940 — Within time — Proceedings in execution and ejectment under Ss. 181 and 182 — Ejectment not wrongful — Suit not maintainable.

Held: The plaintiff was not ejected wrongfully from the holding. Section 19 of the (Amendment) Act, 1947, merely extends the period of limitation but does not dispense with the other requirements of Section 183. Suit under S. 183 is not maintainable. 1952 ALJ (Rev) 154: 1952 RD 329: 1952 AWR (Rev) 167.

——S. 183 — Suit under — Maintainability — Ejectment under S. 179 found to be invalid owing to want of notice to tenant — Proper remedy.

A suit under Section 183 would not be maintainable when an ejectment under Section 179 is found to be invalid on the ground of want of notice to the tenant. His proper remedy is to have the ex parte decree for ejectment set aside. 1952 AWR (Rev) 55: 1952 RD 62: 1952 ALJ (Rev) 73.

——S. 183 — Suit by tenant under S. 183 against zamindar — Actual occupier not impleaded — Decree — Subsequent suit under S. 183 against both — Maintainability — Limitation against tenant.

Held, as the suit against the zamindar for restoration had already been decreed, what the tenant wanted was now to eject and dispossess the trespasser, whom he had avoided to implead in the first suit under Section 183. His suit lay obviously under Sections 180 and not 183. His subsequent suit could only be treated as one under Section 180 and limitation should have been counted from the date the trespasser was in possession adversely to him and within his knowledge. ('51) 1951 RD 241.

——S. 183 — Suit under, for reinstatement — Ejectment in proceedings under S. 163, when plaintiff was a minor with no guardian ad litem appointed — Maintainability of suit. A suit for reinstatement under Section 183 of the Tenancy Act will certainly lie. 1951 AWR (Rev) 9.

——Ss. 183 and 163 — Suit under S. 183 — Maintainability — Minor tenant ejected in proceedings under 163 without a guardian ad-litem being appointed.

The order of ejectment in such proceedings is one without jurisdiction and hence a suit under S. 183 for restoration of possession would be maintainable. 1950 RD 153.

7. Bar to suit.

——Ss. 183, 180, 59 — Suit for redemption and possession of occupancy plots under usufructuary mortgage deed decreed in terms of compromise — Compromise decree amounting to sale of certain suit plots in consideration of mortgage money — Mortgagee no longer in permissive possession and becoming hereditary tenant after expiry of period of limitation — Suit by mortgagors under S. 59 for mere declaration of right and title as occupancy tenant is barred by Section 42 of Specific Relief Act. ——Ss. 183, 182 and 186 — Decree in a suit under S. 183 — Execution for delivery — S. 182 if applies — "Reinstatement" in S. 186 is not included in "delivery of possession" in S. 182 — Decree-holder's right to get possession at any time of the year — Pendency of appeal if a bar. Section 186, provides that the provisions of S. 181 shall apply to the execution of the decree for reinstatement of the tenant. Section 182 is not made applicable to the execution of the decree in a suit under S. 183 and considering the scheme of the Act also it is not applicable. He is entitled to get possession at any time of the year under S. 181 which is made expressly applicable.

The pendency of an appeal against the decree does not deprive the decree-holder of his advantage. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 319.

——S. 183 — Proviso — Scope.

The proviso prohibits a decree for actual possession in order to avoid future litigation if the plaintiff even though he was dispossessed unlawfully was liable to ejectment in the agricultural year. ('52) 1952 RD (BR) 53: 1952 All WR (Rev) 57: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 42.

9. Miscellaneous.

——S. 183 (1) (b) — Allowing 'to retain possession' — Fixed tenancy — Sale by Hindu widow — Rent accepted by landlord from alienee — Death of widow — Alienee's right as against reversioner — Receiving rent does not mean that possession is allowed against the rightful owners that is the reversioners. AIR 1958 All 500 (501) (Pt A) (Pr 9).

——S. 183 (1) (b) — 'Retain' — Meaning of.

The word 'retain' in S. 183 (1) (b) carries with it the connotation that the landholder wrongfully supports the right of the person who is in wrongful possession and denies the right of the person who is righfully entitled to possession and allows the person wrongfully in possession to continue in possession on the basis that he has an established right to continue in possession as against the claimant who has not. AIR 1958 All 500 (501) (Pt B) (Pr 9).

——S. 183 — Hereditary tenant — Surrender of land by him in favour of landlord in 1949 — Sub-tenant under him is entitled to continue in possession as sub-tenant and to bring suit under S. 183. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (17 of 1939), S. 295-A. 1957 All WR (HC) 67.

——Ss. 183, 87 (4) and 88 — Where a tenant in possession is imprisoned and does not leave any person in charge of the land responsible for payment of rent nor gives any notice to landholder about it, he will be presumed to have abandoned the holding under S. 87 (4). But a landholder who enters upon a holding in contravention of the provisions of S. 88 shall be deemed to have ejected the tenant otherwise than in accordance with the provisions of this Act within the meaning of S. 183. The tenant can take advantage of S. 19 of the Act 10 of 1947. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (1939), S. 87 (4). 1952 Rev Dec 378: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 275: 1952 All WR (Rev) 244.

Held: Even if T (tenant) can be presumed to have abandoned, the landlord not having complied with the provisions of S. 88 the tenant T can treat the entry of the landlord upon the land as unlawful and sue him under S. 183 by virtue of S. 89.

It cannot be said that T was not 'ejected' and he could not claim the benefit of S. 19 of the (Amendment) Act, 1947. 1952 RD 378: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 275: 1952 All WR (Rev) 244.

——Ss. 183, 175 — Ex-parte order of ejectment under S. 175 — Subsequent suit under S. 183 questioning the propriety of the order — Provisions under S. 19 — Effect of — Failure on part of the landholder to mention the local rates paid by him constitutes merely a silence as to facts, which he was not duty bound to disclose, and does not constitute fraud. ——S. 183 — Wrongful dispossession under — Proceeding under S. 171 pending — A plot therein sold in execution of decree for arrears of rent — Purchaser obtaining delivery — Zamindar securing dakhal of the plot — Ostensible ground of decree under S. 171.

Held: the possession obtained by the landlord of the plot purchased by the plaintiff could not be justified on the ground that he took it by the purchase subject to the liabilities of the defendant in the proceedings under S. 171 (as provided under S. 251 of the Act). The plaintiff not having been a party in the said proceedings under appeal before the Board the landlord's action in taking such possession was wrongful dispossession within the meaning of S. 183 of the Act.

It was the landlord himself who brought to sale the property purchased by the plaintiff during the pendency of proceedings under S. 171, Tenancy Act; so he is estopped from taking advantage of S. 52, T. P. Act (lis pendens). 1952 RD 164: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 215.

——Ss. 183 (2), 175 — Ejectment in accordance with law — What is — Ejectment under S. 175.

Ejectment of a tenant in accordance with the provisions of S. 175/178, U. P. Tenancy Act is not otherwise than in accordance with law and a suit by a tenant so ejected for recovery of possession under S. 183 cannot succeed unless he is able to establish fraud. ('52) 1952 RD (BR) 116.

——Ss. 186, 182, 183 — Decree in a suit under S. 183 — Execution for delivery — S. 182 if applies — "Reinstatement" in Section 186 is not covered by delivery of possession in S. 182 — No reliance can be placed on the word "reinstatement" in S. 186 to attract provisions of S. 182 — Section 186, provides that the provisions of S. 181 shall apply to the execution of the decree for reinstatement of the tenant. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (1939), S. 182. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 319.

——Ss. 186, 182 and 183 — Decree or order of ejectment for arrears of rent or unlawful possession — Time for execution.

A decree under S. 183 is a decree for recovery of possession from an unlawful occupant. Section 186, therefore, excludes the provisions of S. 182. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (1939), S. 182. ('52) 1952 All LJ (Rev) 83.

——S. 191 — Land granted rent free — Resumption by zamindar — Powers of — Conditions.

A comparative study of Ss. 191, 192 and 195 of the Act would evolve the position that land held rent free is resumable unless it, (1) is of a period prior to settlement; (2) is, at the same time, one of a non-service nature. 1952 All LJ 306: 1952 All WR (HC) 271: 1952 RD 297: AIR 1952 All 934 (935) (Pt C) (Pr 10).

——Ss. 192, 191 and 195 — Grant — When resumable.

A grant is resumable unless it is of a period prior to the permanent settlement, and is, at the same time, one of a non-service nature. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (1939), S. 191. AIR 1952 All 934.

——Ss. 192, 3 (22) — Retrospective effect if any — Holder of land from a rent-free grantee under Oudh Rent Act — If becomes sub-tenant under U. P. Tenancy Act — U. P. Tenancy Act is not retrospective to affect the rights acquired under the Oudh Act prior to the passing of the U. P. Tenancy Act. The statutory tenant becomes a hereditary tenant under S. 29 (a) of the Act. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (1939), S. 3 (22). 1952 All LJ (Rev) 308 (2).

——Ss. 194 and 119 — Agreed rent between landholder and tenant or grantee at favourable rent — Enhancement of rent — Limitations in S. 119 apply. ('51) 1951 RD 272: 1952 All WR (Rev) 12.

——S. 195 — Exception provided by section — Burden of proof.

The provision in S. 195 preventing ejectment furnishes an exception to the general rule allowing ejectment. This exception, on the face of it, has to be pleaded and proved by the party relying upon it affirmatively and not disproved by the landlord in a negative fashion. ('52) 1952 RD (BR) 297: 1952 All WR (HC) 271: 1952 All LJ 306: AIR 1952 All 934 (935) (Pt A) (Pr 7).

——S. 195 — Grantee — Ejectment — When not liable to ejectment.

Under S. 195 ejectment would not follow where the grantee had become a proprietor under S. 192 or where the grant was not for some specific purpose no longer required. ('52) 1952 RD (BR) 297: 1952 All WR (HC) 271: 1952 All LJ 306: AIR 1952 All 934 (935) (Pt B) (Pr 8).

——Ss. 195, 191, 192 — Land granted rent-free — Resumption by zamindar — Powers of — Conditions.

A comparative study of Ss. 191, 192 and 195 of the Act would evolve the position that land held rent-free is resumable unless it, (i) is of a priod prior to settlement and (ii) is, at the same time, one of a non-service nature. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (1939), S. 191. AIR 1952 All 934.

SECTION 197

——Ss. 197 and 3 (23) — Landholder letting out his holding on favourable or reduced rent to tenant — The tenant becomes a rent-free grantee — Landholder cannot subsequently say that he was merely tenant from very beginning. ('51) 1951 RD 272: 1952 All WR (Rev) 12.

SECTION 198

——S. 198 — Effect of on applicability of Section 180 to suit by Muafidar for possession — Section 180, being in general terms and not confined to hereditary tenants, its application to suit will not be excluded by S. 198. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (17 of 1939), Section 180. AIR 1954 All 355.

SECTION 205

——S. 205 — Section does not apply to proprietary rights between landlords inter se but only govern relations between landlord and tenant — Compromise in suit brought by co-sharers in respect of proprietary rights over their own grove would be governed by provisions of Civil P. C. (1908), O. 23, R. 1 and not by S. 246. AIR 1965 All 570 (570, 571) (Prs 5, 7) (DB).

——S. 205 (a) and (b) — Applicability.

Where a person claiming to be a grove-holder does not assert that the plot on which the grove stands was let or granted to his predecessors in-interest for the purpose of planting a grove, sub-section (a) of S. 205 does not apply to his case. The person then must rely on sub-section (b) for his grove-holder's rights but that sub-section deals with the case of a person who is a tenant and does not apply if the deft. does not prove himself to be a tenant before he becomes a grove-holder. ('51) 1951 All WR (Rev) 68: 1951 RD 51 (52).

——S. 205— Written permission — Grove-holder — Acquisition of rights.

Where the land on which the grove is planted is not held as a tenant, no written permission of the landlord is necessary even if the grove is planted after 7-9-1926. If the grove is planted with the knowledge of the landlord and is recorded as grove in the settlement papers and the landlord slept over his right to eject the grove-holder it will be presumed that the land was granted for the purpose of planting the grove and therefore, such person will acquire the rights of a grove-holder and cannot be ejected as trespasser. ('51) 1951 RD 54: 1951 All WR (Rev) 46 (47).

——S. 206 — Section does not apply to proprietary rights between landlords inter se but only governs relations between landlord and tenant — Compromise in suit brought by co-sharers in respect of proprietary rights over their own grove would be governed by provisions of Civil P. C. (1908), O. 23, R. 1 and not by S. 246. AIR 1965 All 570 (570, 571) (Prs 5, 7) (DB).

——S. 206 (a) — Scope. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (17 of 1939), S. 30. AIR 1955 NUC (All) 4168.

——S. 206 (a) — Applicability.

Section 206 (a) preserves rights of those who were grove-holders on the date when the Act came into force — Grove-holder ceasing to be grove-holder before Act by abandonment and consequent escheat to Zamindari according to custom — Section does not apply. ILR (1954) 1 All 156: 1953 All WR (HC) 349: 1953 All LJ 390: AIR 1953 All 709 (710) (Pr 5) (DB).

●——Ss. 206 (b), 180 and 183 — Applicability — Suit for possession of grove land — Cause of action arising before repeal of Tenancy Act by U. P. Zamindari (Abolition and Land Reforms) Act — Court having jurisdiction — (Tenancy Laws — U. P. Zamindari (Abolition and Land Reforms) Act (1 of 1951), Ss. 19 and 209) — (Tenancy Laws — U. P. Zamindari (Abolition and Land Reforms) Order (1952), Paras 2 and 5) — (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 9) — Section 206 (b) which applies to grove-holders, makes S. 183 applicable to grove-holders as well. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (17 of 1939), S. 183. AIR 1953 All 85 (FB).

——S. 206 (a) — Clause (a) whether retrospective — Escheat by custom taking place before commencement of Act — Section 206 (a) whether applies.

Section 206 (a) is not retrospective in its operation. In such circumstances S. 206 (a) does not apply and the zamindar is entitled to succeed. AIR 1952 All 174 (175) (Prs 9, 12).

——S. 206 (e) — Suit by dispossessed grove-holder under S. 183 — When maintainable.

Under S. 206 (e), the grove-holder when dispossessed has a remedy under S. 183, just as any tenant would have but this relates to dispossession either by the zamindar or persons claiming through the zamindar. ('52) 1952 All WR (Rev) 95: 1951 RD 226.

——S. 206 — Grove — Disappearance of — Reversion of land — Applicability to case of occupancy tenancy.

The argument that on the disappearance of grove the land reverted to the Zamindar under U. P. Land Revenue Act, 1901, would not apply where the land on which the grove had been planted is occupancy tenancy. 1952 All WR (Rev) 36: 1952 RD 19: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 24.

——S. 206 (c) — Transfer by one of two joint grove-holders in favour of landholder — Effect.

Clause (c) of S. 206 has made the interest of a grove-holder transferable by voluntary transfer. If one of the joint holders of a grove transfers his interest to the landholder it is valid and it cannot be contended that the other grove-holder becomes a sole grove-holder by survivorship. 1952 RD 157: 1951 All WR (Rev) 159.

——S. 206 (f) — Scope and effect — A suit in which the issue whether defendants are grove-holders is raised, it cannot be referred to Revenue Court, as no question regarding tenant right is involved. Section 206 (f) does not affect this question. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (17 of 1939), S. 288 (1). 1951 All WR (HC) 204.

——Ss. 209 and 3 (24) — Theka or lease.

Where though a deed purported to be a theka, it appeared that the entire land of the khewat was given to the defendant for cultivation for a specified amount and there was no other transfer of any proprietary right whatsoever in favour of the defendant the alleged thekadar, and there were no tenants from whom any rents were to be realised nor profits to be collected and even land revenue was to be paid by the lessor, the transaction is only a lease and not a genuine theka. 1951 RD 60.

SECTION 211

——S. 211 — Exercise of the rights of lessor by the thekadar is permissible except the two under S. 211 (1) (a) and (b) — No lease executed by him — Statement by thekedar in Court in a suit under S. 183 does not validate illegal lease. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 128: 1952 RD 251.

SECTION 213

——S. 213 — Arbitration Act (1940), S. 30 — Misconduct — Theka rights in village not divided by arbitrator appointed to make partition — There is no misconduct since such rights are not partible. See Arbitration Act (1940), S. 30. AIR 1955 All 573 (DB).

SECTION 214

——S. 214 (1) (d) — Sections 4, 8 of the Suits Valuation Act — Suit by lessor against thekadar for ejectment on ground that he was holding over after expiry of theka under Section 214 (1) (d), U. P. Tenancy Act (17 of 1939) — Suit governed by S. 7 (xi) (cc), Court-fees Act, and not by S. 7 (v) — Section 8, Suits Valuation Act, applies — Valuation for purpose of court-fees and jurisdiction would be the same — Court-fees Act (1870), S. 7 (v), (xi). See Suits Valuation Act (1887), S. 4. AIR 1952 All 658 (DB).

——Ss. 214 and 286 — Reference to Civil Court.

Where an admitted proprietor sues a thekadar for ejectment, the issue whether the defendant is a thekadar or not cannot be referred to the Civil Court. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 277.

——S. 214 — Suit under by Court of wards — The Manager or the Collector may bring a suit in the Revenue Court. See U. P. Land Revenue Act (3 of 1901), S. 34 (1). ('51) 1951 All WR (Rev) 113.

——S. 214 — Suit under against defendant as thekadar — Proprietary title of plaintiff not denied — Issue as to whether defendant was a thekadar — Reference to Civil Court — Necessity — The issue need not be referred to the Civil Court — The defendants' claim to be a tenant is entertainable by the Revenue Court. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (17 of 1939), S. 286. 1950 RD 120.

——Ss. 230, 245 — Claim of lambardar to haq-e-lambardari is not tenable when amount of rent is not realised by lambardar. AIR 1955 NUC (All) 5507 (DB).

(U. P. Tenancy Act (1939), S. 242.)

1. Jurisdiction of Civil/Revenue Courts.
2. Bar of Civil suit.
3. Effect of amendment on pending suits.
4. Jurisdiction of special Judge.
5. Jurisdiction to entertain appeal.
6. Miscellaneous.

1. Jurisdiction of Civil/Revenue Courts.

——Ss. 242 and 59 (2) — Suit whether cognizable by Civil Court or revenue Court — Substance of relief claimed should be looked to — Mere omission to implead land-holder can neither oust jurisdiction of revenue Court nor confer it on Civil Court — Plaintiff claiming as tenant filing suit for injunction restraining defendant from interfering with his possession — Defendant also claiming land through land-holder and adducing evidence therefor — Held, question of jurisdiction could not be decided on assertions made in plaint but only on recording a finding on defendant's evidence — Plaint could be returned to competent Court, even after recording evidence, if the suit was found not maintainable in Civil Court — Civil P. C. (1908), S. 9, O. 7, R. 10; O. 1, R. 9. 1965 All WR (HC) 214.

——S. 242 — Suit under Section 63 for declaration stayed by revenue Court — Second suit for injunction — Civil Court has jurisdiction to try — Question of jurisdiction is determinable on allegations in plaint and not on the allegations made by the defendant in the written statement. AIR 1946 All 379 (FB); AIR 1953 All 729, Distinguished. 1961 All WR (HC) 639: 1961 All LJ 854: ILR (1962) 1 All 194.

——S. 242 — Jurisdiction — Suit under S. 9, Specific Relief Act — C. P. Code, S. 9. The ban imposed by Section 242, on a Civil Court, to entertain a suit includes a suit even under Section 9 of Specific Relief Act. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (17 of 1939), S. 180. AIR 1958 All 48 (DB).

——Ss. 242, 81 (2) and 288 — Suit for damages for cutting trees — Question of ownership arising on pleadings — Jurisdiction of Civil Court — (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 9).

Under Section 242 read with Section 81 (2) Civil Court has no jurisdiction to entertain a suit for a declaration of ownership of trees. But a suit for damages for the cutting of trees and not for a declaration of ownership of them is maintainable in civil Court. 1958 All WR (HC) 64: ILR (1957) 1 All 38.

——S. 242 — Question in civil suit whether party is grove-holder — Power to refer issue. When one of the issues in a suit is whether a party is a grove-holder or not the Civil Court cannot refer that to Revenue Court but must decide the same itself. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (17 of 1939), S. 3. 1957 All LJ 809.

——S. 242 (as it stood before amending Act 10 of 1947) — Suit for cancellation of decree and for possession of agricultural plots — Suit is cognisable by Civil Court — (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 9). 1957 All WR (HC) 41.

——S. 242 and S. 180 (before amendment of 1947) — Suit against co-sharer in peaceful possession — Forum — (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 9).

The suit not covered by Section 180 so as to become a suit exclusively within jurisdiction of the revenue Court under Section 242. Such suit can be rightly instituted in Civil Court. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (17 of 1939), S. 180. AIR 1954 All 191.

——S. 242 — Omission of word "adequate" from section — Effect of — Relief obtainable in revenue Court — Every suit relating to such relief is excluded from cognizance of Civil Court.

The omission of the word 'adequate' from Section 242 goes to show that the intention of the Legislature was to exclude from the cognizance of a Civil Court every suit based on a cause of action, in respect of which any relief could be obtained in a revenue Court. AIR 1944 All 81, Dissent. from; AIR 1946 All 379, Ref. to. ('50) ILR (1950) All 431: AIR 1952 All 660 (661, 662) (Prs 6, 8, 10) (DB).

——S. 242 — Question of jurisdiction — Preliminary issue as to — Determination — Relevant materials — Suit for injunction against trespassers — Civil Court would have jurisdiction.

Where a preliminary issue is raised as to jurisdiction, in determining it at the initial stage the Court is confined to the allegations in the plaint and has to accept them as correct. But the position would be different after the suit has been tried and findings arrived at on those allegations. At that stage those findings would go to determine the jurisdiction of the Court. 1952 ALJ 202: 1952 AWR (HC) 541: AIR 1952 All 496 (497) (Pt B) (Pr 4).

[Overruled in AIR 1953 All 729.]

——S. 242, Expl. 2 — Suit for possession by removal of thatched-shed — Suit if maintainable in Revenue Court — Civil P. C. (1908), S. 9.

In such a suit, the relief for removal cannot be granted by the Revenue Court. Section 242, Expl. II would, therefore, not exclude the jurisdiction of the Civil Court. 1952 All WR (HC) 203: AIR 1952 All 274 (274) (Pt B) (Pr 7).

——S. 242 — Jurisdiction — Pronote for purchase of produce of 'phulwari' and 'kondar' — Suit for price based on pronote is cognizable by Civil Court only and not by Revenue Court — Civil P. C. (1908), S. 9. 14 RD 313, Dist. ('51) 1951 All WR (HC) 634: 1951 All LJ 632.

——S. 242 — Status as groveholder — Relief for declaration of.

Where the relief sought for in a suit is substantially a relief for a declaration of plaintiff's status as a groveholder, the suit clearly falls within the jurisdiction of the revenue Court. AIR 1950 All 660 (661) (Pt A) (Pr 5).

2. Bar of Civil Suit.

——Ss. 242, 59 — Bar to jurisdiction of Civil Court — Suit by plaintiff for declaration of right as tenant and that leases in favour of defendants and decrees passed by Revenue Court were not binding on him — Held, leases or decrees without any legal force cannot oust jurisdiction of revenue Court nor is it conferred on civil Courts even if particular relief is claimed — C. P. Code (1908), S. 9. 1965 All LJ 70: AIR 1965 All 514 (515, 516) (Pt A) (Prs 7, 8).

Tenancy (Amendment) Act (10 of 1947), S. 27 — Ejectment decree obtained after 1-1-1940 — Execution — Annulment of — Reinstatement after 1947 Act — Liability to ejectment in execution of decree obtained after 1-1-1940 — Second suit for ejectment is barred. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy (Amendment) Act (10 of 1947), S. 27. AIR 1965 All 116 (FB).

● ——Ss. 242 and 180 — Suit for ejectment under Section 180 in Civil Court is barred — Civil P. C. (1908), S. 9 — Provisions of S. 242 cannot be defeated by pleading that some co-sharers are not willing to join suit under S. 180. Kedar Nath v. Jamuna, 1964 All WR (HC) 219: 1964 All LJ 442: ILR (1964) 2 All 398: AIR 1965 All 116 (120) (Pt D) (Pr 19) (FB).

——Ss. 242 and 180 — Plaint allegations making suit one under S. 54, Specific Relief Act — Facts entitling plaintiff to relief under S. 180, not pleaded — Jurisdiction of Civil Court —If barred.

The jurisdiction of the Civil Court is not barred simply because the plaintiff could have by alleging the additional facts, obtained relief under Section 180 of the U. P. Tenancy Act. ● ——Ss. 242, 180 and 183 — Applicability — Illegal dispossession from agricultural lands — Suit under S. 9, Specific Relief Act, 1877 — Whether barred by S. 242 — 'Cause of action' — (Specific Relief Act (1877), S. 9).

The jurisdiction of the Civil Court is not barred by virtue of Section 242 in respect of suit filed under Section 9 of the Specific Relief Act for obtaining possession over agricultural land from which the plaintiff alleged his illegal dispossession within six months of the date of the suit. 1957 All LJ 783; AIR 1958 All 48, Overruled. Yar Muhommad v. ——S. 242 (as amended in 1947) — Bar of Civil suit — Cause of action on which Revenue Court can grant relief — Civil suit is barred even if relief is not as wide as can be granted by Civil Court — (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 9). AIR 1955 NUC (All) 5493.

——S. 242 — Bar of Civil Suit — Determining factor is cause of action — What is cause of action stated — One must have regard to allegation made in plaint or application and not to allegation in written statement — (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 9 and O. 2, R. 2). AIR 1955 NUC (All) 2729 (DB).

——S. 242 — Applicability. The only point for revision is whether the suit instituted in the Court of the Munsif could be instituted in the Revenue Court, and the jurisdiction of the Munsif was barred under S. 242 of the Act. The jurisdiction of the Civil Court could not be said to be barred. See Specific Relief Act (1877), Section 9. AIR 1954 All 109.

——S. 242 — Suit under S. 9 Specific Relief Act — Defendant not alleged to be tenant — Jurisdiction of Civil Court is not barred — (Specific Relief Act (1877), S. 9).

The suit lies in the Civil Court and the jurisdiction of that Court is not barred by S. 242, U. P. Tenancy Act. ('52) 1952 All WR (HC) 64: AIR 1953 All 733 (733) (Pr 7).

The suit was barred from cognizance of a Civil Court by Section 242, since relief sought lies in the Revenue Court. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (17 of 1939), S. 60. AIR 1953 All 729 (DB).

——Ss. 242, 54 (2) (before its repeal in 1947) — Acquisition proceedings under S. 54 — Restoration proceedings under S. 54 (5) — Suit for declaring restoration order ultra vires — Jurisdiction of Civil Courts to grant declaration not barred — (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 9). See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (1939), S. 54 (2). AIR 1953 All 578.

——Ss. 242, 180 — Perpetual lease by Karta — Suit for possession by junior members of family — Lease alleged to be in excess of karta's power — Plaintiffs not claiming either in plaint or in proceeding to be persons entitled to admit tenant to suit land — Suit does not fall under Section 180 — Trial of suit by Civil Court is not barred. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (1939), S. 180. AIR 1951 All 581.

——Ss. 242, 180 — Suit for ejectment by tenant against trespasser does not lie under S. 180 — The jurisdiction of Civil Court to entertain such suit is not barred by reason of that section. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (1939), S. 180. 1951 All WR (HC) 370.

——Ss. 242, 59, 180, 183 (before amendment by Act 10 of 1947) — Suit by tenant against trespasser — Jurisdiction of civil Court.

The jurisdiction of the Civil Court is not ousted since the allegations in the dispute are not covered by the three Sections, 59, 180 and 183. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (1939), S. 59. AIR 1950 All 449.

3. Effect of amendment on pending suits.

——S. 242 — Tenant suing trespasser for ejectment in Civil Court — Section 180 amended pending suit — Suit triable by revenue Court — Retrospective effect of Section 180 — Return of plaint to Revenue Court — High Court in second appeal had power to direct the plaint to be returned for presentation to a Revenue Court. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (17 of 1939), (as amended by U. P. Act 10 of 1947), S. 180. AIR 1957 All 257 (DB).

——S. 242 (as amended by U. P. ——Ss. 242 and 180 — Suit under S. 180 against trespasser filed in Civil Court — Amendment of Section 180 depriving civil Court of jurisdiction — Effect of amendment on pending suit — Interpretation of Statutes — Retrospective effect. The amendment relates to a change in the procedure and so has immediate effect. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (1939), S. 180. AIR 1952 All 188.

[Overruled in AIR 1955 NUC (All) 2689.]

4. Jurisdiction of Special Judge.

——S. 242 — Claim as to arrears of profits due to landlord applicant — Jurisdiction of special judge. There is no bar by virtue of S. 242 of the Act to the Special Judge determining the question. See Debt Laws — U. P. Encumbered Estates Act (25 of 1934), S. 4. AIR 1955 NUC (All) 4162.

5. Jurisdiction to entertain appeal.

——S. 242 — Jurisdiction to entertain appeal — C. P. Code, S. 9.

The jurisdiction to entertain a suit is quite different from the jurisdiction to entertain an appeal; Section 242 U. P. Tenancy Act and Section 9, C. P. Code, deal with the jurisdiction to entertain a suit and not with the jurisdiction to entertain an appeal. 1957 All WR (HC) 853: ILR (1957) 1 All 287: AIR 1957 All 257 (258) (Pt B) (Pr 6) (DB).

——S. 242 — Suits for cancellation of lease if covered by Rule. The suit is covered by S. 180 of the Act and R. 4 (2) (v). See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Rules (1952), R. 4 (2) (v). AIR 1955 NUC (All) 4453.

——S. 243, Sch. 2, List 2, S. No. 13 — Civil P. C. (1908), O. 41, R. 11 — Board can summarily dismiss appeal without hearing either appellant or his pleader. 1964 All WR (HC) 226.

——S. 243 — Order of remand by Dist. Judge — Appeal.

U. P. Tenancy Act makes no provision for an appeal from an order of remand by a District Judge. 1957 All LJ 846: 1957 All WR (HC) 887.

——S. 243 — Civil P. C. (1908), S. 144 — Applicability.

Section 144 Civil P. C. (1908) applies to suits under the Act vide Section 243 read with Lists 1 and 2 of the Second Schedule. See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 144. AIR 1956 All 663 (DB).

——Ss. 243, 263, 271, 272 — Order under S. 47, Civil P. C. — It is an order and not decree, under the Act — C. P. C. is superseded in this respect by special provisions — U. P. Tenancy Act is self-contained in matters of appeals and second appeals — Section 272 clearly bars second appeal from orders under Section 47 C. P. C. — (Interpretation of Statutes — General and Special Provisions) — (Civil P. C. (1908), Pre.). AIR 1955 NUC (All) 2021.

——Ss. 243, 268, 273 — Summary dismissal of second appeal — Review — Civil P. C. (1908), O. 47, R. 1.

It is discretionary with the Court to admit an appeal for hearing or to dismiss it summarily after hearing the appellant or his counsel or without hearing him. The exercise of the discretion by one member is hardly a ground for review of that Member's order by another Member of the Board. ('51) 1951 RD 14: 1951 AWR (Rev) 33 (35).

——S. 243 — The whole of Order 41 including R. 27 as amended by the High Court is applicable to U. P. Tenancy Act. See Civil P. C. O. 41, R. 27. ('51) 1951 All WR (Rev) 196.

——Ss. 243 and 268 — Power of Board to reject second appeal summarily.

Under Section 243 read with List 2 of the Second Schedule (Serial No. 13) it is provided that nothing in R. 11 of O. 41, shall require the Board to hear any party before rejecting an appeal summarily. Section 268 of the Act lays down that the Board may either admit an appeal or may summarily reject it. 1951 AWR (Rev) 33: 1951 RD 14.

——Ss. 244, 94, 180 (2) — Declaration under Section 180 (2) — Assessment of rent under Section 94. It is open to the trial Court to assess rent under Section 94 of the Act, while giving declaration under Section 180 (2). See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (1939), S. 94. AIR 1953 All 236.

——Ss. 246, 205 and 206 — Applicability— Sections do not apply to proprietary rights between landlords inter se but only govern relations between landlord and tenant — Compromis in suit brought by co-sharers in respect of proprietary rights over their own grove would be governed by provisions of C. P. Code (1908), O. 23, R. 1 and not by S. 246 of Act — Suit brought by co-sharers for declaration of their proprietary rights — One co-sharer withdrawing with permission of Court — Compromise between remaining co-sharers transferring their share is valid to that extent and transferee can acquire rights under compromise — Second Appeal No. 93 of 1952, dated 22-1-1960 (All), Reversed. ——S. 246 — Suit under S. 180 — S. 246 applies to such suit. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (17 of 1939), S. 180. AIR 1955 NUC (All) 2017.

——S. 246 — Tenancy rights devolving upon widow — Surrender by widow — Heirs of widow can sue for recovery of possession under Section 183 within three years of widow's dispossession. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (1939), S. 183. 1952 ALJ (Rev) 123.

——S. 246 — Mortgage of share of Mahal to one of co-sharers — Right of mortgagee to sue for whole rent of mortgagor's expropriety tenancy.

The suit was, maintainable under Section 246, as the mortgagors being also the co-sharers, it was not necessary to implead them as plaintiffs and the suit by the mortgagee could be treated as a suit on behalf of all the co-sharers conjointly for the whole rent. 1951 All WR (HC) 54.

——S. 246 — Right of a co-sharer to admit tenant to a plot.

Unless there is a local usage or special contract to the contrary, a co-sharer cannot admit a tenant to the plot. 1951 AWR (Rev) 42: 1951 RD 34.

——S. 246 — Applicability — Joint grove-holders — Suit by one alone — Maintainability.

As the provisions of Section 246 of the Act do not apply to joint grove-holders, one of them alone can maintain a suit under S. 183 of the Act. 1951 RD 167: 1951 AWR (Rev) 152.

——S. 246 — Bar under — Suit under S. 183 in which all co-tenants had not joined — Private division of holding to which zamindar was not a party.

Where the holding was joint all the co-tenants should join in suit under Section 183 in regard to that holding. Else it would be barred by Section 246 of the Act. 1950 RD 118.

SECTION 247

——S. 247 — Intervener — Right to appeal and to file cross-objections.

An intervener in suit for arrears of rent has no right to file an appeal against the decree and necessarily cannot also file cross-objections. 1951 RD 208: 1951 AWR (Rev) 209.

The interest of the tenant-judgment-debtor cannot pass to the sub-tenant under Section 251 (3) before the sale is confirmed. It not necessary that the sale must be confirmed and that the judgment-debtor must go through the form of filing an application under O. 21, R. 89, Civil P. C. and depositing money in Court. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 43: 1952 All WR (Rev) 63: 1952 RD (BR) 75.

——Ss. 251 (3) and 270 — Order setting aside sale — Appeal by sub-tenant applying under S. 251 (3) — Maintainability.

Where a sub-tenant applies within the period allowed by law claiming the judgment-debtor's interest under Section 251 (3) he acquires a legal status and it is not necessary to deposit any amount at the time of making the claim. When, therefore, an order is passed setting aside the sale the order affects the sub-tenant's interest adversely and he is entitled under Section 270 to prefer an appeal against that order. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 43: 1952 All WR (Rev) 63: 1952 RD (BR) 75.

——S. 251 — Decree for arrears of rent —Execution under Section 251 — Decree should be in respect of whole rent of holding — Decree obtained by some of zamindars in respect of their share of rent — Sale of holding in execution of such decree is invalid. 1951 RD 236: 1951 All WR (Rev) 218.

——S. 254 — Possession of abandoned holding — Suit for ejectment of trespasser — Period of limitation — Starting point.

Mere possession over an abandoned holding for any number of years is not enough to make a suit against the person in possession time barred unless it is shown that such possession was unlawful to the knowledge of the Zamin-dar. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (1939), S. 180. ('51) 1951 All WR (Rev) 158.

——S. 265 — Question of jurisdiction decided by trial Court — Question in issue in appeal — Jurisdiction of Commissioner is ousted to decide the question. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 136: 1952 RD (BR) 165.

——S. 265 (3) — Right of appeal — Plea of jurisdiction — Nature of.

A plea of jurisdiction contemplated by Section 265 (3) should not be a plea that if the facts alleged by the defendant are taken into account, the Court will be found to have no jurisdiction. AIR 1950 All 340 (341) (Pr 7).

——S. 265 (3) — Question of jurisdiction in issue in appeal but not raised by appellant — Competency of appeal before Commissioner.

Where the Court of first instance decided that the suit was rightly instituted in the revenue Court and this question of jurisdiction was in issue in appeal, although not raised by the appellant, the appeal lies to the District Judge and not to the Commissioner. 1950 RD 210: 1950 All WR (Rev) 25.

(U. P. Tenancy Act (1939), S. 267.)

1. Applicability.
2. Finding of fact.
3. New plea.
4. Parties.
5. Second appeal — Interference.

1. Applicability.

——S. 267 — Second appeal to the Board — Suit under S. 49, Tenancy Act — Compromise between plaintiff and tenants-defendant excluding landlord — Rejection of — Want of stamp — Decision on merits — Settlement entry — Presumption — Rebuttal of question of fact.

Held: It is true that the presumption of correctness attached to a settlement entry is rebuttable; but the finding that it had not been rebutted is a question of fact not to be raised in second appeal.

The rejection of the compromise document for want of stamp at the time of writing judgment when it had been admitted in evidence without objection cannot be supported; however the landholder who was a necessary party to the suit not having joined in the deed of compromise between the others no decree could be passed thereon under O. 23, R. 3, C. P. Code, and hence it was rightly decided on the merits of the claim. 1952 ALJ (Rev) 237: 1952 RD 253.

——S. 267 — Second appeal to the Board — Ex parte order a piece of evidence in the case — Finding consequent — Objection in second appeal.

Prior judgments, not operating as res judicata are relevant under Section 13 of the Evidence Act; therefore there was error in law when the appellate Court relied on an ex parte order recognising the exproprietary rights claimed by the plaintiff in the suit under Section 183 of the Act, as a piece of evidence in the case and the finding based thereon cannot be questioned in second appeal. 1952 AWR (Rev) 130: 1952 RD 321: 1952 ALJ (Rev) 207.

——S. 267 — Entry in land records.

Long standing entries, which are supported by the evidence of actual possession, cannot be allowed to be challenged in second appeal. 1952 All WR (Rev) 99: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 124: 1952 RD (BR) 136.

——S. 267 — Challenging of facts accepted by Additional Commissioner.

The appellant is not entitled to challenge the facts. 1952 All WR (Rev) 104: 1952 RD (BR) 142: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 121.

——S. 267 — Question of limitation not raised in Lower Courts — Party not debarred from raising it in second appeal — (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 100). 1952 All WR (Rev) 211: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 110: 1952 RD (BR) 144.

——S. 267 — Concurrent findings of two lower courts — Second appeal — Findings cannot be brushed aside unless shown perverse. 1952 RD (BR) 107: 1952 All WR (Rev) 116: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 84.

——S. 267 — Oral evidence adduced by party Whether trustworthy is a question of fact — Finding thereon cannot be disturbed in second appeal. 1952 RD (BR) 105: 1952 All WR (Rev) 67: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 82.

——S. 267 — Finding of lower appellate Court on question of consent to co-tenancy — Finding not perverse — Cannot be questioned in second appeal. 1952 RD (BR) 113.

——S. 267 — Appealability — Dismissal of appeal by Assistant Commissioner on appellant's advocate reporting no instructions —Amounts to a decree and is appealable. 1951 RD 75: 1951 All WR (Rev) 87.

2. Finding of fact.

——S. 267 — Finding of fact — If can be set aside in second appeal—Certificate under R. 166 of Revenue Court Manual — When required to challenge.

Held, the finding is one of facts and cannot be upset in second appeal unless it is found to be without any basis of evidence or vitiated by any other illegality or irregularity.

Held, further that, if a finding of fact is challenged on a question of law, it is not necessary to give a certificate as required by R. 166 of the U. P. Revenue Court Manual. 1952 ALJ (Rev) 203.

——S. 267 — Concurrent findings of facts — If and when can be ignored.

The concurrent findings of facts of the lower Courts cannot be brushed aside in second appeal unless they are shown to be perverse. 1952 ALJ (Rev) 84: 1952 RD 107: 1952 AWR (Rev) 116.

——S. 267 — Settlement entry — Nature — Finding by lower Court — Binding effect.

A settlement entry can be rebutted and where evidence in rebuttal has been carefully considered by the Court below the finding of fact cannot be disturbed in second appeal. 1952 All WR (Rev) 67: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 82: 1952 RD (BR) 105.

——S. 267 — Lower appellate Court's finding of fact — When and when not to be upheld in second appeal.

Though ordinarily the findings of fact of the lower appellate Court should be accepted in second appeal, where the lower appellate Court has misread and misinterpreted the evidence, its order cannot be upheld. 1952 ALJ (Rev) 81: 1952 RD 110: 1952 AWR (Rev) 100.

——S. 267 — Erroneous conclusion as to fraud based on finding of fact — Interference —Civil P. C. (1908), S. 100 and O. 41, R. 2.

The conclusion of both the courts below cannot be allowed to remain undisturbed even though no objection was made in the memorandum of second appeal. ('52) 1952 All WR (Rev) 55: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 73: 1952 RD (BR) 62.

——S. 267 — Finding of fact — Finding that sale deed is fictitious is finding of fact and cannot be interfered with in second appeal —Mere entry of purchaser's name in patwari papers is of no importance (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 100). 1952 All LJ (Rev) 67: 1952 All WR (Rev) 77: 1952 RD (BR) 139.

——S. 267 — Concurrent finding of fact — Attack in second appeal.

A concurrent finding of fact cannot be allowed to be challenged in second appeal unless shown to be perverse. 1952 AWR (Rev) 34: 1952 ALJ (Rev) 12: 1951 RD 268.

——S. 267 — Interference in second appeal — Finding of fact when material evidence has not been considered.

A finding on a question of fact of the first appellate Court can be interfered with in second appeal if material evidence has not been considered. 1952 AWR (Rev) 6: 1951 RD 285: 1952 ALJ (Rev) 39.

——S. 267 — Settlement entry — Presumption of correctness — Presumption is rebuttable— Finding that presumption has not been rebutted is one of fact — Finding cannot be questioned in second appeal — (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 100). 1952 RD (BR) 253.

——S. 267 — Finding of fact — Transfer of tenancy rights whether genuine is a question of fact and finding thereon cannot be questioned in second appeal. 1951 All WR (Rev) 71: 1951 RD 55.

——S. 267 — Finding of fact — Interference — Perverse finding.

It is settled law that a finding of fact can be interfered with in second appeal if it is perverse and when it is further unsupported by evidence, it cannot be sustained. 1950 RD 163.

——S. 267 — Finding of fact — Interference in second appeal — Perverse finding.

A finding of fact is liable to be interfered with in second appeal when it is based on a superficial consideration of the evidence and is even otherwise perverse. 1950 RD 125 and 127.

[Vol. 14.] Fn.D. 7.

3. New plea.

——S. 267 — New plea of non-joinder — Not allowed — Suit under S. 59/183, U. P. Tenancy Act — Acquisition of Tenancy rights under Section 180 (2) — Finding in first appeal — New case set up by Court — Legality.

The plea for the first time in second appeal, that the suit is bad for non-joinder of co-sharers landlords, cannot be allowed to be raised.

The plea of the suit being barred by S. 42 of the Specific Relief Act is not sustainable.

Where the plea of acquisition of hereditary rights by prescription under S. 180 (2) was not raised in the suit by the plaintiffs, the appellate Court cannot set up such a new plea to the prejudice of the opposite party and decree the suit on that basis. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 311.

——S. 267 — Second appeal — New plea of limitation — No material on record — If can be allowed.

Where a plea of limitation is raised for the first time in arguments in the second appeal, the Court cannot allow such a plea to be raised. 1951 All WR (Rev) 50: 1951 RD 45.

——S. 267 — New plea of law — When entertainable in second appeal.

A new plea of law which does not require a fresh finding for the decision of it can be taken at any time, even in second appeal. 1952 All WR (Rev) 37: 1952 RD 17: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 7.

4. Parties.

——S. 267 — Zamindar letting out land to certain persons after ejectment of plaintiff — Persons impleaded in lower Courts but not in second appeal — Persons held ought to have been impleaded in second appeal being necessary parties even though they did not contest suit in Courts below — (Civil P. C. (1908), O. 41, R. 20). 1952 All WR (Rev) 125: 1952 RD (BR) 213.

5. Second appeal — Interference.

——Ss. 267 and 271 — Appeal from order of Commissioner granting review in proceedings under Act — Board cannot interfere except as provided for an appeal from an order mentioned in R. 1 of O. 43 of Civil P. C. — (Civil P. C. (1908), O. 43, R. 1 and O. 47, Rr. 4 and 7). 1952 RD (BR) 205.

——S. 267 — Second appeal — Finding as to co-tenancy based on village records — Interference.

Though village records are not conclusive evidence in regard to co-tenancy and there is also no presumption of their correctness they are good evidence of facts which they record and when two lower Courts have based their finding as to co-tenancy on such evidence, there is no reason to disagree in second appeal and reverse the finding on the ground that the evidence was not conclusive. 1951 RD 102: 1951 All WR (Rev) 123.

——S. 267, Sch. 4, Group B, Serial No. (18) — Question of fact — Contiguity — When can be raised in second appeal.

The question of contiguity of plots is a question of fact which can be raised in second appeal only if no additional evidence is required. 1951 All WR (Rev) 67: 1951 RD 62.

——S. 267 — Second appeal — Change of case — Pleadings.

The appellant cannot be allowed to change the case at the time of the argument in second appeal from what he had stated in the ground of his appeal and which he had accepted in the two lower Courts in spite of what is asserted in the plaint. 1951 All WR (Rev) 65: 1951 RD 42.

——S. 267 — U. P. Land Revenue Act (3 of 1901), S. 57 — Second appeal — Interference — Finding discarding settlement entry on inadequate grounds.

As under S. 57 of the U. P. Land Revenue Act a settlement entry shall be presumed to be correct until the contrary is proved, where a finding discards such entry on quite inadequate grounds it is liable to be interfered with in second appeal. 1951 RD 41: 1951 All WR (Rev) 58.

——S. 267 — Second appeal — Interference — Finding not based on evidence.

Where the finding of the lower Court has no basis in evidence at all and there has been an omission to judicially consider the value of certaine evidence, it can be set aside in second appeal. 1950 RD 206.

——Ss. 268 and 273— Summary dismissal of appeal — Review.

Where the Board in the exercise of its discretion dismisses summarily a second appeal it is competent for it to review the order subsequently and admit the appeal for hearing on merits. 1951 All WR (Rev) 37.

——Ss. 268, 243 — Power of Board to reject second appeal summarily — Section 268 lays down that the Board may either admit an appeal or may summarily reject it. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (1939), S. 243. 1951 RD 14: 1951 All WR (Rev) 33.

——S. 270 — Locus standi to appeal — Sub-tenant who had applied under S. 251 (3) — Right to appeal against setting aside sale.

The sub-tenant being aggrieved by the order is entitled under S. 270 to prefer an appeal against the order. 1952 RD 75: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 43: 1952 All WR (Rev) 63.

SECTION 271

——S. 271 — Order under S. 47, Civil P. C. — Second Appeal — It is an order and not decree, under the Act — Civil P. C. is superseded in this respect by special provisions — Section 272 clearly bars second appeal from orders under S. 47, Civil P. C. — U. P. Tenancy Act is self-contained in matter of appeals and second appeals. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (17 of 1939), S. 243. AIR 1955 NUC (All) 2021.

——Ss. 271 and 267 — Appeal from order of commissioner granting review in proceedings under Act — Board cannot interfere except as provided for an appeal from an order mentioned in R. 1 of O. 43 of Civil P. C. (1908), See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (1939), S. 267. ('52) 1952 RD (BR) 205.

——Ss. 271 and 275 — Appeal against order of remand by the Commissioner — Competency — Revision.

No appeal has been provided in S. 271 (2) of the Act against an order of remand by the Commissioner, but the appeal can be treated as a revisionu in a fit case. 1951 RD 79: 1951 All WR (Rev) 97.

——S. 272 — Order under S. 47, Civil P. C. — Second Appeal — Section 272 clearly bars second appeal from orders under S. 47, Civil P. C. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (17 of 1939), S. 243. AIR 1955 NUC (All) 2021.

——Ss. 272 and 273 — Orders rejecting appeal and review application without notice to respondents — Subsequent application under S. 273 read with S. 151, Civil P. C. — Order on — Notice to respondents not necessary — Civil P. C. (1908), S. 151. 1952 RD (BR) 14.

(U. P. Tenancy Act (1939), S. 273.)

1. Application for review.
2. Retrospective operation.
3. Summary rejection.
4. Power of single member to alter or modify order.
5. Review — Pinciple to be applied.
6. Review by Board.

1. Application for review.

——S. 273 — Board can review its own order passed on review — Order 47, Rule 9 has no application. AIR 1955 NUC (All) 2294 (DB).

——Ss. 273 and 293 — Rules under S. 293 — Rule 170 — Rule does not apply to application for review. AIR 1955 NUC (All) 1517.

[Overruled on another point in AIR 1956 All 698.]

——S. 273 — 'Appeal' includes review. See U. P. Board of Revenue (Declaration of Procedure and Validation) Act (30 of 1953), S. 3. AIR 1955 NUC (All) 171.

——Ss. 273 and 274 — Scope.

The terms of S. 273 and the juxtaposition of Ss. 273 and 274 make it sufficiently clear that whereas the provisions of O. 47, Civil P. C. govern applications for the review of judgment by all revenue Courts other than the Board of Revenue, the power of the latter to review its own decrees or orders is derived exclusively from S. 273. AIR 1955 NUC (All) 171.

——S. 273 — Decision of the Board — Application for review — Wrong view of law, the only ground.

A wrong view of the law is no ground for review except when there is a mistake on the face of record. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 352: 1952 RD 221.

——S. 273 — Application for review of an order by one member — Power to admit by another — Grounds for review — Bar of the Zamindari Abolition Act — U. P. Land Tenure (Legal Proceedings) (Removal of Difficulties) Order, 1952.

Held: There can be no objection to a single member to admit a petition for review of an order but if the order has to be set aside, then it requires the concurrence of another.

It is only when there is mistake of fact or law on the face of the record the review can be allowed.

A decision is not liable to be reviewed and modified every time a new interpretation is put on a question of law. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 279: 1952 All WR (Rev) 240.

——S. 273 — Scope of the power of review — Successive applications to review same order — Competency.

Though the power of the Board in a review is unlimited, it cannot be allowed to be abused by making one application after another for a review unless it is shown that something new of exceptional importance was not before the Board or the Hon'ble Member. The restriction provided in O. 47, Civil P. C. against review of a review should be ignored only in exceptional cases where grave injustice has been done or where a clear provision of law has been ignored. 1951 All WR (Rev) 36: 1951 RD 14.

2. Retrospective operation.

——S. 273 — Retrospective operation — Review of order or decree passed long before amendment — Maintainability.

An order or decree passed in second appeal arising out of a suit under S. 171 of the Act long before amendment came into force by which a person ceased to be a sub-tenant cannot be altered on review on account of change in law introduced by subsequent amendment. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (Amendment) Act (10 of 1947), S. 295-A. 1951 All WR Rev 181.

3. Summary rejection.

——S. 273 — Review — Revision, summary rejection of — Vakalat undated — Civil P. C., O. 3, R. 4, overlooked — Allowed.

The view of law on which the petition was summarily rejected has clearly overlooked the provisions of O. 3, R. 4, Civil P. C. It deserved to be set aside in review. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 302.

——S. 273 — Summary rejection of appeal and of subsequent review application — Application for setting aside orders thereon — Necessity of notice.

No notice is necessary before the orders are set aside on an application under S. 151, Civil P. C. read with S. 273, U. P. Tenancy Act. 1952 All WR (Rev) 33: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 9.

——S. 273 — Orders rejecting appeal and review applications without notice to respondents — Subsequent application under S. 273 read with Section 151, Civil P. C.—Order on — Notice to respondents not necessary. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (1939), S. 272. 1952 RD (BR) 14: 1951 All WR (Rev) 33.

——S. 273 — Application to review summary rejection of second appeal without hearing — Competency.

It is a matter of discretion with the Court to admit an appeal for hearing or to dismiss it summarily after hearing the appellant or his counsel or without hearing him and the exercise of such discretion by one Member is hardly a ground for review of that Member's order by another Member of the Board. 1952 RD 14: 1951 All WR (Rev) 33.

4. Power of single member to alter or modify order.

——S. 273 — Case arising out of U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act — Single member of Board can review order of predecessor — (Tenancy Laws — U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Beforms Rules (1951), R. 239) — (U. P. Land Revenue Act (3 of 1901), S. 7 (2)). 1959 All LJ 611: 1959 All WR (HC) 432: ILR (1959) 2 All 173: AIR 1960 All 93 (96) (Pt D) (Pr 7) (DB).

——S. 273—Powers of a single member to alter or modify the order of any member except himself.

A single member cannot set aside or modify the order passed by another member without the concurrence of a second member. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 308 (1).

——S. 273 — Order by one member — Another member can admit application for review for consideration — Order sought to be reviewed cannot be set aside by such member without concurrence of another member. 1952 RD (BR) 400: 1952 All WR (Rev) 240: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 279.

——S. 273 — Powers of a single member to review.

A single member of the Board should be reasonably held to possess the power to review his own order. This power should not extend to reviewing an order of two members or of a single member other than himself. 1952 RD 230: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 249: 1952 All WR (Rev) 206.

——S. 273 — Powers of single member of Board to review.

A single member shall not have power to alter or reverse a decree or order passed by the Board or by any member other than himself. It can be done only with the concurrence of two members. 1952 All WR (Rev) 33: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 9.

5. Review — Principle to be applied.

——S. 273 — Rejection of review petition without hearing petitioner — Principle of natural justice is not violated. AIR 1955 NUC (All) 1517.

[Overruled on another point in AIR 1956 All 698.]

——S. 273 — New interpretation put on question of law — Decision is not liable to be modified by reason of such interpretation. 1952 RD (BR) 400: 1952 All WR (Rev) 240: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 279.

——S. 273 — Ground for review.

The fact that a question is important is not a valid ground for the review of the decision on the allegation that it is not correct. 1952 RD (BR) 400: 1952 All WR (Rev) 240: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 279.

——S. 273 — Decision of Board — No important provision of law overlooked — Decision cannot be reviewed. 1952 RD (BR) 221.

——S. 273 — Review of decree or order passed by the Board — Principle to be applied.

Under S. 273 of the U. P. Tenancy Act the principle laid down in sub-section (3) of S. 220 of the U. P. Land Revenue Act about review under that Act has to be followed. 1952 RD 14.

6. Review by Board.

——S. 273 — Second review application to Board of Revenue — Competency — Question of general importance — The question whether the Board of Revenue has power to entertain a second application for review raises a question of general importance and is covered by Cl. (c) of Art. 133 (1), Constitution of India. See Constitution of India, Art. 133 (1) (c). AIR 1957 All 116 (DB).

——S. 273 and Rules under S. 293, R. 170 — Powers of Revenue Board or review (U. P. Land Revenue Act (3 of 1901), S. 7) — 1954 All LJ 628, Overruled. 1956 All LJ 510: 1956 All WR 518: AIR 1956 All 698 (699, 700, 702, 703) (Prs 4, 7, 10, 11, 26, 27, 30) (DB).

——S. 273 — Applicability of O. 47, Civil P. C. — Has no application to review made by Board of Revenue — It is open to member to allow opposite parties' application for review and second appeal simultaneously. AIR 1955 NUC (All) 3529.

——Ss. 273 and 293 — Rule 170 or the Rules framed under S. 293 — Powers of review — Board of Revenue can delegate power of review but single member cannot exercise delegated power without concurrence of second member. AIR 1955 NUC (All) 3529.

——S. 274 — Scope. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (17 of 1939), S. 273. AIR 1955 NUC (All) 171.

——S. 274 — Decree of predecessor reviewed by Additional Commissioner — Merits of decree not entered into — It cannot be held that Additional Commissioner had no jurisdiction to review decree passed by predecessor — (Civil P. C. (1908), O. 47, R. 1). 1952 All LJ (Rev) 136: 1952 RD (BR) 165.

(U. P. Tenancy Act (1939), S. 275.)

1. Competency of revision.
2. Cross objections in revision.
3. Effect of repeal of Act by U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act.
4. Interference in revision.
5. Joint application by J. D. and D. H.
6. Power of Board.
7. Time limit for application.
8. "Case decided".

1. Competency of revision.

——S. 275 — Order passed in appeal in proceeding under S. 27 of Act 10 of 1947 — Revision under S. 275 lies against such order. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 282 (DB).

——S. 275 — Scope and applicability — Order under S. 13 of U. P. Act 10 of 1949 — Revision — Maintainability — Tenancy Laws — U. P. Agricultural Tenants (Acquisition of Privileges) Act (10 of 1949), S. 13).

The authority under S. 275 is confined to cases under that Act and does not extend to any case decided by a subordinate Court in which no appeal lies either to the District Judge or to the Board.

No revision lies to the Board under S. 275 of the Tenancy Act against an order passed by the Commissioner under S. 13 of the U. P. Agricultural Tenants (Acquisition of Privileges) Act, 1949. ('52) 1952 All LJ (Rev) 145: 1952 RD (BR) 191.

——S. 275 — Suit remanded for decision according to law — No ground for revision. ('52) 1952 All LJ (Rev) 64: 1952 All WR (Rev) 70: 1952 RD (BR) 69.

——S. 275 — Revision — Grounds for — Wrong view of law.

Though a wrong view of law held by a Court is no ground for revision, yet a revision would lie when a Court has committed illegality of procedure in exercising its jurisdiction. 1951 All WR (Rev) 236: 1951 RD 251: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 15.

——Ss. 275 and 29, Explanation — Finding based on Explanation to S. 29 — Finding can be questioned in revision. 1952 All WR (Rev) 237: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 329: 1952 RD (BR) 372.

——Ss. 275, 271 — Appeal against order of remand by the Commissioner — Competency — Revision.

No appeal has been provided in S. 271 (2) of the Act against an order of remand by the Commissioner, but the appeal can be treated as a revision in a fit case. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (1939), S. 271. 1951 All WR (Rev) 97: 1951 RD 79.

——S. 275 (c) — Revision — Grounds — Wrong view of the law — Illegal procedure in exercising jurisdiction.

A wrong view of the law held by the Court is no ground for revision as the Court cannot be deemed to have exercised a jurisdiction illegally. A revision lies only when a Court has committed illegality of procedure in exercising its jurisdiction. 1951 All WR (Rev) 48: 1951 RD 47.

——S. 275 — Order under U. P. Agricultural Tenants (Acquisition of Privileges) Act (10 of 1949) is not revisable under S. 275 of the Act. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Agricultural Tenants (Acquisition of Privileges) Act (10 of 1949), S. 13 ('51) 1951 RD 263.

——S. 275 — Scope of revisional jurisdiction.

Where a suit is decreed on the decision of a question of an adoption and there is no appeal against the judgment, the finding as to adoption cannot be challenged in an application for revision in respect of certain proceedings in review of the judgment. 1951 RD 33: 1951 All WR (Rev) 35.

——Ss. 275, 163 and 165 — Order for ejectment — Setting aside of, under S. 151, Civil P. C. — Revision — Civil P. C. (1908), S. 151.

Interference in an order passed by a Court under S. 151, Civil P. C. would only be called for if such an order had no basis whatever and was perverse or resulted in material injustice. ('50) 1950 All WR Rev 12: 1950 RD 194 (196, 197).

2. Cross objections in revision.

——S. 275 — Cross objections in revision — Maintainability — Correction of obvious mistake in finding of Lower Court.

No cross-objections in a revision lie but the Board is competent to rectify an obvious mistake in the finding of the Lower Court. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 214: 1952 RD (BR) 267.

——S. 275 — Remand on the ground of non-joinder of a party, objection to which was not taken at the earliest opportunity.

Order is vitiated by material irregularity of procedure and is liable, to be set aside in revision. 1951 All WR (Rev) 97: 1951 RD 79.

3. Effect of repeal of Act by U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act.

——S. 275 — Effect of repeal of Act by U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act upon right of revision — (U. P. General Clauses Act (1 of 1904), S. 6).

Though under section it is discretionary with the Court to interfere or not to interfere in revision a party has got the right to apply to the revisional Court to exercise its discretion in a judicial manner. This right has not been taken away by the repeal of the U. P. Tenancy Act by U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act.

Further in view of S. 6 of the U. P. General Clauses Act a revision arising out of the proceedings stated for asserting the right to reinstatement by an ejected tenant is a legal proceeding in respect of such right and may be continued and conducted as if the U. P. Tenancy Act as amended by Act 10 of 1947, under which the right to reinstatement had been acquired, has not been repealed. 1952 RD (BR) 377: 1952 All WR (Rev) 230: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 246.

4. Interference in revision.

——S. 275 (c) — Decision by Assistant Commissioner as to payment of rent — Interference in revision — (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 115 (c)).

Where the Assistant Collector in appeal on a consideration of the evidence before it, reaches the conclusion that certain payments of rent to the Zamindar, as alleged by opposite parties, were not proved, it cannot be said that he has committed either any error of procedure or any material irregularity in the manner in which he reached that conclusion.

A contrary decision arrived at by the Commissioner in revision on the evidence is really an interference on a question of fact which in the opinion of the Commissioner, was erroneously decided by the Assistant Collector. It is not an interference on any matter of procedure and such an interference is not contemplated by the provisions of S. 275 (c). 1955 All WR (HC) 494: 1955 All LJ 570: ILR (1955) 2 All 724: AIR 1955 All 557 (559) (Pt A) (Pr 8) (DB).

——S. 275 — Constitution of India, Article 226 — Certiorari — Error on face of record — Power of superior Court to disturb decision of inferior Court on question of jurisdiction, extent of, indicated — Board of Revenue erroneously entertaining and allowing revision under S. 275, U. ——S. 275 — Revision — Fresh evidence — If admissible — Dismissal of application for reinstatement — Right of one of the evicted tenant to apply — Erroneous decision — Interference by the Board — One of the several ejected tenants can maintain an application for reinstatement without joining the other cotenants either as applicants or defendants. See U. P. Tenancy (Amendment) Act, S. 27. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 331.

——S. 275 — Revision — Board of Revenue — Inherent powers to interfere — Proceedings under S. 27, U. P. Tenancy (Amendment) Act — Powers under S. 275 — Exercise of — Proper.

The Board, in spite of the provision in S. 5 of Land Revenue Act, has no inherent power of revision over the subordinate Court.

U. P. Act 10 of 1947 is not an independent Act but an amending Act and the proceedings under S. 27 are also governed by the Tenancy Act which Act 10 of 1947, has amended for certain purposes and the Board has powers to interfere under S. 275 of the Tenancy Act. The uniform practice is also in accordance with the law. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 315.

——S. 275 — Grounds of interference — (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 115).

For the interference of the Board in revision the case must not only fall within one of the clauses of S. 275 of the Act but there should also be some material injustice done to the applicant. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 248.

——S. 275 — Decision not supported by legal evidence — Relief under S. 27 of the Tenancy (Amendment) Act — Not available — Grant of, in a case where the section is not applicable — The order is liable to be set aside on that ground. 1952 All WR (Rev) 132: 1952 RD 322: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 199.

——S. 275 — U. P. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy (Amendment) Act (10 of 1947), S. 27 (3), Proviso. 1952 RD (BR) 294.

——S. 275 — Board, when would interfere in revision.

The Board would not interfere in exercise of its revisional powers unless in addition to the case falling under one of the clauses of Section 275, U. P. Tenancy Act, some material injustice has been caused to the applicant. 1952 All WR (Rev) 115: 1952 RD (BR) 243.

——S. 275 — Interference in revision — Dismissal of appeal by Commissioner — Failure to implead party — Necessary and proper parties — Distinction.

Held: An appeal without impleading some of the parties to the suit who were not necessary but only proper parties is not liable to be dismissed. Failure to implead a party is fatal only if he is a necessary party.

Where there is nothing to show that they were not necessary parties and the applicant himself having impleaded them in the trial Court the order of the Commissioner is justified. 1952 RD 209: 1952 All WR (Rev) 113: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 191.

——S. 275 (c) — Exercise of jurisdiction illegally or with material irregularity — Civil P. C. (1908), Section 115.

Where on the stay of suits under S. 63 by Act 7 of 1950 the plaintiffs apply for withdrawal of relief under S. 63 and addition of relief under S. 60 and for amendment of the plaint accordingly, the trial Court clearly acts in the exercise of its jurisdiction with material irregularity when it allows the amendment which involves the defendant in the continuance of a litigation which had been definitely stayed under Act 7 of 1950. 1951 RD 113 (115): 1951 All WR (Rev) 106.

——S. 275 — Interference in revision — Principles governing.

The consistent view of the Board has always been that it will not interfere in exercise of its revisional powers unless in addition to the case falling under one of the clauses of S. 275 of the Tenancy Act some material injustice has been caused. 1950 RD 197.

——S. 275 — Interference in revision with orders passed under S. 151, Civil P. C.

Interference with an order passed by a Court under S. 151, Civil P. C., setting aside an order of ejectment would only be called for if such an order had no basis whatsoever and was perverse or resulted in material injustice. 1950 RD 194.

5. Joint application by J. D. and D. H.

——S. 275 — Joint application by J. D. and D. H. in regard to setting aside a sale — Competency.

A joint revision to the Board cannot be ruled out as incompetent even though they might have preferred separate revisions before the Commissioner. 1952 RD 75: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 43: 1952 All WR (Rev) 63.

6. Power of Board.

——S. 275 — Order of Commissioner dismissing appeal against order by Assistant Collector cancelling declaration under S. 6 — Revision to Revenue Board — Section 275 of the Act does not empower the Board of Revenue to revise an order made by the Commissioner. See U. P. Tenants (Acquisition of Privileges) Act (1949), S. 6. AIR 1955 NUC (All) 2653.

——S. 275 — Order under Section 27, U. P. Tenancy (Amendment) Act, 1947 — Revision — Jurisdiction of Board of Revenue to entertain — Tenancy Laws—U. P. Tenancy (Amendment) Act (10 of 1947), S. 27 (6).

The Board of Revenue, U. P., has jurisdiction under S. 275 to entertain revision in a case under S. 27, U. P. Tenancy (Amendment) Act, 1947.

Section 27 of the Amending Act is a part and parcel of the U. P. Tenancy Act, 1939. Hence clearly an application for revision in a case under S. 27 of the Amending Act is maintainable under S. 275 of the U. P. Tenancy Act, 1939. AIR 1940 Oudh 33 and AIR 1937 Oudh 124, Diss. from. ('52) 1952 All WR (HC) 235: 1952 All LJ 196: ILR (1953) 2 All 866: AIR 1952 All 820 (830) (Prs 4, 6, 7) (DB).

——S. 275 — Revision — Exercise of powers — Inherent powers of Courts when can be exercised.

In the exercise of powers of revision the Board will not maintain an illegal order. The powers are intended to be exercised in the interests of justice but it does not extend to the substitution of one order for another.

The lower appellate Court was perfectly right in setting aside the second order (i.e.), by the successor but it was wrong in setting aside the prior order of the predecessor in Office of S. D. O., passed right or wrong, in the exercise of his jurisdiction when no appeal against that order was pending before him and that, in the exercise of his inherent powers without giving the parties affected an opportunity to support it. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 326.

——S. 275 and (Amendment) Act, 1947, S. 27 — Right to apply under S. 27 —One out of several co-tenants —Order of Collector based on misinterpretation of S. 27 — Revision.

One out of several co-tenants can maintain an application under S. 27 of the Amendment Act for reinstatement.

The Collector's order based on a misinterpretation of S. 27 of the Amendment Act cannot be held to be final. The Board has interfered in such cases and it has not been interfered with by the High Court under Art. 226. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 282.

——S. 275 — Single revision against different orders in same proceedings.

The Board has ample powers to examine all the orders passed by the subordinate Courts in a single proceeding even if the irregularity of the orders is brought to its notice by a single application. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 280: 1952 RD (BR) 291.

——S. 275 — Powers under — Discretionary and not mandatory.

——S. 275 — Revisional jurisdiction — Exercise of — Principles.

The Board would not exercise its revisional jurisdiction unless the party applying for revision is shown to have suffered any substantial injustice. There can be no injustice when a suit is remanded for decision according to law. 1952 RD 69: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 64: 1952 All WR (Rev) 70.

——S. 275 — Revision — Power to reject application on technical ground — Civil P. C. (1908), O. 22 (General) O. 22, R. 4.

An application for revision should not be thrown out on the ground of technical defect. The Board will not be bound to hear the application on merits but may, if it thinks fit, reject the application on the technical ground after hearing the parties on that ground. 1951 All WR (Rev) 70.

——S. 275 (c) — Powers of the Board under — Illegal order of ejectment under S. 165 (2) — Reinstatement under S. 27 of the U. P. Tenancy (Amendment) Act.

Under S. 275 (c) of the U. P. Tenancy Act, the Board could either suo motu or on a reference by a subordinate Court, exercise the jurisdiction, if there was any illegality or material irregularity in the exercise of jurisdiction by a subordinate Court. 1950 RD 122: 1951 All WR (Rev) 3.

7. Time limit for application.

——S. 275 — Revision — Time limit for application — No cause shown for delay — Section 3 of Limitation Act — Decision found to be in proper exercise of jurisdiction — Interference suo motu, if called for.

The Board may act suo motu in any proper case; no period of limitation is prescribed for such action. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 185: 1952 All WR (Rev) 160: 1952 RD 348.

——S. 275 — Application for revision beyond time admitted — No rejection thereafter.

Once an application for revision is admitted by the Board it amounts to a decision to call for the record of the case and when the record has been received, it becomes the duty of the Board to examine the case and see if interference is called for in the interests of justice. The application cannot be thrown out on the ground of a technical defect. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 134: 1952 RD 249.

——S. 275 — Revision before Additional Commissioner beyond 4 months of order of the Collector — Dismissal — Revision before the Board within 4 months of the order of Additional Commissioner is barred. ——S. 275 — Revision—No period — Prevailing practice of 4 months—Powers of Board — Special cases. The Board has powers to revise an order of the lower Court on one of the grounds mentioned in sub-section (2) of Section 275 of the Act if an illegality or irregularity is brought to the notice of the Board beyond the 4 months time. 1952 RD 151: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 217.

——S. 275 — Interest of tenant judgment-debtor cannot pass to the sub-tenant — Not necessary that sale must be confirmed — The judgment debtor need not go through the form of filing an application under O. 21, R. 89, Civil P. ——S. 275 — Revision — Powers of Board — The suit can be decreed by the Board as under S. 275 it has a right to interfere in revision in all cases where a subordinate Court has acted illegally or with material irregularity in the exercise of its jurisdiction. See U. P. Tenancy Act (17 of 1939), S. 183. 1950 RD 157.

8. "Case decided".

——S. 275 — 'Case decided' — Meaning — Civil P. C. (1908), S. 115.

Where the plaintiffs' foremost claim was that they were the Sir and khudkasht holders of the land in suit, the amendment of the plaint giving up the claim under S. 63 amounts to striking off a pleading. This amounts to a 'case decided' and a revision lies. ('51) 1951 RD 113 (114): 1951 All WR (Rev) 106.

——S. 276 — Revisional powers of High Court.

The revisional powers of the High Court that can be exercised in respect of a suit filed in a Revenue Court can only be those powers as are provided for in S. 276, U. P. Tenancy Act and not the powers of revision as provided for by S. 115, Civil P. C. 1957 All LJ 846: 1957 All WR (HC) 887.

——S. 276 — Scope — (Civil P. C. (1908), Section 150).

Where the appellate Court which has jurisdiction to entertain and hear an appeal, holds in reversal of the trial Courts' decision that the suit was cognizable by a Revenue Court, the decision even if erroneous is not open to revision under S. 276, U. P. Tenancy Act, as no question of jurisdiction of the appellate Court is involved in such case. That section applies only when there is illegal assumption of jurisdiction or failure to exercise jurisdiction or irregular exercise of jurisdiction. 1953 All WR (HC) 454 (1): 1953 All LJ 554: AIR 1954 All 50 (51) (Pr 3).

——S. 286 —Claim to be under-proprietor made in defence to suit under S. 194 — If should be referred to civil Court.

It is a claim clearly within the jurisdiction of the revenue Courts and not to the civil Court as the former Courts are the competent Courts which could give a finding on such a question. 1951 RD 272: 1952 AWR (Rev) 12.

——Ss. 286 and 214 — Issue when to be referred to a civil Court — Suit under S. 214 to eject defendant as thekadar — Proprietary title to plaintiff not denied — Issue as to whether defendant was a thekadar — Reference to Civil Court need not be made — In any case an issue should be referred to the civil Court only if it is clear that that is an issue of proprietary rights which the Revenue Courts cannot decide. 1950 RD 120.

——S. 288 — Suit for damages for cutting trees — Question of ownership arising on pleading — Jurisdiction of Civil Court.

Suit is maintainable in Civil Court for cutting trees and not for declaration of ownership. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (17 of 1939), S. 242. 1958 All WR (HC) 64: ILR (1957) 1 All 38.

——S. 288 — Applicability.

Section 288 applies only when a suit relating to agricultural land is instituted in a civil Court; a suit is not a suit relating to agricultural land, where it is a suit relating only to the cutting of trees owned by the plaintiff. ILR (1957) 1 All 38: 1958 All WR (HC) 64.

——Ss. 288 and 81 (2) — Tenant right.

Tenant right is not the same thing as a right of ownership of trees, and provisions of S. 288 (1) would not apply but provisions of S. 81 (2) would apply to the case. 1947 ALJ 671 Dist. 1958 All WR (HC) 64: ILR (1957) 1 All 38.

——S. 288 — Question in civil suit whether party is grove-holder — Power to refer issue. The Civil Court cannot refer the question to the Revenue Court but must decide it itself. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (17 of 1939), S. 3. 1957 All LJ 809.

——S. 288 — Plea of tenancy — Reference to revenue Court — Conditions.

Before a plea of tenancy raised in a suit relating to agricultural land can be referred to the appropriate revenue Court two conditions must be fulfilled: (1) that the suit must relate to agricultural land. (2) that the question regarding tenancy right should arise therein. If either of the two pre-requisites is absent, the Court concerned has no jurisdiction to refer any such issue to the revenue Court. 1957 All LJ 809: 1957 All WR (HC) 793.

——S. 288 — Repeal of — Effect of, on suit prior to its commencement — Determination of tenancy rights— Jurisdiction of civil Court. The suit having commenced before U. P. Act (1 of 1951), the issue related to the tenancy rights of the plaintiffs and had to be referred to the Revenue Court under Section 288 of the Act. Civil Court had no jurisdiction to decide the issue. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act (1 of 1951), S. 339. 1957 All LJ 544.

——S. 288, Explanation — "Such question has not previously been determined by a Court of competent jurisdiction" — Compromise vesting title to land in plaintiff — Compromise incorporated in decree in previous suit — Issue regarding tenancy must be held to have been determined by competent Court — Plea of tenancy raised, cannot be considered as bona fide but for purpose of ousting jurisdiction of civil Court. AIR 1955 NUC (All) 2020.

——S. 288 (1) — Civil Court — Revenue Court seized of proceedings under S. 12 of the U. P. Agri. Rel. Act.

It cannot be said that a revenue Court seized of proceedings under Section 12 of the U. P. Agricultural Relief Act is a "Civil Court" for the purpose of Section 288 (1) of the U. P. Tenancy Act. 1952 ALJ 170: 1952 AWR (HC) 217: AIR 1953 All 146 (146) (Pt A) (Pr 9).

——S. 288 — Applicability — Question whether a person is a grove-holder raised in a civil suit — Procedure to be followed.

Having regard to the provisions of S. 206 and Section 59 of the Tenancy Act the determination of the question whether a person is a grove-holder or not lies within the exclusive jurisdiction of the Revenue Court. Accordingly, when such a question is raised in a suit pending in a Civil Court, the issue must be framed and referred to the Revenue Court for determination. AIR 1951 All 358 (359) (Pr 5).

——Ss. 288 (1), 206 (f) — Issue as to status of grove-holders in Civil suit — Reference to Revenue Court.

Under Section 288 (1) it is only a question relating to tenant's right that has to be referred to the revenue Court. A grove-holder not being a tenant and Section 288 not being one of the provisions made applicable to grove-holders by Section 206 (f), an issue in a civil suit as to whether the defendants were the grove-holders of the suit land cannot be referred to the Revenue Court for a decision under S. 288. 1951 All WR (HC) 204.

——S. 289 (2) — Applicability to appellate Court.

Sub-section (2) of Section 289 of the Act gives the power to make a reference to a Court, whether civil or revenue, in which a suit, application or appeal having been rejected by a Court of one description, is subsequently filed in case that Court disagrees with the finding of the other Court. It is not only applicable to the proceedings in the Court of first instance but is applicable to the proceedings in the appellate Court as well. Sub-section (4) of the section supports this view. 1959 All LJ 859: 1959 All WR (HC) 659.

——Ss. 290, 291 — Defect in jurisdiction when cannot be cured.

The defect of jurisdiction cannot be cured under Sections 290 and 291, in cases where a suit is wrongly instituted in a Civil Court and an appeal would lie to the Commissioner, if it was rightly instituted. 1950 All WR (HC) 691.

——S. 291 — Duty of appellate Court.

Section 291, is meant to prevent multiplicity of legal proceedings. Where from the judgment of the trial Court it does appear that the relevant material was on the record and the procedure mentioned in sub-section (2) of S. 291 was not necessary to be followed, the only course open to the appellate Court under the law was to proceed with the appeal and to decide it on merits. 1960 All LJ 165: 1960 All WR (HC) 100.

——S. 295-A — Person a sub-tenant remaining in possession for period of five years under Section 295 — Period expiring on 31-12-1944 and right to remain in possession coming to an end — He is not entitled to benefit under Section 295-A introduced by Amending Act of 1947. 1953 All WR (HC) 362: 1953 All LJ 428: AIR 1953 All 723 (724) (Pr 9) (DB).

——S. 295-A — Applicability — Tenancies already extinguished.

Section 295-A merely provides that all sub-tenants would be entitled to retain possession over their holdings for five years from the date of commencement of the Amending Act 10 of 1947. The section can have no operation so far as tenancies already extinguished are concerned. 1952 All LJ 92: AIR 1953 All 254 (255) (Pt A) (Pr 3).

——S. 295-A (Inserted by U. P. Tenancy (Amendment) Act 10 of 1947).

Applicability — Suit for ejectment of sub-tenant — Defendant denying his status — Court finding that defendant was sub-tenant — Suit decreed before amending Act came into force — Appeal against decree dismissed — Second appeal after amending Act came into force — Defendant's counsel accepting position that he was sub-tenant — Mere fact that decree was passed in ejectment of defendant held would not change his status and, therefore, section was applicable. 1952 All LJ 51: 1952 RD (BR) 44: AIR 1953 All 217 (217) (Pt A) (Pr 7) (DB).

——S. 295-A (Inserted by U. P. Tenancy (Amendment) Act (10 of 1947)) —Suit in ejectment — Anticipatory decree.

As according to Section 295-A, a sub-tenant is not liable to ejectment for a period of five years from the date the amending Act came into force, a decree in anticipation of the cause of action arising on the expiry of five years cannot be passed in a suit for ejectment of the sub-tenant. 1952 All LJ 51: 1952 RD (BR) 44: AIR 1953 All 217 (217) (Pt B) (Pr 8) (DB).

——S. 295-A — Scope of.

By S. 295-A of the U. P. Tenancy Act all sub-tenants who were sub-tenants on the date the Amendment Act came into force have been given the benefit to remain in possession for five years notwithstanding anything contained in the Act. This would cover all cases of ejectment under any section of the Act. There is no justification to read into the section any exception with regard to any particular section of Act. 1952 RD 73: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 56: 1952 All WR (Rev) 62.

——S. 17, 27, 31, Proviso I — Decree in ejectment proceedings under S. 171 of the Tenancy Act — Appeal pending — Act 10 of 1947 coming into force — Tenants rights under proviso 1 to S. 31 — Application under S. 27 for reinstatement.

Held: The existing decree in the case cannot be amended in the light of the provisions of S. 17 of Act 10 of 1947 by the Court in second appeal the proceedings of the second appeal and the lower Courts are to be quashed. The appellant will have a right to apply under S. 27 for reinstatement under Proviso 1 to S. 31 of the Act He will have the benefit of limitation in his favour even in the petition already so filed. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 189.

——S. 18 — Change introduced by — Plea based upon — Opportunity to opposite party to rectify — Necessity.

Where the change introduced by S. 18 of the U. P. Tenancy (Amendment) Act, 1947, comes into effect during the pendency of an appeal in a suit filed under S. 180 of the Tenancy Act, before the appellate Court proceeds to decide the appeal according to the new law, he must give an opportunity to the plaintiff in the suit to add the other parties and to prove his right to sue alone. 1951 RD 195 (2): 1951 All WR (Rev) 184.

——S. 19 — Benefit of section.

A tenant ejected through Court or dispossessed otherwise than through Court is entitled to the benefit of S. 19. But a person prevented from taking possession is not entitled to the benefit of the section. 1952 All WR (Rev) 245: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 299: 1952 RD (BR) 375.

——S. 19 — Benefit of section — Physical dispossession necessary.

For the purposes of S. 19 ejectment means physcial dispossession. Where the party is not physically dispossessed but is merely prevented from obtaining possession he is not entitled to the benefit of the section. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 266.

——S. 19 — Land holder entering upon holding in contravention of provisions — Benefit under S. 19 is available to tenant. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (17 of 1939), S. 87 (4). 1952 RD (BR) 378: 1952 All WR (Rev) 244: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 275.

——S. 19 — Benefit of section.

The benefit of S. 19 is admissible only to a tenant who was ejected and not to a tenant who was prevented from obtaining possession. 1952 All WR (Rev) 252: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 271.

——S. 19 — Applicability — No eviction of the tenant through process of law.

It is not correct that S. 19 of the (Amendment) Act applied not only to cases of tenants ejected through the agency of Courts but also to cases of tenants wrongfully dispossessed outside. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 240: 1952 RD 245 (1).

——S. 19 — Applicability — Heirs of ejected tenant.

Section 19 applies only to cases where the tenant had himself been wrongfully ejected from his holding and would not cover the case of his heirs who are prevented from getting possession. 1952 RD (BR) 231: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 132.

——S. 19 — Applicability — Persons wrongfully dispossessed outside Court.

The extended period of limitation under Section 19 applies not only to cases of tenants ejected through the agency of Courts but also to cases of tenants wrongfully dispossessed outside Court. 1952 RD (BR) 242: 1952 All WR (Rev) 119: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 133.

——S. 19 — Section 19 does not extend privilege of extension of period of tenants preventing from obtaining possession. Privilege is given to only those who are wrongly dispossessed. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (17 of 1939), S. 183. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 123: 1952 RD (BR) 178.

——S. 19 — Section applies even to tenants wrongfully ejected outside Court and not only through agency of Court. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 118: 1952 RD (BR) 171.

——S. 10 — Applicability — Tenant prevented from obtaining possession of holding — Limitation under S. 183 of Tenancy Act, 1939 — Expired — Further period of six months — Allowance of.

When the tenancy rights devolved on the wife of the tenant on his death and she surrendered possession of the tenancy to the landlord, the heirs of the deceased are prevented from getting possession of the same and they can file a suit under S. 183 of the Tenancy Act for which the period is 3 years from the date of surrender as aforesaid. But if that period expired before the coming into force of the Act 10 of 1947, he is entitled to apply in a further period of six months from the coming into force of that Act. It applies only to cases of tenants ejected but not to those who were prevented from taking possession. 1952 ALJ (Rev) 123: 1952 RD 178.

——S. 19 — Applicability — Surrender of holding — Effect.

The right of the tenant to sue under S. 183, is not affected by dispossession out of Court, Section 19 is applicable to a case of dispossession, if wrongful, in such a case also if it is only between 1st January, 1940 and 1st September 1946.

Surrender by the tenant is not wrongful dispossession to found a suit under S. 183 of the Tenancy Act. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 118: 1952 RD 171.

——S. 19 — Dispossession of tenant by illegal surrender — He can recover possession under Section 183, U. P. Tenancy Act 1939 — Period of extended limitation provided by S. 19 of Amending Act is available to him provided remedy is not already claimed and refused. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 117: 1952 RD (BR) 170: 1952 All WR (Rev) 226.

——S. 19 — Scope of — U. P. Tenancy Act, 1939, S. 183 — Dispossession of tenant — Illegal — Remedy by suit under S. 183 — Refusal of — Extended period — Availability.

Section 19 of Act 10 of 1947 provides only for fresh period of limitation within which a suit under S. 183 may be instituted even in cases where the tenant illegally ejected has allowed the right to sue under the section to become barred before the Act 10 of 1947.

It does not provide for a revival of the cause of action for such a suit or the remedies thereunder when it is barred by the provisions of any statute. 1952 RD 170: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 117: 1952 All WR (Rev) 226.

——S. 19 — Scope — Does not affect S. 11, Civil P. C. (1908). 1952 RD (BR) 215: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 114.

——S. 19 — Holding privately divided between two recorded co-tenants — Both agreeing to pay their respective rents separately — Holding is not finally divided and co-tenants continue to be liable for arrears of rent jointly and severally — Decree for arrears of rent under S. 61 Oudh Rent Act against both — Subsequently disputed land settled on one of them only — Such tenant recorded and paying rent—Both are jointly and severally liable for arrears of rent in spite of private division and agreement — Benefit of S. 19 U. P. Tenancy Act cannot be allowed in such a case. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 104: 1952 RD (BR) 154.

——S. 19 — Wrongful ejectment of tenant long ago — Claim by him for restoration — He cannot get benefit of S. 19. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (17 of 1949), S. 183. 1952 Rev Dec (BR) 85: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 49: 1952 All WR (Rev) 60 (DB).

——S. 19 — Person ejected in due process of law — Restoration under S. 19.

Section 19 is not intended to give a fresh start for limitation to persons who had been ejected in due process of law through the instrumentality of Courts, and whose objections to the ejectment at that time were rejected and who did not care to question them within the period of limitation. 1952 All WR (Rev) 92: 1951 RD 270.

——S. 19 — Applicability.

The extended period of limitation under S. 19 applies not only to cases of tenants ejected through the agency of Courts but also to cases of tenants wrongfully dispossessed outside Court. 1952 RD (BR) 245 (1).

——S. 19 — Ejectment through Court — Dispossession not questioned within 3 years — Section 19 does not apply. 1951 All WR (Rev) 85: 1951 RD 85.

——S. 19 — Reinstatement — Case covered by.

Reinstatement under S. 19 of the U. P. Tenancy (Amendment) Act, 1947 can cover only such cases in which the ejectment was clearly wrongful (i.e.) without the intervention of any process of law. 1951 All WR (Rev) 85: 1951 RD 85.

——S. 19 — Scope — Applicability of extended period of limitation — Persons to whom it will apply.

The scope of S. 19 of the U. P. Tenancy (Amendment) Act of 1947 is not so extensive as to include every ejected tenant, or his heir and successor to seek restoration under this section. 1950 RD 130: 1951 All WR (Rev) 18.

——S. 19 — Scope — Operation of extended period of limitation — Is not restricted to wrongful ejectment through Courts. 1950 RD 130: 1951 All WR (Rev) 18.

——S. 19 — Scope and applicability — Fraud, evidence of — Acquiescence in ejectment — Evidence Act (1872), S. 115.

Section 19 is not intended to create fresh rights for all ejected tenants who were ejected through the agency of the Court, irrespective of whether the ejectment was legal or illegal. The only ground on which this extended limitation could apply would be where the ejectment had been secured by means of any fraud, and on no other grounds. 1950 All WR (Rev) 77: 1950 RD 172.

——Ss. 26 and 27 — Respective scope.

Section 26 contemplates the subsistence of the sub-tenancy rights at the date of the commencement of the Act, whereas S. 27 provides for reinstatement of the ejected tenants who have already lost their tenancy rights. 1951 RD 267: 1951 All WR (Rev) 213.

——S. 26 — U. P. Tenancy Act (17 of 1939), S. 295-A — Benefit of — Availability — Person allowed to continue in possession on extinction of tenancy-in-chief under S. 47 (4) of the Tenancy Act.

A person who has been allowed to continue in possession on the extinction of the tenancy-in-chief under S. 47 (4) of the Tenancy Act is not entitled to the benefit of S. 26 of the U. P. Tenancy (Amendment) Act or S. 295-A of the Tenancy Act as the sub-tenant contemplated in the latter section is one where the tenancy-in-Chief is also in existence. 1951 RD 94: 1951 All WR (Rev) 89.

——S. 26 — Applicability — Appeal which had abated before the commencement of Act 10 of 1947.

If an appeal is not pending on 14th June, 1947, the date when Act 10 of 1947 came into force, S. 26 of that Act would not apply. Where an appeal had abated prior to that date, it is no longer pending and so S. 26, cannot be availed of by the appellant. 1950 RD 140.

1. Scope and validity.

——S. 27 — Provisions of S. 27 of U. P. Tenancy (Amendment) Act are not void — Re-instatement of ejected tenant under S. 27, is not 'acquisition' within meaning of S. 299, Government of India Act and Art. 31 of the Constitution — U. P. Act is existing law and is saved — Rights under Article 19 (1) (f) of new tenant are not infringed. See Constitution of India, Art. 31. AIR 1961 All 191 (DB).

——S. 27 — Application under — Order passed on it not amounting to a decree — Civil P. C. (1908), S. 2.

An application made under S. 27 of the Act does not amount to a plaint and, therefore, the proceedings started with it cannot amount to a suit. The provisions of the Civil P. C. relating to the plaint or its presentation are not applicable to the proceedings started under S. 27. Therefore, an order passed on an application under S. 27 is to be treated as an order and not a decree. 1961 All WR (HC) 412: 1961 All LJ 491.

——S. 27 — Section 27 is not relevant in interpreting S. 232 of U. P. Act, 1 of 1951 — Remedy under S. 27 is available only to those who have been ejected through Court—Remedy under Section 232 of Act (1 of 1951) is available to those who have been ejected though Court or otherwise See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act (1 of 1951), S. 232. 1957 All WR (HC) 163: 1957 All LJ 171.

——S. 27 — Applicability of Civil P. C.

The provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure apply to a proceeding under S. 27 and the tenant in possession at the time of reinstatement cannot be ejected unless he is a party to the proceeding. If the reinstated tenants want to dispossess him, the remedy lies by a separate suit for possession against him. The proceeding under S. 27 cannot be re-started. 1952 RD (BR) 363: 1952 All WR (Rev) 235: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 258 (2) (DB).

——S. 27 — Proceedings under — Civil P. C. applies — Civil P. C. (1908), O. 9, R. 4.

Section 243 of the U. P. Tenancy Act makes the provisions of C. P. C. applicable to all suits and proceedings under the Act subject to the modifications provided therein. Consequently, by reason of S. 141, Civil P. C. the same procedure which is to be followed in suits has to be followed in the case of all proceedings also and therefore, the Court does not act without jurisdiction in restoring an application under S. 27 which was dismissed for default. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 248.

——S. 27 — Application under S. 27 — Order by Collector in appeal — Revision to Additional Commissioner — Reference to Board — Opposite party seeking to agitate finding of fact — No revision filed against Collectors' order within limitation — Finding not challenged before Additional Commissioner — Finding cannot be questioned before Board. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 188: 1952 RD (BR) 248.

——S. 27 — Matters with which Court is concerned in proceedings under.

In proceedings under S. 27 of the U. P. Tenancy (Amendment) Act, 1947, the Court is not concerned with the legality or otherwise of the original order of ejectment which may have been perfectly legal and justified when it was passed. The Court is only concerned to find out and satisfy itself if the arrears for which ejectment was ordered or effected were less than one-fourth of the annual rent. If it is so, reinstatement has to follow irrespective of whether the payment was made before or after the order of ejectment or before or after the dakhal dehani. 1952 All WR (Rev) 25: 1952 RD 8: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 2.

——S. 27 (1) (b) — Suit under Section 171 of the Tenancy Act— Decree for possession following compromise — Consent by tenant, admittedly given in view of his receiving another plot — No mention of exchange of plots in compromise — Payment of Rs. 700 in evidence not considered in appeal — Condition for return of the other plot in the order for reinstatement —Case held fell under S. 27 (1) (b). 1952 RD 238: 1952 ALJ (Rev) 334.

——S. 27 — Application by some of the tenants evicted — Formal delivery of possession — Proof if necessary — Admission of evidence in revision — Interference in revision.

In revision proceedings no additional evidence is admissible as in the case of appeals. O. 41, R. 27, C. P. Code, does not apply to a proceeding in revision. A Court of revision is normally entitled to interfere only when the materials on record justify; it may be in exceptional circumstances that fresh evidence may be admitted to prevent a miscarriage of justice.

It is not necessary that there should be a formal delivery of possession in pursuance of a decree for ejectment under Section 171, Tenancy Act. Even voluntary dispossession in pursuance of such a decree for eviction is enough to justify reinstatement under S. 27. The Board has consistently held that the application by one out of many tenants evicted is maintainable under S. 27. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 331.

——S. 27 — Benefit of — Person recorded as sub-tenant in 1348-F — Record operations — June 1939 to end of 1941 — If entitled —Order to record by S. D. O. — Validity.

It is enough for the purposes of Section 27 if a person is found to be recorded as an 'occupant after January 1, 1938 and if the entry is in accordance with the records revised under Chap. 4 of the Land Revenue Act. He cannot be deprived of the benefit of Section 27 by the accident of the revision of the records falling in the same year as that of entry of the petitioner as a sub-tenant. The petitioner must be regarded as an 'occupant' within the meaning of Section 27 and thus entitled to the benefit of the section.

The correction order by the S. D. O. in the circumstances of the case must be held to be in exercise of the powers as the Assistant Record Officer under the Collector. 1952 ALJ (Rev) 283: 1952 RD 245 (2).

The order of the Board summarily rejecting the second appeal under Section 268 is not a decree. 1945 AWR (Rev) 228 (2), Foll.

Section 296 of U. P. Act provides that a suit pending at the commencement of the Act shall be decided or a decree under the Agra Act shall be executed in accordance with the corresponding provisions of the U. P. Act and not that it is converted or deemed to be a decision under the corresponding section of the later Act. A decree under Section 44 of the Agra Tenancy Act is not and cannot be deemed to be under Section 180 of the U. P. Act.

Section 27 (3), Proviso provides only for a declaration to be made in the order for reinstatement under S. 27 that the tenants then in possession are declared to be sub-tenants entitled to remain in possession for 3 years. Such sub-tenants are under a liability to ejectment thereafter. The law does not provide for an order of ejectment to be made at the end of the period. Section 175 (b) of the Tenancy Act governs also the case of sub-tenants so declared. They can be ejected only by a suit.

The appeal by two only of the three enures to the benefit of the third also if it succeeded. The other is not prejudicially affected. The case is covered by O. 41, R. 4, Civil P. C. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 261: 1952 All WR (Rev) 198: 1952 RD 350.

——S. 27 — Right of co-tenant to reinstatement in entire holding when others do not claim reinstatement.

A co-tenant has got no separate interest in any portion of the joint holding until the partition of the holding. His rights or interests extend to every part of the land comprised in the holding and when he is reinstated he is entitled to reinstatement in the entire holding even though the other co-tenants may not claim reinstatment. 1952 RD (BR) 377: 1952 All WR (Rev) 230: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 246.

The word "final" in an enactment can only mean "not subject to appeal" and the use of that word by the Legislature would not shut out the revisional jurisdiction and hence from the use of the word "final" in Section 27 (6) of the U. ——S. 27 — Application for reinstatement — Dismissal for default — Application for restoration of the petition under Section 27 — Dismissal of — Appeal — S. 5, Limitation Act — Condonation.

An application for reinstatement under Section 27 of the Act 10 of 1947 was dismissed for default and the petition under O. 9, R. 9 was dismissed. In an appeal to the Collector the original application was ordered to be restored. The reference to the Board for restoration of order of the trial Court was made by the Additional Commissioner in revision.

Held: The applicant did not even claim the benefit of the Section 5 of the Limitation Act; the Collector has not used his discretion in a judicial manner in condoning the delay in filing the petition for restoration without sufficient cause being shown to extend the period under Section 5 and passing the order for restoration in the exercise of his inherent powers.

(Obiter.) No appeal is provided against the order of dismissal of an application under O. 9, Rule 9 to restore an application under S. 27 for reinstatement and hence only a revision to the Board lies. 1952 RD 340: 1952 ALJ (Rev) 175.

13. Limitation.

——S. 27 — Period of limitation — S. 14, Limitation Act — If applicable.

Held: Section 29 (2) of the Limitation Act provides that Section 14 is applicable to a suit or application under a special or local law unless excluded by it.

The allegations as to the duration of pendency of the prior proceedings not having been denied must be deemed to be admitted under O. 8, R. 5, C. P. Code.

Section 14 is applicable to this case as there is no exclusion of its applicability in the Tenancy Act or in the Amendment Act. It is immaterial whether the original application is represented or having been dismissed a fresh petition is filed provided the other conditions for applicability, good faith, etc., are satisfied. 1952 AWR (Rev) 150: 1952 ALJ (Rev) 195: 1952 RD 336.

——S. 28 — Tenant's rights to claim restoration.

If the land had not been used for the purpose for which it was acquired either within three years or beyond, till the coming into force of the U. P. Tenancy (Amendment) Act of 1947, the tenant is entitled to the restoration of the land. If the land has been so utilised, the tenant is not entitled to restoration even if the land has subsequently lost its character. 1952 RD (BR) 396: 1952 All WR (Rev) 265: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 288.

——S. 28 — Acquisition of land but not utilized within three years for grove — Restoration, when can be had — Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (17 of 1939), S. 54.

Section 28 of Act 10 of 1947, does not permit the restoration of land which was not utilized within three years of its acquisition if it has been utilised when the Act came into force, viz. June 14, 1947. If the applicant wants restoration on the plea that the land was not utilised for planting a grove within three years of its acquisition, then he should make an application for restoration under sub-section (5) of S. 54 of the U. P. Tenancy Act 1939, within six months from the expiry of three years from the date of the order of acquisition. When he fails to do so he can claim restoration under Section 28 of Act 10 of 1947 only if the land was not utilised before the date of the commencement of the Act. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 100: 1952 RD (BR) 158.

——S. 28 — "Landlord" — Successor of landlord — (Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (17 of 1939), S. 3 (1)).

Section 28 of the Amending Act must be interpreted with reference to Section 3 (1) of the Tenancy Act. Therefore if a transferee of land succeeds to the same interest as the landlord who originally acquired it, he steps into his shoes and is subject to the same liabilities as the original acquirer. 1952 RD (BR) 126: 1952 All WR (Rev) 79: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 51.

——S. 28 — Application under — Maintainability — Prior application under S. 54 (5) of the U. P. Tenancy Act dismissed as filed out of time — Res judicata.

The dismissal of an application under S. 54 (5) as having been filed out of time would not operate as res judicata in a subsequent application under Section 28 of the U. P. Tenancy (Amendment) Act for restoration because the latter section gives a fresh cause of action. 1951 RD 265: 1952 AWR (Rev) 76.

——S. 28 — Restoration of land acquired for planting a grove— Grove not planted even after Tenancy (Amendment) Act came into force.

Where a landholder though he has failed to plant a grove in the land acquired under Section 54 of the U. P. Tenancy Act within 3 years from the date of acquisition does so prior to the date of the U. P. Tenancy (Amendment) Act, it may not be a ground for restoration under Section 28 of the U. P. Tenancy (Amendment) Act. But where no grove is planted when the Amendment Act came into force and the land is in the possession of the landholder, the tenant would be entitled to restoration. 1951 RD 265: 1952 AWR (Rev) 75.

——S. 31, Fourth Proviso — Scope — Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (17 of 1939), Section 180).

The decree under Section 180, U. P. Tenancy Act, to the extent that it granted damages and allowed costs, is still executable. The proviso does not say 'all decrees and orders shall be quashed'. The introduction of the qualifying words 'for the ejectment' seem to indicate that there was not to be a general quashing of the decrees and orders passed under Section 180 of the 1939 Act, but only a quashing of the decrees and orders, so far as they related to ejectment. 1958 All WR (HC) 354.

——S. 31 — Tenant suing trespasser for ejectment in civil Court — Section 180 amended pending suit — Suit triable by revenue Court — Retrospective effect of S. 180 — Return of plaint to revenue Court — Power of High Court in second appeal indicated. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (17 of 1939), Section 180 (as amended by U. P. Act 10 of 1947). AIR 1957 All 257 (DB).

——S. 31 — Change of forum — Decree passed by Civil Court — Amending Act changing forum subsequently directing pendency of appeal — Decree is not affected. Sobha Nath v. Ram Baran, 1954 All WR (HC) 392: 1954 All LJ 265: ILR (1955) 1 All 113: AIR 1954 All 493 (494, 495) (Pt A) (Prs 6 to 9) (FB).

——S. 31 — "Pending under the said Act" — Suit filed in Civil Court.

Provisions of Section 31 apply not only in the case of appeals and revisions but also to proceedings in suits. Where the suit had been properly filed in the court of Munsif it could not be a suit pending under the U. P. Tenancy Act which would necessarily have had to have been filed in a revenue Court. It is therefore not affected by the provisions of Section 31 and the jurisdiction of the civil Court remained unaffected. The effect of the amending Act was not to divest the civil Court of the jurisdiction which it admittedly had in a case prior to the coming into operation of that Act. 1952 All WR (HC) 156: 1952 All LJ 87: AIR 1953 All 219 (220) (Prs 3, 4).

——S. 31, Proviso (4) — Persons recorded as occupants in the revision of records of 1346-F — Not to be ejected.

The effect of the proviso (4) to Section 31 of the U. P. Tenancy (Amendment) Act is that persons recorded as "occupants" in the revision of records are not to be ejected as occupying the lands without the permission of the land or as trespassers. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 286.

——S. 31, Proviso (4) — Scope — Appellant in a pending proceeding entitled to the benefits — "Occupant", meaning of — Proper order in appeal.

Held: The word "occupant" used in Proviso 4 to Section 31 of the (Amendment) Act 1947, includes "trespasser" also in view of Paras. 121 and 124 (10-A) of the Land Records Manual showing that the occupiers of land without title are also to be recorded in khatauni under Section 32 (e) of the Land Revenue Act. 1948 RD 241, Ref.

The proper order in a pending appeal where the appellants are entitled to the benefits of proviso 4 to Section 31 of the Tenancy (Amendment) Act is not to dismiss the appeals as originally filed but to allow the appeals in consideration of the change in status of the parties created by proviso 4 to Section 31 of the Act. 1948 RD 241, Foll. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 187.

——S. 31, Proviso 1 — Decree in ejectment proceeding under Section 171 of the Tenancy Act 1939 — Appeal pending — Amendment Act coming into force — Benefit under the amendment will be available. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy (Amendment) Act (10 of 1947), S. 17. 1952 All LJ (Rev) 189.

——S. 31, Proviso 4 — Applicability.

Sections 48, 53, 54 and 55 of Chapter 4 of the U. P. Land Revenue Act (3 of 1901) are applicable to revision and preparation of records as distinct from settlement operations. Explanation to Section 55, U. P. Land Revenue Act (3 of 1901), would show that the khatauni prepared during the revision of records will be for a year which shall be reckoned as a completed year, and this year is commonly known as the year of verification and it is the entry in the khatauni of that year which would entitle a person to take the benefit of proviso 4 to S. 31 of Act 10 of 1947. 1952 All WR (Rev) 43.

——S. 31 (1)—'Occupant' — It includes a trespasser and a khudkasht holder. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy (Amendment) Act (10 of 1947), S. 27 (1) (e). 1952 RD (BR) 262: 1952 All LJ (Rev) 238: 1952 All WR (Rev) 208.

——S. 31 — Scope.

Section 31 of Act 10 of 1947 cannot revive a right which did not exist when the plaintiff was dispossessed or when he brought the suit, under Section 183, U. P. Tenancy Act. 1952 RD (BR) 124.

——S. 31 — Scope — Retrospective effect — Provision of section is subject to provisos — Decree by civil Court before coming into force — Forum of appeal is not affected in view of Proviso 5 — Appeal lies in first civil appellate Court. AIR 1951 All 497 (498) (Pt B) (Pr 3).

——S. 31 — Retrospective effect— Suit pending in civil Court.

Section 31 only provides for retrospective effect to be given to the provisions of the Act in case a suit or an appeal or a revision is pending in any Court under the provisions of the U. P. Tenancy Act. 1951 All WR (HC) 199 (DB).

——S. 31, Proviso 4 — Occupant — If includes mortgagees.

The word "occupant' used in Proviso 4 to Section 31 of the U. P. Tenancy (Amendment) Act is wide enough to include mortgagees. 1951 All WR (Rev) 179: 1951 RD 181.

——S. 31, Proviso 4 — Applicability — Conditions.

It is only if a person was recorded as an "occupant" at a settlement after the 1st day of January, 1938, that he could claim the benefit of the 4th Proviso to Section 31 of the U. P. Tenancy (Amendment) Act, 1940. But an entry in the khasra of an ordinary year is not enough. 1951 RD 162: 1951 AWR (Rev) 154.

——S. 31, Proviso 4 — Benefit under — Whom available.

The mere fact that a person was recorded as an occupant on or after the first day of January, 1938, in a record revised under Chap. 4 of the U. P. Land Revenue Act, 1901 or corrected by an officer specially appointed for the correction of annual registers in any tract is sufficient to give him the benefit of the proviso irrespective of the fact whether he has or has not already been ejected from the holding in dispute. The words 'person' and 'occupant' do not necessarily mean a tenant. They have been used by the Legislature intentionally to cover the cases of traspassers. 1951 RD 195 (1): 1951 All WR (Rev) 168.

——S. 31, Proviso 4 — Right to the benefit of — Khudkasht-holder — If an "occupant" — Continuity of possession, if necessary.

The word "occupant" in Proviso 4 to S. 31 of the U. P. Tenancy (Amendment) Act, 1947, is wide enough to include a khudkasht-holder. Once a person was recorded as an occupant on or after 1st January, 1938, in a record revised under Ch. 4 of the U. P. Land Revenue Act of 1901 or corrected by an officer specially appointed for that purpose, it was immaterial whether he occupied it as a khudkasht-holder, as a tenant, as a mortgagee, or even a trespasser. 1951 AWR (Rev) 185: 1951 RD 192.

——S. 31 —Period of limitation for suit against person in unauthorised occupant is now two years — Amendment has retrospective operation. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (17 of 1939), Sch. 4, Group B, Serial No. 18. 1950 All LJ 43: AIR 1950 All 191.

——S. 31 — If should be given effect to even in cases where appeal had already abated.

There is no provision in U. P. Tenancy (Amendment) Act that it overrides only provisions of the Limitation Act or of the C. P. Code which have been made applicable to the U. P. Tenancy Act. Hence, if an appeal has abated, the abatement cannot be set aside simply to enable a tenant to take advantage of any benefits accruing to him under the Amendment Act. The provisions of Section 31 of the Act cannot be given effect to against an abatement under the law as provided by the C. P. Code. 1950 RD 184.

——S. 31 — Applicability — Appeals.

The question whether the acquisition under the U. P. Act 1 of 1951, was or was not for a public purpose was agitated both before the High Court and the Supreme Court. Both the Courts held that there was a public purpose behind the Act. Further both the Courts held that it was within the competence of the legislature to fix the amount of compensation or specify the principles on which and the manner in which, the compensation is to be determined and given. The question whether the principles underlying compensation in the Act could be different, having regard to the provisions of Article 14 of the Constitution, from those to be found in the Land Acquisition Act could be raised before the Supreme Court or the Full Bench of this Court. It cannot be allowed to be reagitated again. 1952 RD (HC) 340: 1952 All WR (HC) 599: 1952 All LJ 677: AIR 1953 All 92 (94, 95) (Pt B) (Prs 9, 15, 18) (DB).

The words 'subject to the provisions of entry 42 of List 3' in Entry 36 of List 2 do not by themselves mean that the State Legislature cannot legislate with respect to the acquisition of property unless there is a public purpose and only on payment of compensation.

Under the Act all the proprietary rights of the intermediaries have been acquired. No doubt Sir and Khudkasht lands have been allowed to be retained by them in their capacity as Bhumidhars but it is a new tenure created by the Act and the Bhumidhars are not proprietors. The proprietary rights under the Act vest in the State. It cannot, therefore, be said that the entire proprietary rights of the intermediaries have not been acquired under the Act, and as such it is invalid as Art. 31 of the Constitution authorises an acquisition of only the entirety of the rights in any property. 1952 All LJ 52: AIR 1952 All 88 (89) (Pt G) (Pr 9) (DB).

As the U. P. The old legislature in the State of Uttar Pradesh continued to function on the 26th January 1950, under Art. 382 of the Constitution and the Bill, which ultimately was enacted as the impugned Act and which was pending before the 26th January 1950 was continued by virtue of Art. 389 in the new legislature when it came into existence sometime in May 1950. It cannot, therefore, be said that the Bill which ultimately was enacted as the Zamindari Abolition Act was not pending on the date of the commencement of the Constitution and hence the Act is not valid. 1952 All LJ 52: AIR 1952 All 88 (90) (Pt K) (Pr 15) (DB).

Under S. 6 of the U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act the rights, title and interest of intermediaries in the estates alone vested in the Government. Where a particular ferry is unconnected with any estate acquired under the Act, it will continue, despite the acquisition of the Zamindari under S. 4 of the Act, to belong to its previous owner. Sub-clause (i) of Cl. (a) of S. 6 will not entitle the State to claim the ferry. Therefore, the State cannot take over possession of the ferry under the provisions of the Act. Where the State, however, has taken over possession of the ferry, it is not necessary to restore back the possession of it to the ferry owner because the State in any case is entitled to take possession of it under S. 4 of the Northern India Ferries Act. Therefore, the only right that the owner has in the circumstances is to compensation under S. 5 of that Act. The dismissal of a prior writ field by his predecessors-in-title but not on merits is no bar to the ferry owner's second application for writ against the taking possession of the ferry and claiming his rights. Similarly such predecessor-in-title taking a theka in respect of the ferry from the State after the State took possession will not estop the owner from asserting his right to compensation under the Northern India Ferries Act. 1959 All LJ 310: 1959 All WR (HC) 330.

Neither the original U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act, 1950, nor its subsequent amendment by virtue of S. 3 of U. P. The limitation placed by S. 4 on the rights of persons to apply within six months does not apply to the exercise of the powers by the officer suo motu. What the section lays down is that any person cannot insist on the correction of the revenue records if he approaches the officer by an application presented beyond six months of the commencement of the Act. Under Clause (i) of Section 6 read with Section 26, the State Government has power to prescribe the nature of suits and proceedings pending at the date of vesting which are to be stayed. Thereafter, under Section 26 the State Government is empowered to make rules to provide for the disposal of such suits and proceedings as have been stayed under Clause (i) of Section 6. Held, Section 6 (i) of the Act is valid in law and intra vires and cannot be questioned now. It is concluded by the authority of 1951 ALJ 365 (FB) confirmed by the Supreme Court.

What Section 344 (4) of the Act requires is that the rules are to be before the State Legislature and they will be subject to such modification as the legislature may deem fit. The rules do not come into force on the date of publication unless a date is fixed. The rules have come into force and the second appeal has to abate. 1952 ALJ (Rev) 295.

——S. 7 (aa) — Object of.

'Section 7 (aa) of the Act, when it uses the term bhumidhar, includes within its operation zamindars who held cultivatory holdings called their sir or khudkhasht. It places bhumidhars on the same level as other cultivators, who were not zamindars but have now become bhumidhars. sirdars, adhivasis or asamis. The object of this provision is to confer on all these classes of cultivators, to an equal extent, rights of beneficial enjoyment of the land. There is in the scheme of this provision no intention to discriminate between those cultivators who were zamindars and those who were not. 1964 All WR (HC) 516: 1964 All LJ 307.

Held, that there was no subsisting right in the mortgagor to get relief under S. 12 — Mortgagee had on the other hand acquired certain rights which had to be enforced. 1957 All LJ 543: 1957 All WR (HC) 533.

——Ss. 18 (2) and 26-B — Acquisition of Bhumidari right — (Tenancy Laws — U. P. Agricultural Tenants' (Acquisition of Privileges) Act (10 of 1949), Ss. 3 and 6).

Before a person can be deemed to be a Bhumidhar of the holding, he must be a person belonging to the class mentioned in S. 3 or subsection (2) of S. 3-A of U. P. Act No. 10 of 1949 and further he should have been granted the declaration referred to in S. 6 of that Act.

An occupier of land, which is sir or khudkasht, does not come within the definition of the word 'occupier', as used in Cl. (e).

Therefore, where the land has proved to be the khudkasht land of an evacuee at the time of migration to Pakistan it must be deemed to have been khudkasht of the evacuee on 31-6-1952 by virtue of S. 26-B read with Para. 1 of Sch. 5 of U. P. Act (1 of 1951) and that being the case the person in possession on it does not become an occupier and does not acquire Bhumidari rights under S. 18 (2) of that Act. 1955 All LJ 218: 1955 All WR (HC) 257: AIR 1955 All 538 (539, 540) (Pt A) (Prs 4 to 6).

●——S. 20 (b) (i) — Occupant recorded as thekedar — Status of.
Per Majority: The words in S. 20 (b) (i) only speak of a person being recorded as occupant and there is nothing in that section as to the nature of the occupancy, namely, whether it is on behalf of the person recorded or on behalf of somebody else. That is a matter which must always be decided on other evidence for the entry does not contemplate recording the nature of the possession in the sense of its being on behalf of the person recorded or on someone else's behalf. ——S. 20 (b) — Adhivasi rights — Entry as sub-tenant — Effect of.
Ordinarily, an entry as a sub-tenant does not establish Adhivasi rights under S. 20 (b) (i) of the Act. But it is possible to establish that such an entry is not quite correct. If in fact the occupation of the plot was as a trespasser, and not as a sub-tenant, the occupier can be given the benefit of S. 20 (b) (i) of the Act. 1964 All

——S. 20 (b) (as substituted by U. P. Act 16 of 1953) — 'Occupant' — Mortgagee in possession — Rights of.

Keeping in view the language of S. 20 and the provision of Explanation IV (as added by U. P. Act 20 of 1954), a mortgagee in possession will not be covered by the expression 'occupant' in Cl. (b) of S. 20 of the Act. 1959 All WR (HC) 345: 1959 All LJ 479.

——S. 20 — Possession of mortgagee of tenancy rights — Effect of — (T. P. Act (1882), Ss. 6 and 108 (j)).

An entry as mortgagee of tenancy rights is entry as a licensee; hence, such an entry does not confer the rights of adhivasi under S. 20, Section 6 of the Transfer of Property Act actually prohibits transfer of rights of occupancy of a tenant. 1957 All WR (HC) 487: 1957 All LJ 548.

5. Explanations.

——S. 20, Expl. III — Applicability — Correctness of entry not in issue — Effect.

The words 'corrected' and 'correction' occurring in Explanation III to S. 20, U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act, suggest that the order or decree must have held that the material entry in the Khasra did not represent the true state of facts and was wrongly made. Those words exclude the application of Explanation III to a case where the order or decree has expressly held that the material entry was rightly made on the strength of actual possession. 1959 All WR (HC) 662: 1959 All LJ 860.

——S. 20 — Explanation I — Scope of.

It cannot be said that an adhivasi falling under Cl. (b) of S. 20 can get the benefit of S. 232 only if he has been 'evicted' from the land after that date as contemplated by the explanation. 1957 All WR (HC) 630: 1957 All LJ 593.

——S. 20, Expln. IV (as amended by Act 20 of 1954) — Retrospective operation.

Having regard to the scheme of the Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act and to the fact that an appeal is the continuation of a suit, it is open to the defendants to take advantage of S. 20, in appeal before the Board of Revenue. It is equally open to the plaintiffs to urge that the defendants cannot take advantage of S. 20 in view of the Explanation which was added by the Amending Act of 1954. 1955 All LJ 883: 1956 All WR (HC) 18: AIR 1956 All 177 (178) (Pt B) (Pr 4).

——S. 202—Suit under, by some of the land-holders —Held maintainable.

The word 'land-holder' has the same meaning, as defined in the U. P. Tenancy Act, that is a person to whom rent is, or but for a contract, express or implied, would be payable. But since S. 202 gives the ground for ejectment of an Asami, which is a creation of the U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act, and since a provision like S. 246 of the Old Tenancy Act (which read with S. 189 of that Act governed the relation between the co-sharers), is not to be found in the U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act, an Asami could be ejected by any of the land-holders if the other land-holders are made parties to the suit. Therefore, a suit under S. 202 is maintainable even if brought by some of the land-holders only. 1956 All L J 24 and 1957 All L J 86, Approved. 1962 All W R (HC) 206 : 1962 All L J 706.

——S. 209—Scope.

Section 209 covers cases in which the cause of action may be either 'taking or retaining possession of land otherwise in accordance with the provisions of law for the time being in force'. It is only if a plaintiff's case as set out in the plaint, clearly falls outside the purview of S. 209 that the suit could fail. The case of retaining possession contrary to the provisions of law, after the date of vesting, will fall under S. 209 when the suit is by an alleged 'asami', 'sirdar' or 'bhumidhar'. 1964 All W R (HC) 255.

——Ss. 209, 330, 331—Applicability—Bar of suit.

Section 209 provides for a suit against a person taking or retaining possession of land otherwise than in accordance with the provisions of the law for the time being in force. In other words, it envisages a suit against a trespasser. Where the initial possession of the defendants was in their capacity as mortgagees and their possession had continued after the vesting order under an order passed under S. 14 of the Act by a competent Court, it could not be said that the defendants were trespassers. Therefore, the suit did not fall under S. 209. Section 330 clearly bars the jurisdiction of the civil Court to entertain a suit in respect of any order passed under S. 14 of Part I of the Act. The suit was clearly barred both under that section and S. 331 (1) of the Act. 1958 All W R (HC) 481 (2) : 1958 All L J 302.

The intention of the Legislature in making a distinction between S. 229 on the one hand and Ss. 229 B and 229-C on the other hand was to make a suit for mere declaration maintainable. In no case, S. 42 of the Specific Relief Act can apply to suits for declaration under S. 229-B or 229-C. Therefore, the plaintiff's suit for mere declaration under S 229-B that he was the sirdar of the suit land basing his claim by virtue of his being hereditary tenant of that land is maintainable and it is not necessary for the plaintiff to seek any further relief. 1963 All W R (H C) 291 : 1963 All L J 326.

——S 229-B—Scope — No declaration of co-tenancy in agricultural holding can be given.

Under S 229-B no declaration of co-tenancy in any agricultural holding is contemplated. What the section contemplates is either a declaration that plaintiff is a Sirdar of the holding if the claim in the plaint is based on exclusive rights or for a declaration of the plaintiff's share if the claim is on the basis of jointness.

A claim of exclusive right does not include a claim of joint tenancy. If therefore the plaintiff in a suit for declaration for exclusive rights is not able to establish that right the Court cannot grant him the relief of joint rights though on the evidence on record it is found that the plaintiff had no exclusive right but a joint right. In such a case, the proper course open to the Court is to dismiss the suit. If S. 229-B does not contemplate a declaration of co-tenancy, the Revenue Court cannot claim such power or jurisdiction under some general law. 17 Ind App 187, Rel. on; (1954) All W R (Rev) 46 and A I R 1952 S C 47, Distinguished. 1965 All W R (H C) 775.

——S. 229-C—Scope of — Civil P. C. (1908), S. 11 — Res judicata—Ex parte decree.

There can be no justification for holding that the declaration, which can be sought from the Court by means of a suit under S. 229 C of the Act must be confined to the fact that the defendant is not an asami. On the other hand it enables the institution of a suit in which the plaintiff may have every controversy relating to the rights of the defendant settled once for all and the nature of the rights, if any, possessed by the defendant finally ascertained. However if the plaintiff does not want any other declaration except that the defendant is not an Assami the position would be different. But if he positively asserts that the defendant is neither an asami nor has he any other rights in the land in suit and wants a declaration to that effect, a challenge is thrown to the defendant to establish any such rights as he may claim to possess and the Court has not only the power but also the duty to decide whether the defendant has any right and, if so, what the nature of that right is. If the defendant in spite of the challenge and clear assertion by the plaintiff that the defendant has no right at all, keeps away from a contest and allows an ex parte decree to be passed against him the decree operates as res judicata and it has the effect of having finally determined that the defendant has no right at all. 1964 All W N (HC) 252.

——Ss. 240-A, 240 G, 240-H and 240-J — Petitioner not challenging validity of notification — Notification is binding on him.

It is permissible under the law to file an objection as to the inclusion of any particular land in the notification under S. 240-A. The effect of S. 240-J is to finalise the statement, i.e., to hold that the notification has not been objected to and to put the seal of confirmation on that notification.

Where what the Consolidation Courts have clearly held appears to be that no objection having been filed under the provisions of S. 240-G and the statement having been finalised under S. 240 J, the rights of the petitioner in the land mentioned in the notification under S. 240 A have ceased and have vested in the State Government. The fact that the consolidation Courts have referred only to S. 240-G and not to the provisions of S. 240-A is not entitled to any weight. Therefore, if the petitioner does not in fact challenge the validity of the notification, it must be held to be binding on him. 1964 All L J 910 : ILR (1965) 1 All 309.

The words "held or deemed to be held by an adhivasi" in S. 240-A do not mean that the land was lawfully held or deemed to be held by an adhivasi and do not exclude from the scope of S. 240-A a trespasser-adhivasi. Land in which adhivasi rights are created is land held by an adhivasi. The Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act makes no distinction between one adhivasi and another. Different kinds of persons acquire adhivasi rights, but once they have acquired them the distinction between them disappears and it is no longer relevant to consider what rights they had previously or how they acquired adhivasi rights except for purposes of S. 231. By the resolution the share capital of the company was reduced and each share holder withdrew a sum of money from the paid up share capital. The company having been assessed to sales-tax and there having been a failure to pay the same a requisition was sent to the Collector who proceeded to realise the tax as arrear of land revenue and issued a notice to each of the share-holders calling upon him to deposit a sum of money towards the arrears of sales tax out of the assets of the company in his hands within a certain time.

——S. 286—Per Sahai J.—It cannot be held that it is not S. 286 (2) but S. 288 of the Act which makes provisions of S. 279 and other sections dealing with the recovery of arrears of land revenue applicable to recovery of miscellaneous dues. See Tenancy Laws—U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act (1951), S. 288. I L R (1962) 1 All 922.

——S. 286—Section whether mandatory or directory.

Per Sahai, J. — Under S. 286 if the Collector is unable to recover the arrears by resorting to the processes contemplated by Cls. (a) to (e) of S. 279 he must sell the immovable property of the defaulter and to that extent the provision is imperative or mandatory but the provision that he shall first have recourses to the processes contemplated, by Cls. (a) to (e) of S. 279 is merely directory. Even though directory provision is intended to be obeyed, a failure to obey it does not render a thing duly done in disobedience of it, a nullity. Therefore even though movable property was not sold before selling immovable property the order of the Collector would not be amenable to a writ of certiorari or to being otherwise quashed or set aside. 1962 All W R (HC) 515 : 1962 All L J 616: I L R (1962) 1 All 922.

——S. 286 (1), (2)—Scope—Sub-sections whether independent of each other.

Per Mukerji, J.—Arrears which were not due in respect of any specific land could be recovered from any immovable property of the defaulter. The words under this section in S. 286 (2) do not indicate that sub-s. (2) of S. 286 was in some sense controlled by the provisions contained in sub-s. (1).

Per Sahai, J.—The two sub-sections of S. 286 have got to be read together and the effect of sub-s. (2) is that even in connection with the recovery of miscelleneous dues as arrears of land revenue, i.e., sums which are not arrears of land revenue but recoverable as such, it is permissible to sell immovable property of the defaulter but subject to what is provided for in sub-s. (1). Sub-section (1) makes a reference to all the clauses of S. 279 of the Act. Even in the case of relisation of miscellaneous dues recourse must first be had to the processes provided for by Cls. (a) to (e) of S. 279. 1962 All W R (HC) 515 : 1962 All L J 616 : I L R (1962) 1 All 922.

——S. 286—Scope.

Under S. 286 the power to realise arrears of land revenue in respect of certain holding of the tenant from attachment or sale of his other properties can only be exercised if the steps to realise the amount of land revenue by attachment or sale of the holding the land revenue of which has not been paid had been taken. 1957 All L J 910 : 1957 All W R (HC) 868.

——Ss. 288, 286, 279—Recovery of amount not arrears of revenue but recoverable as arrears of revenue — Applicability of provisions.

Per Mukerji, J.— Section 279 does not in terms make a mention of recovery of such amounts which could be recovered as arrears of land revenue. But S. 288 provides for the contingency of having to recover some amount which was not really arrears of land revenue but which, under the authority of law, was to be for the purpose of its realisation and recovery, treated as such.

Per Sahai, J.—Section 288 was enacted for arrears of land revenue which had already become due before the commencement of the Act and the liability for the payment of which had not arisen under the Act, to be recovered by the machinery provided by the Act. It cannot therefore be held that it is not S. 286 (2) but S. 288 of the Act which makes the provisions of S. 279 and other sections dealing with the recovery of arrears of land revenue applicable to the recovery of miscellaneous dues. 1962 All W R (HC) 515: 1962 All L J 616: I L R (1962) 1 All 922.

Under S. 288, the provisions of the Act with regard to the recovery of arrears of revenue shall apply to all arrears of revenue and sums of money recoverable as arrears of revenue due at the commencement of this Act. Where the loan under S. 13 of the Rehabilitation Finance Administration Act, 1948 was taken in March, 1949 long before the commencement of the U. P. The jurisdiction that is barred by the section is that of a civil Court. Civil Courts are created by the Bengal and Assam Civil Courts Act; the High Court is created not by that Act but by the Constitution. The High Court exercises jurisdiction over all sorts of Courts; merely because it exercises jurisdiction over civil Courts it would be wrong to treat it as a civil Court. The Bengal and Assam Civil Courts Act itself confers upon the High Court appellate jurisdiction over the civil Courts. There is no foundation for the view that appellate jurisdiction over a civil Court can vest only in another civil Court. What is meant by the highest civil Court of appeal is the Court invested with the highest appellate jurisdiction over civil Courts; it itself need not be a civil Court. Therefore, S. 330 does not exclude the jurisdiction of the High Court. (1957) 2 Lab L J 225 : 1958 All W R (HC) 330 : AIR 1957 All 495 (504) (Pt F) (Pr 11).

——Ss. 331 and 341 (as it stood before amendment of 1958)—Second appeals—Grounds.

Second Appeal to the Board of Revenue under S. 331 of the Act even before its amendment by Act 37 of 1958 was maintainable only on questions of law. S. 341 which governed second appeals also laid down that the provisions of Civil P. C. were applicable to proceedings under the Act, unless it was therein expressly provided to the contrary. 1961 All W R (HC) 121 : 1961 All L J 87.

——S. 331 (4)—Second Appeal — Scope of—S. 341—Effect of—Section 100, Civil P. C.—Scope.

Sub-section (4) of S. 331, U. P. Zamindari Abolition Act only lays down in what cases second appeals shall lie and it does not go any further. Apart from saying that a second appeal shall lie against all decrees passed in appeal, S. 100 of the Civil P. C., further enjoins the grounds on which a second appeal can be maintainable. Section 331 of the U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act makes no provision on this subject and therefore S. 341 of the Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act will have effect and the portion of S. 100 of the Civil P. C., which does not stand modified by S. 331 of the Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act is to be applied to all proceedings under the Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act. It consequently follows that the Board of Revenue can entertain a second Appeal filed under the Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act only on the grounds specified in S. 100 of the Civil P. C. The correctness of the findings of fact arrived at by the subordinate Courts therefore cannot be considered by the Board of Revenue. ——Ss. 331, 332-A—'Question of title'.

A plea regarding title to a land, which is clearly untenable and is intended solely to oust the jurisdiction of the revenue Court, is not deemed to raise a question regarding title to the land within the meaning of S. 332 of the Act. The mortgagees were claiming to be 'sirdars' under S. 19 of the Act and it was their claim which was equally being adjudicated as the claim of the mortgagors.

Held, that on the analogy of the provisions of S. 332-A of the Act, it could not be said that any question of title was being raised. The Sub-Divisional Officer had jurisdiction to decide whether a real question of title was raised or whether a mere objection was being raised in order to oust his jurisdiction. If there was any error committed by the said Sub-Divisional Officer, there was a right of appeal from that order to Commissioner. 1958 All W R (HC) 481 (2) : 1958 All L J 302.

Section 331 as it stood before its alteration by U. P. Land Reforms (Amendment) Act 18 of 1956 made no provision for a second appeal to the Board of Revenue in the case of applications under S. 232 of the Act.

Sub-rule (2) of Rule 191 of the Rules made under S. 240 was before the passing of U. P. Act 18 of 1956 inconsistent with the provisions of the Act and can be of no avail in this connection. 1956 All L J 897 : 1957 All W R (HC) 187.

——Ss. 332 (4), 331 (2) and 341 (before amendment by U. P. Act 37 of 1958)—Appellate decree of Civil Court passed under S. 332 (4)—Second appeal lay to High Court—C. P. Code (1908), S. 100.

No doubt it was open to the Legislature to lay down that the appellate decision under S. 332 (4) of the Act should be final. But there was no such indication in S. 332 (4) of the Act. It must be held that a decision of the Civil Court under S. 332 (4) of the Act was not to be regarded as final. Such a decision was subject to a second appeal, as provided in S. 100, C. P. Code. Therefore, a second appeal lay to the High Court against the appellate decree of a Civil Court passed under S. 332 (4) (since deleted by U. P. Act 37 of 1958) of U. P. Section 6 of the U. P. General Clauses Act, 1904, and the U. P. Land Tenures Legal Proceedings (Removal of Difficulties) Order, 1952, made provisions for the continued investigation, inquiry and decision of matters arising in any suit commenced before the repeal of the U. P. Tenancy Act, namely, that they shall be decided in accordance with the provisions of the U. P. Tenancy Act. The suit having commenced before the U. P. Act (1 of 1951), the issue relating to the tenancy rights of the plaintiff's had to be referred to the Revenue Courts under S. 288 of the U. P. Tenancy Act. The order of the lower Court holding that Civil Court had no jurisdiction to decide that issue and referring it to Revenue Courts was, therefore, correct.

In a civil suit relating to tenancy rights in land, which continued to be pending in the civil Court at the date when the amending Act of 1956 came into force, it was obligatory on the civil Court to refer the issue about sirdari rights to the Revenue Court after the amending Act came into force. S. 23 (1) of the amending Act of 1956 did not create a jurisdictional bar to a reference.

Appeal, review or revision from either any suit or proceeding instituted or commenced prior to the commencement of the Act should, notwithstanding the amendment lie to the Court or authority to which it would have lain if it had been instituted or commenced before the said amendment.

The word 'proceeding' in sub-s. (1) of S. 23 could not refer to an issue drawn up in a suit.

The proceedings to which S. 23 (1) of Act, 18 of 1956, applied must be proceedings apart from those in a sense, arising out of a suit. C. R. A suit involving the issue of sirdari rights had been referred to arbitration by the Civil Court, prior to the coming into force of U. P. Act 18 of 1956. S. 332-B as inserted by Act 18 of 1956 however took away the jurisdiction of the Civil Court to decide the issue of sirdari rights and the civil Court was enjoined to refer that issue to the decision of a Revenue Court. An award passed by the arbitrators subsequent to the passing of the amending Act was made a rule of the Court.

Held, that the issue regarding the sirdari rights could not have been the subject of an award much less of a judgment of Court, nor could a decree in terms of the award have been passed by the Civil Court after the coming into force of S. 332-B of the Act. Hence the award and the decree passed thereon in so far it dealt with the sirdari rights could not be allowed to stand. 1962 All L J 902 : 1962 All W R (HC) 743.

——S. 332-B (as amended by S. 19, U. P. Land Reforms (Amendment) Act 18 of 1956)—Civil Court remitting issue to Collector — Jurisdiction of Collector to sit in judgment over civil Court's view.

It is for the civil Court to decide whether it has to refer an issue to the Collector or not. Its view may be wrong, but the Collector gets jurisdiction to decide the issue referred in view of sub-s. (2) of S. 332-B of the Act. Of course, he can reframe the issue, if necessary. The civil Court has to accept his finding and to decide the suit accepting that finding. Further, such a finding of the Collector is deemed to be part of the finding of the civil Court in view of sub-s. (5) of S. 332-B of the Act. Therefore, the Collector or the Assistant Collector has no jurisdiction to sit in judgment on the view of the civil Court remitting the issue to the Collector and has to decide that issue in accordance with the provisions of sub-ss. ——Ss. 336 and 339—Interpretation of—Pre-emption under Agra Pre-emption Act — Want of notification under S. 4—Effect.

There is no doubt some incongruity between Ss. 336 and 339 in that Agra Pre-emption Act will continue to remain enforceable so long as the notification under S. 4 as mentioned in S. 339 is not made, while the right of pre-emption, as mentioned in S. 336, would be taken away even before that time from the commencement of the U. P. Act 1 of 1951. But the language employed in S. 336 must be given its natural meaning and if so given the right of pre-emption ceased to exist in the areas to which the Act applied from the date on which the Act came into force, secondly S. 336 does not merely deal with the right of pre-emption, as contained in the Agra Pre-emption Act. It deals with the right of pre-emption based upon custom, usage or agreement also. It may be that the Legislature intended that the right of pre-emption, and all litigations regarding claims for pre-emption, may be put an end to as soon as the Act came into force, although, for some reasons the Agra Pre-emption Act was mentioned in Sch. 3 to the Act in which other enactments were also mentioned and which were to be repealed with effect from the date of publication of the notification under S. 4. However that may be Court is bound to give full effect to the express language of S. 336 specially when the whole area of the legislation dealt with in S. 336 is not covered by the provisions of S. 339. 1951 All L J 554 : I L R (1952) 1 All 265 : A I R 1952 All 81 (81, 82) (Pt B) (Prs 4, 6, 7).

——S. 344 (1) (c)—Rules under R. 115-C — Applicability—Title to land in dispute—Effect.

Cases under R. 115-C can only be taken by the Assistant Collector if the title to the land concerned is not in dispute. But if the title itself is in disoute, the only course open to the Land Management Committee is to proceed by way of a suit for ejectment. A citizen cannot be deprived of his valuable right of holding land in summary proceedings by R. 115-C. AIR 1958 All 97, Foll. 1960 All W R (HC) 564: 1960 All L J 725.

——S. 344—Ejectment order can be passed only by Collector and not by Tahsildar—Rules 115-D, 115-E, 115-F, are ultra vires—Rules being invalid ejectment order under them is illegal. See Tenancy Laws—U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act (1 of 1951), S. 118. 1960 All W R (HC) 327: 1960 All L J 549.

——S. 344—Power of State Government — Rule 61—Amendment of—Validity.

The power conferred on the State Government to make rules is to be exercised at all times and is not dependent upon the existence of the Legislature passing the Act. Hence, the power conferred on the State Government by S. 344 of the Act to make rules did not come to end when the Provincial Legislature that had passed the Act became defunct. Under S. 344 of the Act the Rules have to be laid down before the Legislature and the Legislature has power to amend them; but it does not mean that so long as they are not laid before the Legislature they are not in operation. They come into operation as soon as they are made and published. The amendment of R. 61 has been gazetted. It must be presumed that the amendment was placed before the Legislature as required under S. 344; it was not at all necessary for the fact to be published in a Gazette. 1956 All W R (HC) 838: 1956 All L J 244: AIR 1956 All 413 (414) (Pt A) (Prs 2, 3).

——S. 344—Constitution of India, Art. 14—Equality before law — Prospective operation of statute — The amendment of R. 61 framed under S. 344, U. P. Act 1 of 1951 does not contravene the guarantee of equality before the laws. See Constitution of India, Art. 14. AIR 1956 All 413.

——S. 344 — Rules under, R. 61 — Amendment of—Appeal filed after amendment — Court-fee — (U. P. General Clauses Act (1904), S. 6).

The court-fees payable on a memorandum of appeal filed under S. 50 of the Act after the amendment of R. 61 would be governed by the amended R. 61 and not by the old R. 61 which was in force when the action was commenced and ad valorem court-fee on the value of the subject-matter in appeal would be payable. Section 6, U. P. General Clauses Act lays down the effect of repeal of an enactment by another. There is no reason for applying a different law to repeal of a rule by another rule and the analogy of S. 6 should be applied. When a Court-fees Act is amended, the amendment does not revive anything not in force or existing at the time of the amendment. It must not affect the previous operation of the original Act; this only means that the court-fee that has been paid correctly according to the original Act must not be held to be insufficient because the amendment Act enhances the court-fee. But, if no court-fee has been paid yet, the old Act cannot be said to have been put into operation and the question of the court-fee payable arising after the amendment is not required to be answered by reference to the original Act. It follows that the amending statute must be applied. 1956 All L J 244 : 1956 All W R (H C) 838 : AIR 1956 All 413 (414) (Pt C) (Prs 5, 6, 7).

——S. 344 (3) and (4) and Rules—Rules and Act are intra vires.

Second appeal in a case under S. 49 of U. P. Tenancy Act was pending; the question was, if it was to be abated under R. 5 (a) (i) of the Zamindari Abolition Act and Land Reform Rules, 1952. It was contended that S. 6 (i) of the Act and Rules 4 to 7 of the Rules were ultra vires.

Held, it is concluded by the decision in AIR 1951 All 674 (FB) confirmed by the Supreme Court, that the provisions of the Act are valid and intra vires.

Section 344 (3) provides that the rules come into force on the date of publication in the Gazette unless some later date is appointed. Sub-sections (3) and (4) read together shows that though the rules come into force on the date of publication; they shall be subject to modification by the legislatures.

The appeal has to abate, but in view of the proposal to amend the rules 4 and 5 being under consideration, the appeal was adjourned. 1952 A L J (Rev) 267 : 1952 R D 374 : 1952 A W R (Rev) 247.

——S. 344 (4) — On a question of abatement of a second appeal arising out of a suit under S. 113, U. P. Tenancy Act stayed under R. 4 (a) of the Rules Held, what S. 344 of the Act requires is that the Rules are to be placed before the State Legislature and they will be subject to such modification as the Legislature may deem fit—The rules come into force on the date of publication unless a date is fixed — The rules have come into force and the second appeal has to abate. ——R. 5—Abatement of suit—When an appeal from a joint decree passed in a suit under S. 180, U. P. Tenancy Act 1939 had neither been stayed nor was pending on the date when R. 5 came into force and had already abated as long as January 1950 it would not be deemed to be pending when R. 4 or 5 came into force and hence no order directing abatement of the suit which has given rise to the appeal could be passed. See Tenancy Laws—U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Rules (1952), R. 4. AIR 1954 All 436 (DB).

[Overruled in AIR 1955 All 432.]

——R. 5—Section 2 of the U P. Land Tenures (Legal Proceedings) (Removal of Difficulties) Order (1952) does not abrogate Rr. 4 and 5 of the U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Rules and therefore where an appeal before the Board is stayed under Rr. 4 & 5 of those rules S. 2 cannot make it competent for the Board to hear the appeal until the issue has been allowed to be re-started under R. 5 (3) of those rules. 1952 All L J (Rev) 242.

——R. 5—Where it is the second appeal (which was pending on 1-7-52) which was stayed under R. 4 (iv) it is this appeal which shall be abated under R. 5 (a) (i) and not the suit itself from its inspection rendering the decree of the lower appellate Court final and barring future litigations in respect of the suit. See Tenancy Laws—U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Rules (1952), R. 4. 1952 All L J (Rev) 268.

——R. 5 (a) (i) — The plain meaning of the language used in R. 5 (a) (i) is that what has been stayed under R. 4 (i) to (iv) has to be abated by the Court before which it was pending. If it was the second appeal which was pending on the date of vesting and had been stayed it is that alone that has to be abated and not the suit also. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. RULE 8

——R. 8 (a)—Scope—If mandatory.

The portion of the rule which lays down the manner of recovery by setting off against compensation due under the Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act, is mandatory; that mandatory direction has to be carried out but without prejudice to other means of recovery. Once the tax is actually realised by this means, proceedings taken by the other means will have to stop. On the other hand, if some tax is recovered by other means before effect can be given to set-off under R. 8(a), that recovery would not become void. 1960 All W R (HC) 412 : 1960 All L J 542.

——R. 8-A—U. P. Agricultural Income-tax Act (3 of 1949), Ss. 6(d), 3, 2(13) — Assessment of agricultural income-tax for assessment year ending no 30-6-

1953 — Tax is in respect of income during previous year ending on 30-6-1952 — Rule 8-A applies to its recovery.

Section 3 of the U. P. Agricultural Income-tax Act emphatically charges the total agricultural income of the previous year to tax. It is true that assessment under the Act is made after the close of the previous year, but the income which is liable to tax is the income of the previous year. Where, therefore, the tax assessed is in respect of the agricultural income for the period of the previous year, i.e , for the period which ended on June 30, 1952, the case clearly falls within the terms of S. 6(d) and the benefit of R. 8-A was admissible to the assessee though the tax is due in assessment year ending on 30th June, 1953. RULE 16

——Rr. 16, 18, 19—Scope — Order under R. 16 — If open to challenge in civil Court.

Rule 19 does not apply to an order passed under R. 18. Rule 19 speaks of a Court of competent jurisdiction and does not speak of a civil Court. Therefore, that rule is not an indication of the fact that even an order under R. 16 can be challenged in a civil Court. The competent Court under R. 19 could still be the 'revenue Court' and R. 19 nowhere says that the 'competent Court' would be the civil Court. 1958 All L J 302 : 1958 All W R (HC) 481.

——Rr. 115 and 115-C — Duty of Collector — Interference by High Court — (Constitution of India, Art. 226).

When the report is made by the member of the Land Management Committee it is at that stage that the Collector has to make up his mind whether he will take steps for the removal of the encroachment or the repair of the damage under the subsequent sub-clauses of R. 115 or file a regular suit. Where that stage was over and the Collector had already issued notice under R. 115-D and had selected to take steps for the removal of the encroachment or to repair the damage, and the aggrieved party applied for prohibition directing the officer concerned not to proceed further with the matter.

Held, that the proceedings taken by the Collector were in the nature of quasi-judicial proceedings and the High Court could issue a writ of prohibition. AIR 1958 All 97 (99 to 101) (Pt C) (Prs 11, 12).

——Rr. 115, 115-A and 115-B — Scope — Auction sale of fishery right — Directions in para. 62 (2), U. P. Gaon Samaj Manual—Non-observance—Effect.

The auction of fishery right in tanks and ponds does not fall under cl. (d) of sub-r. (1) of R. 115 at all. Para. 62 of the Gaon Samaj Manual cannot therefore be said to be a direction issued under S. 115-A of the Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Rules and, as such, it cannot have the force of law or a direction validly issued under rule 115-A. Further the directions are not of a mandatory nature and therefore the land management committee was not bound to follow the directions. 1957 All W R (HC) 818 : 1957 All L J 716.

——R. 115-C — It is only in respect of the properties which are covered by the description given in R. 115-C that the power belonging to the Collector under these and subsequent rules is exercisable Where, therefore, in a dispute regarding the ownership of a well, the Assistant Collector decided the matter under Rule 115-D, it was held that well was not the property which came within the description of R. 115-C and hence the Assistant Collector had no jurisdiction to pass orders under R. 115-D. 1960 All L J 575 : 1960 All W R (HC) 433 : ILR (1960) 1 All 605.

——R. 115-C—Application made before amendment of February, 1957 — Some of applicants members of Committee — Competency.

There is nothing in R. 115-C (1) or (2) which makes it obligatory on the members of the Land Management Committee to make the report after they have received the sanction by a resolution of the Land Management Committee. The power under Cl. (2) has been given to the Chairman or any member or Secretary of the Committee to bring all cases of injury to the property of the Gaon Samaj to the notice of the Collector. Therefore, when some of the applicants are admittedly the members of the Land Management Committee it cannot be said that there was no proper report to the Collector on which action could be taken by him. Form No. 49 which was inserted in Cl. (2) of R. 115-C was amended in February 1957 and did not apply to the application made before that date. A I R 1958 All 97 (99) (Pt A) (Pr 8).

——Rr. 115-C and 115 — Scope and validity — If conflicts with S. 209 of the Act — (Tenancy Laws — U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act, 1950 (1 of 1951), S. 209) — (Constitution of India, Art. 14).

There is no conflict between R. 115-C of the Rules and S. 209 of the U. P. Act (1 of 1951). The two provisions are not discriminatory and are not hit by the provisions of Art. 14 of the Constitution. Action cannot be taken under R. 115-C in cases where the title of the Gaon Samaj itself is disputed; nor does R. 115-C apply to a case where a person has been put in possession of the land under a patta on behalf of the Land Management Committee and to ignore the patta on the ground that that was illegal, and regard the possession of the tenant as that of a trespasser and consider it as an encroachment on the land or an injury or damage to such a land. Even if the Collector has a right to declare the patta illegal the remedy of the Collector is to file a suit against the petitioner under S. 209 and not to take action under R. 115-C. SECTION 1

—S. 1 — Art. 31-A of the Constitution applies to V. P. Act 11 of 1952 and thus bars all objections to the validity of the Act based on contravention of Art. 31 (2) or on the adequacy or reasonableness of the compensation. See Constitution of India, Art. 31-A. AIR 1954 Vind Pra 24.

—S. 1—Applicability of Art. 254 to Part C State— Repugnancy between Part C Act and Parliamentary legislation — Effect — V. P. Act of 1952 is not void under Art. 254 (1). See Constitution of India, Art. 254. AIR 1954 Vind Pra 24.

——Ss. 1, 22, 37 and Sch., Cl. 4 (e)—Validity of — Entire Act except Ss. 22, 37 and Sch., Cl. 4 (e) is valid.

The V. P. Abolition of Jagirs and Land Reforms Act, 1952, as a whole is valid and constitutional subject to the following exceptions :

(a) That the 3 year test under S. 22 is bad as a piece of colourable, discriminatory legislation.

(b) That S. 37 barring the jurisdiction of Civil Courts is void under S. 22 of Government of the Part C States Act in view of repugnance to existing Parliamentary law in S. 9 of the C. P. Code.

(c) That cl. 4 (e) of the schedule is invalid and inoperative because it leads to the result of no compensation for a separable and independent item of interest in the property. AIR 1954 Vindh Pra 24 (29, 32) (Pt A) (Prs 27, 43, 47).

[Reversed in AIR 1960 S C 796.]

——S. 2 (1) (e)—"Ijaredar"—Meaning of—Lambardari lease conferring actual rights in land — Lessee held not a mere Ijaredar.

The word 'Ijaredar' used in S. 2 (1) (e) cannot be held to mean any lease of land of whatever kind. It should be confined to a person holding an Ijara which is a lease or form of land revenue or other proprietary right as distinguished from other kinds of leases of land. Padmini Kunwar Ju Sahiba v. State of Vindhya Pradesh, (1962) 1 S C J 531 : (1961) 3 S C R 907 : AIR 1961 S C 1204 (1205, 1206) (Prs 4, 6).

——S. 2 (f) — Land cultivated in 'adhiya' is not personal cultivation. 1960 M P L J (Notes) 1.

——Ss. 2 (c) and 2 (d) — Definition of Jagirdar and Jagir.

The terms 'jagirdar' and 'jagir' as defined in Ss. 2 (c) and 2 (d) are cognate terms, the former being the holder of an interest, and the latter the interest itself and hence when the term 'Jagirdar' has been defined very widely and comprehensively an apparent narrowness in the definition of 'Jagir' is not of any material consequence. AIR 1954 Vindh Pra 24 (26) (Pt B) (Pr 6).

——S. 5—Rent does not include a consideration paid by an assignee to the assignor of a bandh. 1964 M P L J 200 : 1964 Jab L J 135.

——S. 6 (g) — Part C States (Laws) Act, (1950) — S. 22 (as amended in 1954) — Conflict between provisions of S. 6 (g) of Abolition Act and S. 58, T. P. Act —S. 6 (g) not void after amendment of S. 22, Government of Part C States Act, in 1954. See Government of Part C States Act (49 of 1951), S. 22. AIR 1961 Madh Pra 216 (DB).

——S. 6—Scope — Resumption of Jagir lands subject to mortgage with possession — Personal liability of Jagirdars.

The effect of Cl. (g) of S. 6 (1), under which a mortgage with possession of the Jagir land, after resumption, is to be deemed to have been substituted by a simple mortgage, is not to render the Jagir lands held by the State Government liable to be sold for recovery of the mortgage debt. Section 6 (1) (a) provides that all lands shall stands resumed to the State Government 'free from all encumbrances'.

The word 'shall be deemed to have been substituted' used in sub-s. (ii) of Cl. (g) imply the creation of a legal fiction. The object of creating the fiction is to exonerate the State Government from any liability for the debt. It necessarily follows from the legal fiction that the Jagirdar (mortgagor) becomes personally liable for the debt as the security is destroyed by the vesting of the property in the State. Accordingly, the mortgagee has a right to sue for recovery of the amount from the Jagirdar. 1961 M P C 160 : 1961 Jab L J 836 : 1961 M P L J 1429 : ILR (1960) Madh Pra 1029 : A I R 1961 Madh Pra 216 (219, 220) (Pt C) (Prs 15, 19) (DB).

——S. 6—Rules under, Rules 4 and 5—Suit for redemption of resumed Jagir, abatement of.

A redemption suit is essentially a mixed suit for accounts and possession. A suit for possession is necessarily a suit for ejectment as the plaintiff is put into possession after the ejectment of the defendant. Hence a suit for redemption of land which forms part of a resumed jagir, so far as it relates to the relief of possession is a proceeding for ejectment from the land of a resumed jagir within the meaning of R. 4 (1) and should be abated under R. 5. A I R 1954 Vin Pra 13 (15) (Pt B) (Prs 7, 8).

——Ss. 7, 22 and 28 (1)—Scope—Validity of S. 22 —If colourable legislation—If violates Art. 14.

The Vindhya Pradesh Legislature had full competence to enact S. 22 under entry 18 of List 2 of Sch. 7 of the Constitution. Section 22 cannot be challenged as a colourable piece of legislation. The provisions of S. 22 as a whole provide a scheme for carrying out the intention of the legislature expressed in S. 7 (a) of the Act and are perfectly constitutional. A I R 1953 S C 375; 1953 S C J 592, Applied. Section 22 does not violate Art. 14. Even if it be held that there is discrimination under S. 22 (1) as compared to S. 28 (1) it cannot be a ground for striking down S. 22 (1) in view of Art. 31-A. Sections 7 and 22 of the Act work out the scheme of acquisition of estates and are incidental provisions which are equally protected under Art. 31-A along with the main provisions contained in Ss. 5 and 6 of the Act. See Tenancy Laws — Vindhya Pradesh Abolition of Jagirs and Land Reforms Act (11 of 1952), S. 22. A I R 1956 Vin. Pra 12.

——Ss. 7 (b), 7 (c), 11 (4), 13 (8), 27 (2) and 41 — Validity of — Do not amount to delegation of legislative power.

Though in S. 7 (b) and (c), S. 27 (2), S. 41, S. 11 (4) and S. 13 (8) certain things are left open to be 'prescribed' by the rule-making authority, the legislature is not dealing with the acquisition of the Zamindari and is not enunciating the principles and the manner of paying compensation in these provisions. Here it is dealing with the consequential matters following from its policy of leaving certain properties with the Jagirdar, tenant, or other person as the case may be. It also does not leave it to the rule-making authority which property is to be given. It does not therefore, amount either to a complete abdication of legislative

Clause 4 (e) of the Schedule to the Act is valid. Though the landlord may have to pay rent in future for the land remaining with him, he does not pay any revenue which was payable by him so far with respect to such land. In the circumstances, it cannot be said that he has been deprived of the proprietary interest without any compensation, for he is relieved of the charge of paying land revenue which has also been taken into account in arriving at the net assets for that purpose, and that is all that he can expect, considering that the land remains in his possession for all other purposes. SECTION 212 ——Ss. 212 and 214 — Power to determine obstruction—If, exercisable by Nyaya Panchayat.

Section 214 of the Act lays down that if Tahsildar finds that any obstacle has been erected impending the free use of a recognised road, path or common land of a village or obstracting a road or watercourse which had been the subject of decision under S. 212 of the Act, he may order the person responsible for creating the obstacle to remove it. The Tahsildar's jurisdiction and thus of Nyaya Panchayat by virtue of S. 70 of the Ordinance is, therefore, limited to the consideration of the question whether an obstruction has been put on land which has been subject of decision under S. 212 of the Act. In the absence of any adjudication under S. 212 the Nyaya Panchayat could not deal with the matter as if it had been called upon to decide for the first time whether the land was a recognised road, path or common land. 1961 M P L J (Notes) 143.

——Ss. 215 and 218—A suit for possession of land based on title is maintainable in civil Court — Such suit is not barred under S. 218 of the Act.

The provisions contained in Ss. 215 and 218 of the Vindhya Pradesh Land Revenue and Tenancy Act, 1953, correspond to Ss. 250 and 257 of the Madhya Pradesh Land Revenue Code (1959). 1965 M P L J (Notes) 165.

the natural meaning of the word "desire" and the absence of any qualification of any kind to restrict its natural meaning, as also the difference between that expression and the expression "bona fide required" which had been used in a series of Rent Acts but has not been used in the Barga Act, there is no room for importing any considerations of "bona fides" of requirement in the decision of a question under S. 5 (1) (a). 26 C W N 499, Referred to. 56 Cal W N 320 : 89 Cal L J 196 : AIR 1951 Cal 574 (575) (Pt A) (Pr 9) (DB).

——Ss. 6 (2), 19 (2) (d), 12 (1), 2 (h) — R. 8 (1)— Validity.

Even though under S. 6 (2) the full Board has to consist of a chairman and four other members with two representatives of bargadars and two representatives of owners, it is obvious that in order to carry out the purposes of the Act some sort of quorum has to be prescribed and this is precisely what the Government have done by making rule 8 (1) of the Rules under the Act. The rule is clearly reasonable, even though no provision for proportionate representation of bargadars and owners has been made in the rule. The rule has statutory force and it is well within the competence of the State Government to make such rules. An order passed in conformity with R. 8 (1) cannot be held to be ultra vires or without jurisdiction. 63 CWN 627, Overruled. 63 Cal W N 905 : AIR 1959 Cal 758 (758) (Pr 2) (DB).

——Ss. 6 and 2 — Person filling both characters of owner and bargadar — If proper representative of bargadars.

Section 6 of the W. B. Bargadars Act, read with S. 2 thereof, envisages that the representatives of bargadars must be bargadars pure and simple. If a person fills dual characters, such as that of a bargadar and that of an owner, he has conflicting interests to serve as such owner and bargadar. In order that the interest of bargadars can be properly and adequately served, the person representing the interest of the bargadars must be a bargadar, pure and simple. AIR 1952 Cal 868 (869, 870) (Prs 12, 14, 15).

——S. 7—Board's power to pass interim or prohibitory order — (C. P. Code (1908), S. 9)—(Special Tribunal).

The Bhagchas Board which is entirely a creature of the statute cannot act except within the four corners of the Statute which sets it up. Section 7 of the Act, empowers the Board to decide disputes, with respect to matters mentioned in the section, between a bargadar and an owner of the land, and there is nothing in the said section or in the Act empowering the Board to make an interim order or even to pass any prohibitory order. In the absence of provisions in the Act which confers any such general powers on the Board, the Board has no power other than those specifically conferred on it by the Act. 59 CWN 119, followed. (1957) 61 Cal W N 149.

——Ss. 7 (1), 9 (2) and 18 — Dispute relating to matters mentioned in S. 7 (1) — Civil Court's jurisdiction to decide.

The cumulative effect of Ss. 7 (1), 9 (2) and 18 of the West Bengal Bargadars Act is that the only forum available for settlement of every dispute relating to matters mentioned in S. 7 (1), i.e., dispute regarding the division or delivery of the produce is the Board established for the area concerned and no Court shall entertain any suit required to be decided by the Board. Even if no Board has been established by the Government for the local area concerned, the Civil Court has no jurisdiction to decide such dispute. 59 Cal W N 658, Approved. 60 Cal W N 351 : ILR (1957) 2 Cal 435 : AIR 1956 Cal 497 (498) (Pt A) (Pr 3)(DB).

——Ss. 7 (1). 8, 9—Scope — W. B. Bargadars Ordinance (10 of 1949).

Prima facie, an Act of a legislature is prospective and speaks from the date of its coming into force in the absence of an express provision to the contrary or a necessary intendment in the Act. There is nothing either in the W. B. Ordinance 10 of 1949 or in W. B. Act 2 of 1950, which contains an express provision or a necessary intendment to the contrary. On the other hand, Ss. 7 (1) (a), 7 (1) (b) and 7 (1) (c) and S. 8 of the Bargadar Act contemplate a State of events which can only occur after the Statute came inco operation. These sections reinforce the general rule that the Bargadars Act, 1950, must be taken to operate prospectively.

The word 'any' in S. 9 (2) refers to any disputes which occur after the Act came into force. The dispute which occurred in 1946-47 does not come within S. 7 (1) (a) and a right to sue in civil Court in consequences of that dispute has not been taken away by S. 9 (2) of the W. B. Act (2 of 1950). AIR 1955 NUC (Cal) 935 (DB).

——Ss. 7 and 9 (2)—Jurisdiction of Conciliation Board.

If the reliefs asked for by the applicants come under any one or more of the clauses enumerated in S. 7 of the Act, the Bhag Chas Conciliation Board will have jurisdiction to decide a question, such as a question of title, not falling within that section, as ancillary or incidental to the reliefs asked for by the applicants, though the decision on such question will not certainly be final or conclusive and will not be ceedings under S. 403, Penal Code, were misconceived and the Magistrate was justified in making an order under S. 253, Criminal Procedure Code. (1957) 61 Cal W N 522 : 1957 Cri L J 671 (671, 672) (Pt A) (Prs 4, 7).

——S. 14—Elements of offence under.

In a prosecution under S. 14 two things need be proved; (i) the existence of an order or award made by a Board, and (ii) non-compliance with that order or award. If these two elements are proved, the offence described in S. 14 is established. (1957) 61 Cal W N 522 : 1957 Cri L J 671 (671) (Pt B) (Pr 5).

——S. 14—Scope—Offence—Complaint under Penal Code — Dismissal — Subsequent complaint under S. 14, W. B. Bargadars Act if barred — (Penal Code (1860), S. 403)—(Cr. P. Code (1898), Ss. 253, 403).

An order of discharge in respect of an offence under S. 403, Penal Code, cannot possibly be a bar to a properly framed complaint under S. 14 of the Bargadars Act. (1957) 61 Cal W 522 : 1957 Cri L J 671 (671) (Pt C) (Pr 5).

——S. 14—Procedure—(Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 29 and Schedule II)—Applicability.

For the trial of offences under the W. B. Bargadars Act, the procedure prescribed by the Code of Criminal Procedure will undoubtedly apply. Under the second schedule of the Code any magistrate can try a contravention of S. 14 of W. B. Bargadars Act provided a proper complaint is instituted in Court. (1957) 61 Cal W N 522 : 1957 Cri L J 671 (671) (Pt D) (Pr 6).

——S. 14—Applicability — Order not one under Act —Conviction for contravention—Legality.

The Board passed an order prohibiting a bhagchasi from reaping paddy on the land in dispute without the knowledge of the Board. Thereupon he made a proposal that he would appear before the Board 3 days before the reaping of the paddy and take a member of the Board with him to the spot. He was accordingly given a direction to that effect. But in spite of the direction, he reaped the paddy without taking the member of the Board with him. He was therefore charged under S. 14 of the Act.

Held, that though it was certainly an order passed on the basis of an undertaking given by the accused himself, at the same time in deciding whether the accused came within the mischief of S. 14 of the Act what one had to consider was whether it was an order under the Act; the order in question might be perfectly legal without at the same time being an order under the Act. The order was obviously not one under any of the provisions of the Act and that being so, the accused did not make himself liable under S. 14 of the Act. (1957) 61 Cal W N 149.

——Ss. 18, 7 (1), 9 (2) — Dispute relating to matters mentioned in S. 7 (1)—Civil Court has no jurisdiction to decide even if there is no Board established for the local area — (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 9). See Tenancy Laws — West Bengal Bargadars Act (2 of 1950), S. 7 (1). A I R 1956 Cal 497 (DB).

——S. 18—Scope of—Power to go behind contract.

Section 18 does not mean that even as regards the existence or otherwise of a settlement of the barga type, the contract or instrument must or may be disregarded. The Board or the Appellate Officer is undoubtedly entitled to see whether a written contract purporting to evidence the arrangement between the parties is a sham document, not representing the true incidents of the contract, but the source of that power is not S. 18. The proper line to take before discarding the instrument would be to see if the recorded payments were consistent with the terms of the agreement or suggested an arrangement on other terms. If the payments were found to be consistent with the terms of the deed, other and stronger reasons would be required in order to hold that the deed did not represent the true relationship between the parties. —WEST BENGAL BARGADARS ACT (19 of 1956)

——S. 1—'Under the Act'—Meaning of.

The words 'under the Act' refer only to those proceedings which are authorised by this Act. There is no scope for extending the benefit of these words to any proceedings under any law other than the West Bengal Bargadars Act, 1950. Rabindra Nath Mahapatra v. Gour Mondal, 61 C W N 311 : A I R 1957 Cal 274 (279, 280) (Pt H) (Prs 21, 25, 29) (FB).

——S. 2—Scope and operation of.

The West Bengal Bargadars Act, 1956 took the place of the West Bengal Bargadars Ordinance 1956, as soon as the Ordinance ceased to operate. Section 2 of the Act is in the same terms as Cl. 2 of the Ordinance except that a second proviso has been added at the end of the provisions and that in sub-s. 1 (a) (i), corresponding to sub cl. (1) (a) (i) of the Ordinance the words 'or any application for revision' have been added. The Legislature has made no provision for saving the Bargadars Act, 1950, for the purposes of pending proceedings initiated under other laws. The result is that the West Bengal Bargadars Act, 1950, is alive for purposes of and applicable only to, and in, such pending proceedings, authorised by the Act itself, as are mentioned in S. 2 (1) (a), West Bengal Bargadars Act, 1956, provided they were pending on 31-3-1956 and also at the date of the Act. The provisions of the Act are not applicable to or in pending proceedings under other laws such as Art. 227 of the Sub-section 2 (k).

——Ss. 2 (k), 5—'Non-agricultural' tenant — Lessee of fishery—Status and rights of.

The right of fishing is not a right in land at all. It is what is called a "profit-a-prendre", and is a right arising out of land. A benefit arising out of land is not the land itself, although it may be a kind of immovable property — Where the lease of fishery expressly laid down that the lessees would have no interest in the underlying or the subjacent land, relating to the jalkar, then they cannot be said to have any interest in non-agricultural land, and therefore cannot be deemed to be non-agricultural tenants. AIR 1956 S C 17, Rel. on; AIR 1944 Cal 315, held not good law in view of AIR 1956 S C 17—The right enjoyed by the lessee is an "easement" and therefore, comes within the meaning of the expression "incumbrance" as used in sub-s. (a) of S. 5 of the Act. Since all estates and the rights of intermediaries in such estates have vested in the Government free from incumbrances it follows that unless the lessee of the fishery can show that he is able to save his rights under some provisions of law the State must take the estate free from his right. Sub-section 2 (p).

——Ss. 2 (p) and 4—'Estate'—'Intermediary'.

Held, that the interest of the petitioner under the Sanad was not an intangible right like a political pension, but a right in land. It certainly was an 'estate' as defined under the Bengal Tenancy Act and related to land included under one entry in one of the General Registers of revenue-paying or revenue free lands prepared and maintained under the law for the time being in force by the Collector of a District. It was an interest of an 'intermediary' in such an estate because it was the interest of an intermediary above a raiyat. His interest had always been treated as an intermediate interest in land and entered as such in the record of rights to which at no time had there been any objection. The result was that it was an 'estate' which came within the scope of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953 and by the Notification under S. 4, the estate had vested in the State of West Bengal. ——S. 4—Validity of—(Constitution of India, Arts. 31, 31-A)—(T. P. Act (1882), S. 73 (2)).

Under S. 4, the estate of an intermediary and all rights in the estate vest in the State Government free from all incumbrances, that is to say, free from the mortgage. Under S. 73 (2) of the Transfer of Property Act, the mortgages shift to the compensation money. The definition of the word 'rights' in Art. 31-A includes all kinds of rights in estates. The basic idea was that the land and all rights in it should vest in Government, so that it could be distributed amongst the actual tillers of the soil. The interest of a mortgagee would be included in the words 'rights in an estate' as used in Art. 31-A. That being so, even if it is found that the statute contains no provision for compensation to the mortgagee, still the law is saved by the provisions of Art. 31-A of the Constitution. for damages is also passed against the tenant on the footing that he is declared to be a trespasser from a date prior to the date of vesting. This part of the decree for damages cannot in any way be rendered nugatory by the order of vesting and where such a question is pending in appeal on the date of vesting the question must be finally determined in the appeal. It would be absurd to say that the whole decree including the decree for damages has become infructuous by reason of the vesting. 61 C W N 607, Rel. on. 61 C W N 533, Disting. (1958) 62 Cal W N 505: ILR (1959) 2 Cal 283.

——S. 5—'Any other person' — If to be read ejusdem generis with intermediary — Sale of right to cut timber from forest for particular period.

Under S. 5 (aa), West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act as amended by W. B. Act 25 of 1957 what vests in Government is not only the land but all the trees standing thereon or the produce of the trees held by the intermediaries or any other person. But the words 'any other person' cannot be read ejusdem generis, with intermediaries The rule of ejusdem generis can only apply where there exists a genus or category. The word 'intermediary' does not contain one genus or one category to which the disputed words may be said to belong. By the Estates Acquisition Act all the estates of intermediaries were being acquired. Where the owner of a certain forest had granted a right in 1953 to the petitioner who was admittedly not an intermediary to enter the forest, cut and take away the trees therefrom for a particular period, the petitioner's right is lost by virtue of S. 5 as amended, and he can no longer take away the wood without the permission of the State. 1958 Cal L J 213 : (1958) 62 Cal W N 610.

——S. 5—Vesting of estate — Effect on lease for felling trees in forest — (Sale of Goods Act (1930), S. 2 (7)—Goods)—(T. P. Act (1882), Ss. 3, 105)—(Constitution of India, Art. 226—Mandamus).

Held on facts, that the so-called lease was not a lease of the land in the usual sense, but it was really a sale of goods and not a transfer of any interest in land. What was sold was the wood standing in a certain forest, for a specified price. The wood that was sold was already standing. It was impossible upon a construction of the agreement in this case to hold that the wood that the petitioner purchased was a purchase of a mere profit a prendre. As it was a sale of goods the property had passed before the Act 1 of 1954 came into operation. The State had been proceeding upon a misconstruction or misappreciation of the Estates Acquisition Act, and was proceeding to take possession of things which had not vested in the Government. Hence there would be a writ in the nature of mandamus and/or an appropriate writ directing the State not to prevent the petitioner from cutting or removing the wood which he was entitled to do under the agreement. Under R. 3-B read with R. 9 of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Rules, the appellate authority has power to stay further proceedings in respect of recovery of possession under the order of the Collector until the disposal of the appeal on sufficient grounds being shown. Such power, however, has to be exercised with a view to render justice to both the parties and not merely to the appellant. ——S. 6 (1)—'Khas possession' — Meaning of—Rule of 'casus omissus' — (Interpretation of Statutes — Casus omissus.)

'Khas possession' is mentioned in clauses (c), (d) and its provisos (h), (i) and (j) of S. 6, whereas it is not mentioned in the other clauses. This use of the words 'khas possession' in some clauses and not in others must be taken to be deliberate and not accidental. It cannot be argued that the legislature had not the intention of making a distinction between the case of clause (b) and clause (c). The Court will not add these words in the clauses where they are not. (1959) 63 Cal W N 513.

——S. 6 (1) (b) — Applicability — Chandina tenants building structure.

The lands whereon the Chandina tenants of the intermediary have constructed structures come within the mischief of S. 6 (1) (b) of the Act, and where the intermediary has elected to retain the same the State Government cannot treat the Chandina tenants as its own tenants to the exclusion of the intermediary. That action is not warranted by the terms and provisions of the Act as it now stands. (1959) 63 Cal W N 513.

——S. 6 (1) (g) — Applicability — "Land comprised in factories'—Brick field.

Where the land under the lease is a brick field and bricks are manufactured therein it must be held to be a land comprised in factories if not in workshops. (1957) 61 Cal W N 533.

——S. 6 (2), Proviso — Lease under intermediary — Lease expiring before the Act—Effect.

Where the lease given by the intermediary Corporation comes to an end long before the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act had come into force it cannot be said that the lessee is holding the land under the lease from intermediary within the meaning of the Proviso to S. 6 (2) even if the corporation did not get the physical possession of the land long after the Act. The proviso does not apply to the case. (1957) 61 Cal W N 533.

——S. 6 (2), Proviso — Applicability — Lease under intermediary—S. 6 (1).

The lease referred to in the proviso to S. 6 (2) is a lease held under the intermediary and if there is such a lease on the declaration of the date of the vesting a direct relationship is created between the lessee and the State Government with the result that the right of the intermediary is completely wiped out and he is not entitled even to retain the land under sub-s. (1) of S. 6. This meaning of the proviso is borne out by sub-s. (1) of S. 6. which states that except in the case mentioned in the proviso to sub-s. (2) the intermediary would be entitled to retain with effect from the date of the vesting the properties mentioned. (1957) 61 Cal W N 533.

——S. 6 (3)— (as amended by Act 35 of 1955) — Land comprised in mill in possession of tenants — Intermediary cannot retain it. (1956) 60 Cal W N 979.

——S. 6 (1)—'Retain'—Meaning—Lands in possession of tenants — Intermediary is not entitled to retain such lands—(Words and Phrases—'Retain').

The dictionary meaning of the word 'retain' is to keep possession of or to keep in possession and so the use of this word in S. 6 (1) is sufficient to indicate that the Legislature intended that the intermediary must be in possession of whatever lands he was entitled to retain under S. 6. Hence in order that an intermediary might retain such lands they must be in his khas possession and not in the possession of his tenants. (1956) 60 Cal W N 979.

——S. 12 — Decree-holder having charge over property acquired under Act — Right to satisfy charge from compensation received by Receiver—(T. P. Act (1882), Ss. 73 and 100).

A decree-holder, who has a charge over the property which has since been acquired under the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953, and in respect of which compensation is payable under the Act, is entitled to an order directing the Receiver appointed by the Court to obtain payment of the ad interim compensation money and to apply the same towards satisfaction of his dues. This can be done by virtue of S. 73 (2) read with S. 100 of the Transfer of Property Act. Even apart from any statutory provision, on general principles when a property is compulsorily acquired free from incumbrances, the charge which attached to the property must be held to attach to the compensation money which replaces the property and the charge-holder is entitled to follow the substituted security and to realise his dues out of the latter property. See Tenancy Laws—West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953 (1 of 1954) (as amended by W. B. Act 4 of 1957), S. 2 (i). AIR 1960 Cal 646.

——Ss. 28, 29 (as amended by W. B. Act 4 of 1957) —Scope — Conflict with Central Statutes dealing with mines and minerals.

It may be that the provisions of Ss. 28 and 29 of the Act may come in conflict with the Central Acts, Rules and Regulations relating to mines and minerals, which is a central subject. But this is expressly provided for in the Act, inasmuch as both Ss. 28 and 29 are subject to the proviso that all such terms and conditions as are laid down in those sections shall be consistent with the provisions of any Central Act for the time being in force relating to the grant of mining lease or codification thereof. With these provisos the operations of the Central Acts, Rules and Regulations are kept in full force. If there is any clash between any provision of the Act and Central Acts, Rules and Regulations, the Central Acts, Rules and Regulations will prevail. 66 Cal W N 304 : AIR 1960 Cal 646 (663) (Pt E) (Pr 30).

——S. 44 (2), (3) and (4) — Scope — Entry in record of right — If conclusive and binding. See Constitution of India, Art. 226. (1959) 63 Cal W N 933.

——S. 46 — Record of Rights—Suit challenging correctness of entry filed after final publication of Record of Rights — Suit is maintainable — 64 Cal W N 561, Foll. 69 Cal W N 210 ; AIR 1965 Cal 328 (332) (Pt D) (Pr 18).

——S. 46—Applicability—Stay of suit under—When granted.

For the applicability of S. 46 the test is to find out whether, in the proceeding in question before the Civil Court, the matters in issue involve or comprise the question of determination of rent or the incidents of any tenancy or the status of any tenant and, once that test is satisfied, the suit or proceeding concerned must be stayed. The section would apply even if the determination of the incidents of the tenancy or of the status of the tenant be only one of the issue in the suit. 66 Cal W N 121 ; 1964 Cal L J 170.

——S. 46 — Stay of further proceedings in suit.

What S. 46 contemplates is stay of further proceedings in suits where the 'question of rent' or the 'question of status' of the tenant or 'incidents' of the tenancy were — or, at least, were also — matters for determination as distinct from the question of existence or non-existence of the particular tenancy. 64 Cal W N 83 ; I L R (1960) 2 Cal 898.

——S. 46 (as amended by Act 25 of 1957) — Scope—Effect of amendment.

Questions of title and apportionment of rent do not fall within the ambit of S. 46. Hence where a court decides these questions the decision must be upheld. 59 C W N 1006; 60 C W N 1070 and 61 C W N 349, Rel on.

The scope of the application of S. 46 has in no way been widened by the amendment. The real purport of the amendment is that whereas according to the original section, a pending suit to which S. 46 applied remained stayed and was liable to be revived, the amendment provided that the suit would abate on the happening of certain events. ILR (1960) 1 Cal 319.

——S. 46 — Applicability — Suit for declaration of tenancy right and for injunction during preparation or revision of record of rights—Maintainability.

In all suits in which questions as regards the rate of rent, the status of tenant or the incidents of any tenancy to which the record of rights relates have to be determined for a proper decision of a suit S. 46 will apply. Where the notification has been published, the civil Court will not entertain such a suit, but where the suit had already been instituted when the notification is published, the civil Court will stay the hearing of the suit and will recommence the hearing of the suit after final publication. 59 Cal W N 1006 and Civil Case No. 3449 of 1955, Rel. on. Observations to the contrary in 61 Cal W N 349, held obiter and not correct. 60 Cal W N 1070, Overruled. 63 Cal W N 521 : I L R (1960) 1 Cal 30.

——S. 46—Applicability — Landlord's suit repudiating defendant's claim as tenant.

In order that the suit may satisfy the description given in S. 46, it must be a suit for determination of rent or a determination of the status of the tenant or the incidents of any tenancy to which the record of rights relates. A suit by the landlord for a declaration which virtually repudiates the defendant's claim as a tenant or a Bargadar, cannot be said to be one to which the description given in S. 46 may rightly be applied. (1959) 63 Cal W N 818.

——S. 46—Stay of suit—Issue as to whether relationship of landlord and tenant exists.

Section 46 does not provide for stay of a suit for the determination of the issue as to whether the relationship of landlord and tenant exists. Hence a suit for determination of such issue and for declaration that the plaintiff is entitled to tenancy rights and for consequential reliefs is not a suit, for "determination of the status of any tenancy". 59 Cal W N 1006, Rel. on. 60 Cal W N 1070 : I L R (1957) 3 Cal 77.

[Overruled in 63 Cal W N 521.]

——S. 46—Scope of—Civil Court's jurisdiction—Bar of—(Civil P. C. (1908), S. 9).

Section 46 of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act restricts the power of the civil Court temporarily. The operation of that section should, therefore, be confined to cases to which the section applies in its terms and it should not be extended beyond that limit. Section 46 applies to suits and applications, which are purely suits and applications for the determination of rent or determination of the status of any tenant or the incidents of any tenancy. The operation of S. 46 cannot be extended to cases where a person seeks for a declaration of his right to any land as a tenant and where that right is denied by the other side. (1957) 99 Cal L J 7 : 61 Cal W N 349.

——Ss. 49, 52 (as amended by West Bengal Act 35 of 1955) — Validity — Acquisition of rights of raiyats and under-raiyats — Provisions are protected by Art. 31-A of the Constitution and cannot be declared void on the ground that the Act is violative of Arts. 14, 19 and 31. 68 Cal W N 1124 : AIR 1964 Cal 552 (554) (Pt A) (Pr 3) (DB).

——Ss. 49, 52 (as amended by West Bengal Act 35 of 1955)—Raiyats and under-raiyats — Meaning of—Must be given ordinary meaning — Includes raiyats who are tillers of land. See Constitution of India, Art. 31-A (2) (b) (as amended by the Fourth Amendment Act, 1955). AIR 1964 Cal 552 (DB).

——Chap. 6, (Ss. 49-52) — Pre-emption — Co-sharer occupancy raiyats — Decree for partition — No partition by metes and bounds — Co-sharer in separate possession by amicable arrangement — One co-sharer selling portion in his possession — Other co-sharers entitled to pre-empt even after vesting of holding under Acquisition Act—Jama also remains joint after vesting. See Tenancy Laws — Bengal Tenancy Act (8 of 1885), S. 26-F. (1963) 67 Cal W N 633.

——S. 49—Scope — Held, on facts that sales of land in question were not void in view of provision of S. 5-B read with S. 52 of Estates Acquisition Act. See Tenancy Laws — West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act (1 of 1954), S. 52. I L R (1962) 2 Cal 210.

——Chap. 6 (Ss. 49-52)—Amendment of—Validity in so far as it enables acquisition of rights of raiyats under-raiyats in possession — Cl. 6 has affected such rights — Raiyats and under-raiyat are now in position of intermediaries. See Constitution of India, Art. 31-A. AIR 1958 Cal 96.

——Chap. 6 (Ss. 49-52) — Scope — If vague and uncertain.

There is no substance in the argument that as under S. 52 certain provisions of the Act are to apply mutatis mutandis to raiyats and under-raiyats as if such raiyats or under-raiyats were intermediaries. The provisions referred to therein, which were in the first instance meant to be applied to intermediaries as defined in the Act, were to apply to raiyats and under-raiyats with such modifications as were necessary, but that there is no certainty as to what modifications are to be made and who was to decide the same. Deeming provisions of law are usually made in that fashion to avoid repetition of the provisions of all the Chapters which were meant to apply, increasing the bulk of the Act needlessly. The Act aims at the acquisition of the entire interest of the raiyat or under-raiyat, which vests in the State. A contract, usage or custom cannot override the vesting provisions in the statute. Even assuming that there exist two provisions of the nature it is not likely to be put into operation so as to come into conflict with each other. 62 Cal W N 14 : A I R 1958 Cal 96 (102) (Pt D) (Pr 16).

——Chap. 6 (Ss. 49-52) — Validity of—Chap. 6 does not become ineffective because of vagueness and uncertainty. See Constitution of India, Art. 31 (2). AIR 1958 Cal 96.

——S. 52 (as amended by W. B. Act 35 of 1955) — Validity — Section not vague — Use of expression 'mutatis mutandis' — Effect of — Difficulty in making adaptations — Does not make a section uncertain. 68 Cal W N 1124 : AIR 1964 Cal 552 (555, 556) (Pt E) (Pr 9) (DB).

——S. 52 — Constitutional validity — Expression 'modification' — Meaning of — Words and Phrases — 'Modification' — Constitution of India, Arts. 14 and 19.

The word 'modifications' in S. 52 of the Act means contextual adaptation of Chaps. II, III, V and VII of the Act to the case of raiyats and under-raiyats and not amendment of the substantive provisions and effects of those chapters. The contextual adaptation is only intended to make those chapters applicable to the case of raiyats and under-raiyats which without the modification might not have been applicable to the case of raiyats and under-raiyats. In order to maintain an action under S. 19-B, it must be proved that there has been an illegal termination of cultivation of land by a bargadar. If that fact is not proved, then no action under S. 19-B (1) can be maintained. Where persons claiming as Bargadars were in possession of land, others doing acts of crime or tort by removing crops raised will not get a right to maintain action under S. 19-B. See Tenancy Laws—West Bengal Land Reforms Act (10 of 1956), S. 18 (1) (a). ILR (1958) 1 Cal 273.

●——S. 21 (2)—Scope and effect of — West Bengal Bargadars Act (2 of 1950), Ss. 7 and 18.

The Land Reforms Act, 1955 provides in S. 18 for the appointment of a tribunal of an altogether different kind and, therefore, S. 18 of the Act can, in no sense, be regarded as the re-enactment of S. 7, Bargadars Act, 1950. S. 25, Bengal General Clauses Act, can, therefore, have no application unless at the time when the Bargadars Act was to expire, there were already officers or authorities appointed under the Land Reforms Act, to whom proceedings pending before the old Boards under the Bargadars Act could stand transferred, such proceedings could not survive the expiry of the Bargadars Act for the purposes of a subsequent transfer. Immediately on the expiry of the Bargadars Act they would terminate automatically. Nothing could keep them alive during the interval between the expiry of the Bargadars Act and and the appointment of appropriate officers or authorities under the Land Reforms Act, Rabindra Nath Mahapatra v. Gour Mondul, 61 C W N 311: A I R 1957 Cal 274 (277) (Pt D) (Pr 13) (FB).

——S. 1 (2) — Calcutta Thika Tenancy Act (2 of 1949), S. 1 (2) — Calcutta Municipal Act (33 of 1951), Ss. 594 and 595 — Premises situated in Tollygunge, Calcutta — Tenancy of premises created in 1937— Petition for eviction of tenants brought in 1957 — Tollygunge included in Calcutta by notification issued under S. 594, Calcutta Municipal Act — Effect of notification on applicability of Calcutta Thika Tenancy Act — Held, that W. B. Non-Agricultural Tenancy Act applied and not Calcutta Thika Tenancy Act and that tenants could not be evicted — 20 Cal W N 258, Rel. on. (1965) 69 Cal W N 842.

——S. 1 (2) (a)— Scope — Calcutta Municipal Act of 1923 repealed and re-enacted as Calcutta Municipal Act of 1951 — Definition of "Calcutta" as given in S. 1 (2) (a) of W. B. Act 1 of 1949 in terms of that given in Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923 must be construed as definition in terms of that Calcutta Municipal Act of 1951. See Bengal General Clauses Act (1 of 1899), S. 10. AIR 1956 Cal 357 (DB).

——S. 1 (2) (b) — Scope — Bengal General Clauses Act (1 of 1899), S. 10—Contrary intention—It cannot be said that the expanded definition of Calcutta as given in Calcutta Municipal Act 1 of 1951 was excluded, because a different intention appeared in S. 1 (2) (e) of W. B. Act 20 of 1949. See Bengal General Clauses Act (1 of 1899), S. 10. AIR 1956 Cal 357 (DB).

——S. 1—Scope and object of Act — It is not merely an Act regulating ejectment and incidental proceedings therewith — It deals with general law on the subject. AIR 1955 N U C (Cal) 2957.

——S. 1—Interpretation.

The West Bengal Non-agricultural Tenancy Act, 1949, is admittedly a remedial statute and so it ought to be liberally construed. Case-law referred. 58 Cal W N 651 : ILR (1956) 2 Cal 370 : AIR 1954 Cal 539 (540) (Pt C) (Pr 6).

——S. 2 (5) and S. 3 (1) — Section 2 (5) read with S. 3 (1) indicates that under-tenant is non-agricultural tenant too — Right of pre-emption under S. 24 available to co-sharer non-agricultural tenant, equally avails co-sharer non-agricultural under-tenant. See Tenancy Laws— W. B. Non-agricultural Tenancy Act (20 of 1949), S. 24. (1965) 69 Cal W N 836.

——S. 2 (5)—'Tenant' — The words 'non-agricultural tenant' must be taken to include a tenant whose tenancy had expired for some reason or other before the Act came into force but for whose ejectment the suit was filed alter the Act had come into force. AIR 1953 Cal 780; AIR 1942 Cal 49, Rel. on. (1960) 64 Cal W N 240.

——Ss. 2 (4), 2 (5) and 3 (3) — Tenancy of lands partly for agricultural and partly for non-agricultural land — Tenant — If non-agricultural tenant.

According to the definition of a non-agricultural tenant, the non-agricultural land must by itself, constitute an independent unit of tenancy. If the non-agricultural land by itself does not constitute the subject-matter of a separate tenancy and is a fraction of lands held partly for agricultural and partly for non-agricultural purposes, the tenant holding such a land cannot be said to be a non-agricultural tenant within the meaning of S. 4 (5) or a tenant within the meaning of S. 3 (2) of the Act. AIR 1954 Cal 28, dissented from. (1959) 63 Cal W N 939.

——Ss. 2 (7), 7 (5)—Applicability — Tenant purchasing pucca structures on the demised land erected by landlord — Protection of S. 7 (5) — Right to.

Purchase by the lessee of the pucca structures standing on the leased land and built by the landlord, subsequent to the taking of the lease, amounts in law to the same thing as allowing by the landlord the erection of pucca structures by the tenant within the meaning of S. 7 (5). In such a case the tenant would get the benefit of S. 7 (5) provided that the structures are pucca ones. A pucca structure as defined in S. 2 (7), is a structure constructed mainly of brick, stone or concrete or any combination of these materials. 62 Cal W N 505 : ILR (1959) 2 Cal 283.

——S. 2 (5)—Applicability — Tenant-in-will.

The tenant-at-will is not a person who 'is or but for a special contract would be liable to pay rent to' the landlord and is, therefore, not a tenant within the meaning of S. 2 (5) of the West Bengal Non-Agricultural Tenancy Act. The tenant-at-will is, therefore, not protected by the Act. (1957) 61 Cal W N 23 : ILR (1957) 3 Cal 636 : AIR 1957 Cal 625 (626) (Pt E) (Pr 16).

——Ss. 2 (4) and 2 (5) — Transfer of non-agricultural land by tenure-holder—Tenure-holder not a tenant—Effect of, stated. See Tenancy Laws — W. B. Non-Agricultural Tenancy Act (20 of 1949), S. 24 (1). AIR 1957 Cal 511.

——S. 2 (5) — Tenancy of land along with structures standing thereon—Structures allowed to be demolished — No diminution of rent — Tenant becomes non-agricultural tenant. See Tenancy Laws — Bengal Non-Agricultural Tenancy (Temporary Provisions) Act (9 of 1940), S. 2. AIR 1956 Cal 168 (DB).

——Ss. 2 (4), 24—Applicability.

Under-raiyat—Land in proceeding under S. 24 not coming within S. 2 (4) (b) or (c) — Land let out and used for purposes not connected with agriculture or horticulture — Rights of party are governed by the Act. 57 C W N 703 : AIR 1954 Cal 28 (29) (Pt A) (Pr 2).

——S. 2 (5) — Non-agricultural tenant includes ex-tenant.

For the purpose of applying the Act to proceedings pending at its commencement, the words "non-agricultural tenant" must be taken to include a tenant whose tenancy was determined by a notice to quit, but who remained in possession in spite of the notice and a decree in ejectment. ILR (1953) 2 Cal 358 : 57 C W N 533 : AIR 1953 Cal 780 (781) (Pt B) (Pr 4) (DB).

——S. 3 (2) — Transfer of non-agricultural land by tenure-holder— Tenure-holder not a tenant—S. 3 (2) must be read as a "person other than the proprietor or tenure-holder" — Tenure-holder has no locus standi to maintain application for pre-emption under S. 24. See Tenancy Laws — W. B. Non-Agricultural Tenancy Act (20 of 1949), S. 24 (1). AIR 1957 Cal 511.

——S. 3—Execution application stayed under S. 3 — Application is pending within S. 88. See Tenancy Laws — W. B. Non-Agricultural Tenancy Act (20 of 1949), S. 88. (1956) 98 Cal L J 168.

——S. 6 (2) (a) — Validity — Provision is intra vires the competency of State Legislature — Object and scope of Act, indicated — Word 'land' in entry 18 of List II of Schedule VII of Constitution, includes building or structure — Art. 13 of Constitution has no application — Constitution of India, Art. 13 and Sch. VII, List II, Entry 18. 69 Cal W N 833 : AIR 1966 Cal 97 (98) (Pt A) (Pr 4).

——S. 6 (2) (a)— Tenant in continuous possession for over twelve years though under successive annual leases — He is entitled under S. 6 (2) (a) to errect pucca structure — Any tenancy in S. 7 (2) means continuity of possession as a tenant for over twelve years and not continuity of possession under one and the same lease. (1963) 67 Cal W N 644.

——S. 6 (2) (c) — Applicability — Non-agricultural tenants.

Where the defendants are non-agricultural tenants whose tenancy commenced from the year 1879, they are entitled to the benefits of S. 6 (2) (c) of the West Bengal Non-agricultural Tenancy Act. (1960) 64 Cal W N 172.

——S. 6 — Tenant's right to build structure—He can acquire such right pending suit. AIR 1955 N U C (Cal) 5333 (DB).

——Ss. 6, 7, 22 and 88 — Bemiadi lease, meaning of — Bemiadi lessee under an ordinary non-agricultural tenant does not get protection under Ss. 6 and 7 (Words and Phrases — Bemiadi lease) — (T. P. Act (1882), S. 105). AIR 1955 N U C (Cal) 2957.

——S. 7—Expression "Commencement of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882" — Interpretation of — Date of commencement held 1st July, 1882—Non-agricultural land held on lease in Chandernagore — Computation of period would be under provisions of S. 90 of W. B. Non-Agricultural (Temporary Provisions) Act of 1940 — Tenant in possession for less than 12 years before institution of suit — Not entitled to protection from eviction under S. 7. (1962) 66 Cal W N 525.

——S. 7 (5) — Applicability — Knowledge of landlord of pucca structures must be shown. 64 Cal W N 293 : ILR (1960) 2 Cal 814.

——S. 7 — Computation of period relevant under — Mode of indicated. See Tenancy Laws — W. B. Non-Agricultural Tenancy Act (20 of 1949), S. 90. 64 Cal W N 293 : ILR (1960) 2 Cal 814.

——S. 7 (5) — Pucca structure erected by lessee — Landlord given compensation instead of mandatory injunction—It does not amount to landlord's sanction. (1960) 64 Cal W N 365.

——S. 7 (5) — Applicability — Accrual of right in favour of landlord to eject tenant before commencement of Act — Suit filed subsequently.

The provisions of the West Bengal Non-Agricultural Tenancy Act of 1949, must clearly apply to all suits which have been filed after the Act came into force and therefore, the provisions of S. 7 (5) can be availed of by the tenant, even when the right of the landlord to obtain ejectment had accrued before the coming into force of the Act, but though he could not file a suit immediately because the Non-Agricultural Tenancy (Temporary Provisions) Act of 1940 barred the filing of suit for ejectment against non-agricultural tenants during the time when the temporary Act was in force. (1960) 64 Cal W N 240.

——S. 7 — Applicability.

Where the tenant is found to be in possession for a period less than 12 years, then S. 7 of the West Bengal Non-agricultural Tenancy Act will not apply to the case. (1956) 60 Cal W N 1092.

——S. 7—Bemiadi lease, meaning of—Bemiadi lessee under an ordinary non-agricultural tenant cannot get protection under Ss. 6 and 7. See Tenancy Laws — West Bengal Non-Agricultural Tenancy Act (20 of 1949), S. 6. AIR 1955 N U C (Cal) 2957.

——Ss. 7 (2) (i) and 88 — Scope — Execution started for first time after commencement of Act does not come under S. 7 or 88 — Tenant cannot claim protection from ejectment under S. 7. AIR 1955 N U C (Cal) 2882 (DB).

——Ss. 7 (4), 90 — Continuation of lease — Applicability of S. 7 (4).

A tenancy began with a lease on 28th September, 1929, for 7 years. During the pendency of the lease a second lease was executed which specifically mentioned in the recital that it was "after the expiry of the previous lease". This lease was again for a further period of 7 years. The documents themselves left no room for doubt that the second lease was a continuation of the first lease;

Held, that there being a continuation of the lease S. 7 (4) read with S. 90 clearly and specifically applied and the tenant was protected from ejectment.

Further, that is the continuation of the period, not the continuity of the rent which is to be considered in connection with S. 7 (4). 57 Cal W N 912 : AIR 1954 Cal 168 (168, 169) (Prs 2, 3) (DB).

●——S. 9 (1) (b) (iii) — Applicability — Tenancies from month to month — 'Year of the tenancy' — Meaning.

Section 9 (1) (b) (iii), applies to all non-agricultural tenancies including monthly tenancies or tenancies from month to month. The expression 'a year of the tenancy' in sub-s. (1) (b) (iii) of the section in relation to the tenancies from month to month means, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, a year or a period of twelve months according to the calendar of the particular tenancy, starting with its date of commencement or any anniversary thereof. AIR 1957 Cal 479, Distinguished. The term 'year' in the provision does not necessarily mean the calendar year in every case. ILR 27 Cal 570 and ILR 30 Mad 109, distinguished. 'Tenant' and 'under-tenant' as defined in S. 3 of the West Bengal Non-Agricultural Tenancy Act correspond to "raiyat" and 'under-raiyat' of the Bengal Tenancy Act. Having regard to sub-sections (1) and (2) of S. 5 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, a 'tenure-holder' could not be a raiyat. The word "person" in S. 2 (5) and S. 3 (2) must, however, be read as a 'person other than the proprietor or tenure-holder'. It is also clear from Ss. 3 (i), 3 (k) and 5 (c) of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953, that a tenure-holder is not a non-agricultural tenant within the meaning of that Act. A tenure-holder is an intermediary above a non agricultural tenant. 61 Cal W N 572 : AIR 1957 Cal 511 (512, 513) (Prs 11, 21 to 25).

——Ss. 88, 9—Scope—(Tenancy Laws—Bengal Non-Agricultural Tenancy (Temporary Provisions) Act (9 of 1940).

The Act 20 of 1949 contemplates that the suits, appeals or proceedings referred to in S. 88 must be actually pending at the date when the Act came into operation, i. e., on 15-5-1949.

Where, therefore, a decree for ejectment which was passed on 12-7-1946 contained a provision for stay of its execution till the life of the Bengal Act 9 of 1940 and the decree-holder filed execution petition on 26-11-1949, on judgment-debtor's contentions that the execution proceeding must be deemed to be pending because of the prohibition in the decree.

Held, that the mere fact that the said decree could not be executed till the life of the Bengal Act 9 of 1940 did not connote that the execution of the decree was pending for the entire period during which the stay operated. The contention that S. 9 was attracted by the provisions of S. 88 was not tenable. AIR 1955 NUC (Cal) 350 (DB).

——S. 88—Order under S. 4, Bengal Act (9 of 1940) — Effect on execution completed by delivery of possession — Execution proceedings must be deemed to be pending within S. 88. See Tenancy Laws — Bengal Non-Agricultural Tenancy (Temporary Provisions) Act (9 of 1940), S. 4. AIR 1953 Cal 780 (DB).

——S. 88—Ejectment suit—Stay of delivery of possession under previous Tenancy Act—Appeal—Effect of S. 88—Tenancy Laws — West Bengal Non-Agricultural Tenancy (Temporary Provisions) Act (9 of 1940), S. 3.

Where the lower Courts in a suit for ejectment held that the defendant could not be ejected as ejectment was barred under S. 3 of the Act of 1940 and directed that execution of the decree for delivery of possession would be stayed during the pendency of the Act of 1940 and after the plaintiff filed an appeal to the High Court, the Act of 1940 was superseded by the Act of 1949 :

Held, that the judgment and decree passed by the lower Courts must be set aside and case sent back to the lower Court of appeal to consider whether the provisions of the new Act were applicable and, if so, whether the plaintiff was entitled to a decree for ejectment. 54 Cal W N 581 : AIR 1950 Cal 532 (533) (Pr 7).

——S. 89—Scope and applicability—Section exempts period during which Bengal Non-Agriculturai Tenancy (Temporary Provisions) Act 1940 continued in force only in case of execution of decree passed in suit for ejectment on ground of non-payment of rent. AIR 1955 NUC (Cal) 2882 (DB).

——S. 90 — Scope — Computation of period under Ss. 7 and 9—Mode of.

Section 90 contemplates all cases, where the tenant was actually holding either under a lease in writing for a specified period or for an unspecified period or without a lease in writing for a specified period or for an unspecified period or without a lease in writing at the date of commencement of the temporary Act, the Bengal Non-Agricultural Tenancy (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1940 and makes suitable and express provision for each of them, and the mode of calculation or exclusion, that it prescribes is that, if, at that time, the tenant was holding under a lease in writing and if such lease in writing expired during the continuance of the above temporary Act and the tenant continued to hold the land during the rest of the period, for which the aforesaid temporary Act lasted or continued in force, in the calculation of the period of twelve years under S. 7 or of the relevant period under S. 9, the occupation of the tenant for the period after the expiration of the lease in writing and before or up till the expiry of the above temporary Act, that is, between the expiry of the said lease and the expiry of the said Act, would not be relevant or taken into account. That is the simple scheme and intention of S. 90 of the Act. 64 Cal W N 293 : ILR (1960) 2 Cal 814.

——Ss. 90, 7 — Lease of non-agricultural land for 7 years commencing in 1937 — Suit for ejectment in 1950—Defence under S. 7 not available. See Tenancy Laws — West Bengal Non-Agricultural Tenancy Act (20 of 1949), S. 7. A I R 1957 Cal 479 (DB).

——S. 91 (1) and (2)—Effect of repeal of Bengal Act 9 of 1940.

Section 91 (1) merely repeals the 1940 Act. What the consequence of the repeal would be, would depend on the effect of repeal of a temporary Act under the general rules of interpretation.

It cannot be said that S. 91 (2) necessarily implies that all the provisions of and all the orders made under the 1940 Act must be deemed to be non est. On the other hand as regards the order which had been completed and which had full effect before the repeal of the 1940 Act must be taken to have been properly passed. ILR (1953) 2 Cal 358 : 57 C W N 533 : A I R 1953 Cal 780 (782) (Pt C) (Pr 5) (DB).

TERRITORIAL COUNCILS ACT (103 of 1956)

——S. 11—Date of Notification—Meaning of — Interpretation of Statutes—Duty of Court. See Territorial Councils Act (1956), S. 13. A I R 1959 Him-Pra 25.

——Ss. 13 and 11—Date of 'Notification'—Meaning of — Interpretation of Statutes — Duty of Court — (Territorial Councils Rules (1957), R. 60) — (Elections).

The Court must proceed on the footing that the Legislature intended what it has said. It is not competent to any Court to proceed upon any assumption that the Legislature has made a mistake. The plain language of S. 13, read with Ss. 11 and 12 of the Territorial Councils Act, leaves no room for doubt that the date of the notification referred in S. 13 (1) would be the date of notification of the result in the Official Gazette under S. 11 and not the date of the declaration of the result, by the Returning Officer, under R. 60 of the Territorial Councils Rules. AIR 1959 Him Pra 25 (26, 27) (Pt A) (Prs 10, 12).

——S. 13—Election petition under—Act 43 of 1951 not applicable — (Representation of the People Act (1951), S. 81 (1))—(Elections).

Where the Legislature has deemed it proper to draw up a different scheme for elections to the Territorial Councils, and the language of the statute is not ambiguous, there would be no justification to borrow from the provisions of the Representation of the People Act in order to ascertain whether a particular election petition filed under the Territorial Councils Act is within time or not. AIR 1959 Him Pra 25 (27) (Pt B) (Pr 11).

——S. 16 — Applicability of procedure provided in C. P. Code — Extent of — Amendment of election petition — Competency — Territorial Councils Act (1956), S. 20 — Rules under, Rr. 70, 71, 72, 75 and 79) — (C. P. Code (1908), O. 6, Rr. 15 and 17 — Representation of the People Act (1951), S. 90 (1)).

Under S. 16 of the Territorial Councils Act, the District Judge is not debarred from permitting alteration or amendment of the election petition under O. 6, R. 17, C. P. Code, and of the verification under O. 6, R. 15. Under the scheme of the Territorial Councils Act, there is greater scope for the application of the procedure laid down in the C. P. Code to the trial of election petition than under the scheme of Representation of the People Act, and therefore the provisions of the C. P. Code apply to the trial of an election petition, under the Territorial Councils Act, not only in respect of the matters covered by Rr. 70, 71, 72, 75 and 79, but all matters raised at the trial, AIR 1958 Him Pra 1 and AIR 1958 Pat 287 and AIR 1958 Mad 171 and AIR 1958 Mad 187 and AIR 1958 Cal 322, Disting. AIR 1958 Him Pra 26 (27, 28) (Pt A) (Prs 7, 8, 23).

——Ss. 16 and 20 — Rules, R. 69 —Validity —(C. P. Code (1908), O. 6, R. 17).

Section 20 of the Territorial Councils Act authorises the Central Government to make rules for the disposal of the election disputes, where the Act makes no provision therefor or makes insufficient provision. Since S. 16 of the Territorial Councils Act distinctly prescribes that the procedure laid down in the C. P. Code would be followed in the trial of election petitions, it was not open to the Central Government to make R. 69, which had the effect of nullifying the provision of O. 6, R. 17, C. P. Code. R. 69 of the Rules must be read along with the relevant provision of the C. P. Code to the extent, that this rule offends or goes against the relevant provision of the C. P. Code, it must be deemed to be ultra vires of the Territorial Councils Act. AIR 1954 All 202 and AIR 1954 Cal 436 and AIR 1955 Assam 45, Relied on. AIR 1958 Him Pra 26 (28) (Pt B) (Prs 13, 23).

——S. 22 (3)—Notice of meeting—Provisions as to—If mandatory.

It is clear that the words in S. 22 (3) of the Territorial Councils Act 'after giving not less than 15 days' notice thereof' are only directory in their nature and substantial compliance is sufficient and if such compliance has been made, the meeting will not be invalidated. AIR 1954 Cal 49 and 1955 S C J 283 : (1955) 1 M L J (SC) 173 : A I R 1955 S C 196 and (1955) 1 M L J (S C) 157 : 1955 S C J 267 ; AIR 1955 S C 233 and A I R 1959 S C 352 : 1959 S C J 425 : (1959) 1 M L J (SC) 154 : (1959) 1 Andh W R (SC) 154, Rel. on. AIR 1960 Manipur 25 (29 to 31) (Pt C) (Prs 21, 23, 28, 29).

——S. 22 (3) — Writ petition — Delay as ground of invalidity—Petitioner himself responsible for delay—Plea not allowed. See Constitution of India, Art. 226. AIR 1960 Manipur 25.

——S. 22 (2)—Order of removal passed by Administrator—If purely administrative—Writ when issued —(Constitution of India, Art. 226).

An order passed by the Administrator removing the chairman under S. 22 (3) is not of a purely administrative nature. It is an order passed as required under the statute which calls upon him to give his reasons for the order. The effect of the order is to divest a person of his position as Chairman of the Council. Such an order cannot be said to be a pure administrative order. It is a clear case where he acts in a quasi-judicial manner and hence his order can be questioned under Art. 226 of the Constitution. It is only when the Administrator has exercised a jurisdiction not vested in him that a writ will issue. When the order shows that he has recorded his reasons as required under S. 22 (2) for deciding to remove the Chairman there is a proper exercise of his jurisdiction and it is not for the Court to go into the question whether the reasons given are sufficient or even whether they are valid reasons. It may be that the reasoning can be pointed out to be erroneous. But erroneous decisions cannot be quashed by a writ unless such an error is apparent on the face of the record and goes to the very root of the matter. (1948) 2 M L J 480 ; AIR 1949 Mad 535, Rel. on. AIR 1960 Manipur 25 (32, 33) (Pt F) (Prs 38, 39).

——S. 53—Default in performance of duties—Single instance — Sufficiency—Duty of Administator.

Under S. 53, the default in the performance of its duties on the part of the council must be persistent in order to take action and a single instance of voting down the budget was sufficient for the administrator to act under the section. He was to watch and see if the Territoriol Council can be made to function properly without resorting to the extraordinary remedy of supersession within a year of its election. AIR 1960 Manipur 25 (33) (Pt G) (Pr 43).

——S. 54 (3)—Rules framed under S. 20 — Omission to lay them on table of Houses of Parliament—Effect.

The omission on the part of the administrative department concerned to lay the rules framed by the Central Government in the exercise of the powers conferred by S. 20 on the table of the Houses of Parliament does not render the rules invalid or inoperative. AIR 1961 Him Pra 2 (7) (Pt D) (Pr 18).

TERRITORIAL COUNCILS RULES (1957)

——R. 60—Date of Notification—Date of notification referred to in S. 13 of the Territorial Councils Act would be the date of result in Official Gazette under S. 11 of the Act and not the date of declaration of result under R. 60. See Territorial Councils Act (1956). S. 13. AIR 1959 Him Pra 25.

RULE 70

——Rule 70—Applicability of procedure provided in Civil P. C. — Extent of — Not resticted to matters covered by Rules only. See Territorial Councils Act (103 of 1956), S. 16. AIR 1958 Him Pra 26.

RULE 71

——Rule 71—Applicability of procedure provided in Civil P. C.—Extent of—Not restricted to matters covered by Rules only. See Territorial Councils Act (103 of 1956), S. 16. AIR 1958 Him Pra 26.

RULE 72

——Rule 72—Applicability of procedure provided in Civil P. C.—Extent of—Not restricted to matters covered by Rules only. See Territorial Councils Act (103 of 1956), S. 16. AIR 1958 Him Pra 26.

—Rule 75—Applicability of procedure provided in Civil P. C.—Extent of — Not restricted to matters covered by Bules only. See Territorial Councils Act (103 of 1956), S. 16. AIR 1958 Him Pra 26.

—R. 78—Receipt of deposit—Essentials—Defect in entries in receipts—Effect—(Elections).

The receipt under R. 78 is required to show that the amount was deposited as security for costs of the petition which means that the contents of receipt should be such that any one who looks at it could arrive at the conclusion that the deposit had been made for the purpose mentioned in the rule. Thus where, although column 2 of the challan was not properly filled in, nobody—neither the petitioners nor the Treasury officer—had any doubt about the fact that the sum deposited was by way of security for costs and the amount was available to the Secretary to the Election Department and could not be withdrawn without his orders, it must be held that the requirements of R. 78 have been complied with. AIR 1959 Him Pra 25 (28) (Pt C) (Prs 16, 18).

—Rule 79—Applicability of procedure provided in Civil P. C.—Extent of — Not restricted to matters covered by Rules only. See Territorial Councils Act (103 of 1956), S. 16. AIR 1958 Him Pra 26.

—Rule 80—Constitution of India, Arts. 226, 227 — Error of law—Error in holding that R. 80 was intra vires cannot be said to be self evident and patent on face of record. See Constitution of India, Art. 226. AIR 1961 Him Pra 2.

——Adjacent lands— Neighbours — Escape of water from defendant's land due to construction of embankment — Liability of defendant.

Although a person is not responsible for allowing the escape of things which are naturally on his land he is responsible for causing their escape. He is not entitled to relieve his own land of a burden by casting it upon the land of his neighbour. Thus he is responsible for the escape of water from his land if the escape is due to some embankment made by him. 1950 All L J 60 : A I R 1950 All 519 (520) (Pt C) (Pr 5).

——Adjacent lands—Riparian owner— Right to obstruct flow of water from adjacent land — Extent of indicated — Normal flow and flood water — Distinction pointed out— Held in circumstances of the case that it could not be held that defendants are not entitled to protect their lands from flood water—Case was one of damnum sine impuria and plaintiff must adopt his own protective measures against flood water. A I R 1958 Andh Pra 103.

——Adjacent lands— Diversion of water to adjacent land — Liability of person diverting — Right of one owner to discharge water from his land—Extent of.

The right of a person to dam up water or divert the course of naturally flowing water or provide a particular channel for the flow of accumulated water is not an unrestricted right—It is subject to the obligation of seeing that no injury was caused to the property of another.

Held, on facts that defendant was liable to pay damages to the plaintiff for the damage done to latter's crop by diverting the natural flow of water from his field. Madh B L R 1956 Civil 513 : 1956 Madh B L J 1108 : A I R 1956 Madh B 209 (210) (Pr 5).

——Adjacent lands — Negligence — Easement of support.

Distinction between support to one's land to one's structure in land from subjacent and adjacent land owned by neighbour pointed out—If owner of a building has not acquired a right in easement for the support of building or structure from his neighbour's land neighbour would be within his right in carrying on excavation on his soil even if by so doing damage is caused provided there is no negligence in excavation operations. ——Adjacent lands—Negligence — Adjacent owners —Right of drainage—Drainage water from higher land by artificial means — Does not amount to normal user of land — Owner of such land liable in damages to owner of lowly situated land—No easement of necessity— Existence of drainage channel between the two lands — No inference of natural right of owner of higher situated land to drain water from his land to the other possible in the circumstances. I L R (1963) Cut 798 : A I R 1964 Orissa 41 (42) (Prs 7, 8, 9).

——English Common Law— Insult, intimidation and assault—Essential ingredients to constitute — Action for damages when permissible ?

Held, on facts, that in the case of torts the Indian Courts have always adopted the English Common Law in so far as it is consonant to justice, equity and good conscience. They have departed from the English Law only when a particular rule appeared unsuitable to local conditions.

Insult per se is not actionable. Even if the words and conduct of the Village Munsiff who was under a duty to collect arrears of revenue had been construed as amounting to insult no action for damages could be founded on it. The essential ingredients of the wrong of intimidation as understood in the English Law, are wanting in this case. In the case of an intentional insult there must be proof of intent to provoke a breach of the peace or the commission of an offence and in the case of criminal intimidation the intent should be to cause alarm to the person intimidated or to cause a person to do something which he is not legally bound to do or omit to do something which he is legally entitled to do.

In the English Law of Torts, assault is regarded as a form of trespass to the person. 'Battery' in the English Law of Torts corresponds to 'criminal force' as defined by S. 350, Penal Code and 'assault' in the English Law corresponds to the definition of that terms in S. 351, Indian Penal Code. Whether judged from the stand-point of the alleged wrongdoer or the wronged immediacy and imminence of the use of force is the true test of assault. (1963) 2 Andh W R 403 : (1964) 1 Andh L T 11 : I L R (1964) Andh Pra 1021 : A I R 1964 Andh Pra 382 (386, 387) (Prs 18, 22, 24, 25, 29, 31 to 83) (DB).

——Actionable wrong — Damages — Suit for—Liability of statutory corporation for tortious acts — Conditions for — Refusal to grant renewal of working licence by Municipal Corporation in purported exercise of its statutory power—If actionable wrong.

There is no statute in India which expressly provides for cases of torts. Therefore, the English common law rules are availed of by the Courts as consistent with justice, equity and good conscience. The rules of torts are not indefinitely flexible to cover any case. Therefore, a tortious act must be a civil wrong actionable in law. Whether a private individual or a corporate body, both are subject to tortious liability.

Under the English Common law a corporation is liable to be sued for any tort, provided that (1) it is a tort in respect of which an action would lie against a private individual, (2) the person by whom the tort is actually committed is acting within the scope of his authority and in the course of his employment as agent of the corporation, and (3) the act complained of is not one which the corporation would not, in any circumstances, be authorised by its constitution to commit. The same principle governs tortious acts in India committed by the corporate bodies according to the law as administered in India.

Held, that having regard to the facts and circumstances of the case, the impugned act of refusal to grant the licence was clearly an act purporting to have been in exercise of authority conferred by law (viz., S. 321 (8), Madras District Municipalities Act) and it could not be said that the officer was guilty of abuse of power vested in him; nor was there anything to show that in passing the order he was actuated by malice or by extraneous or objectionable consideration. In no sense of the term the impugned act was an actionable wrong or a tortious act. At best it was an error of judgment which could be corrected in appeal. The suit for damages was therefore misconceived and was liable to be dismissed. (1963) 1 Andh L T 262 : A I R 1963 Andh Pra 435 (438) (Pr 8).

——Damages — Waiver — Contract of sale — Buyer obtaining delivery of goods by fraud and converting them to his own use—Seller demanding price on the basis of contract—Does not amount to waiver of tort.

Where the buyer in a contract of sale obtained delivery of the goods not under the contract by paying the price but by practising fraud on the agent of the sellers and converted them to his own use and the sellers demanded the amount due to them on the basis of the contract of sale;

Held, that the fact that the sellers demanded the price of the goods could not be considered to be either a waiver of the right to claim damages for tort or as an assent to the appropriation of the goods to the contract. 1941 A C 1, Rel. on. 1963 Ker L J 638: 1963 Ker L T 741 : I L R (1963) 2 Ker 723 : AIR 1964 Ker 135 (138) (Pt E) (Pr 11) (DB).

——Master and servant — Suit for damages against servant — Bailee and servant — Distinction — Suit for damages against servant on ground of bailment is not maintainable — But an action in torts lies against servant if he is negligent in handling goods of his master. See Contract Act (1872), S. 148. A I R 1955 N U C (Madh B) 3705.

——Plaintiff writing letter from Ujjain to defendant in Bombay that he is sending his watch for repairs by parcel — Defendant receiving parcel but finding it empty — Cause of action held did not arise in Ujjain—Suit held one in tort — Held there was no offer—Ujjain Court held had no jurisdiction — (Contract Act (1872), Ss. 4, 10, 187 and 218). See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 19. AIR 1953 Madh B 38.

——Liability for — Does not amount to debt — On death of judgment-debtor his son will be bound to pay if he received assets — Son's liability will be governed by Ss. 50 and 53, C. P. Code.

A liability for tort does not amount to a debt; it is distinct from an obligation legally incurred in consequence of a contract or quasi-contract. Where a father is guilty of a civil wrong and a decree is passed against him, it does not become an Avyavaharik debt. His son is bouud to pay subject to the condition that he has received assets from which the liability can be discharged. The liability will be governed by the provisions contained in Ss. 50 and 53, C. P. Code. ● ——Damages — "Injurious falsehood" — Actionability — False complaint to Magistrate leading to stopping of marriage on allegation of marriage being illegal—Subsequent dismissal of complaint—Suit for damages — Held on facts that though the act did not fall under any category of torts either to the person or to property it was still actionable as it clearly amounted to an injurious falsehood. See Mysore Limitation Act, Arts. 22, 23 and 36. ILR (1951) Mys 74 (FB).

——Scope — Negligence — Cardinal principle of liability in tort, when death or bodily injury is caused to a person, is negligence or failure to take requisite amount of case required by law — Ss. 110 to 110F, Motor Vehicles Act do not in any way override law of torts. See Motor Vehicles Act (1939), S. 110. AIR 1962 Punj 540.

3. Assault.

——Assault on woman for committing sexual intercourse—Assessment of damages.

In a case where a man drags a woman for the purpose of committing sexual intercourse, the amount of damages has to be assessed at the discretion of the Court, which of course must be judicially exercised. The damages awarded to the wronged woman are not as compensation for any injury as there is no injury, but for mental pain and shock. There is no known method of calculating the money value of the pain and anguish caused to a woman who is dragged by a ruffian for the purpose of assaulting her. The damages have to be arbitrary in one sense, though not in the judicial sense. 1965 All W R (HC) 495 : 1965 All Cri R 315 : A I R 1966 All 527 (528) (Pr 3).

——Insult — Intimidation— Assault — Collection of arrears of Land Revenue by village munsif—Threat by village munsif to distrain ear-rings worn by agriculturist—Village goldsmith called for — On arrival of goldsmith, one amongst those present paying amount of arrears — Conduct of village munsif held did not amount to insult or intimidation or assault — Penal Code (1860), Ss. 503, 504, 350, 351. (1963) 2 Andh W R 403 : (1964) Andh L T 11 : I L R (1964) Andh Pra 1021 : A I R 1964 Andh Pra 382 (386, 387) (Prs 18, 20, 22, 24, 25, 29, 31, 32, 33) (DB).

——Assault and battery — Damages — Liability of minor.

A minor is in general liable for his torts in the same manner and to the same extent as an adult. The rule of exemption from all responsibility and liability for an act done by a person below a certain age has applicability in conduct tortious in itself and in its very essence. It is only in those cases where an act is innocent in itself, but becomes tortious by the addition of some ingredient such as intention, malice, knowledge or state of mind in the person charged as a wrong-doer that the age and mental capacity of the defendant becomes relevant.

In the case of a violent assault and battery on a harmless man, such consideration as intention, knowledge, state of mind and conception of right and wrong are wholly immaterial; the act in itself is sufficient to support the cause of action. The person committing the assault cannot, therefore, contend that he cannot be made liable for damages because at the time of the commission of the battery he was a minor of fifteen or sixteen years of age, and did not know the nature and quality of the act or that what he was doing was wrong. Madh B L R 1955 Civ 231 : Madh B L J 1955 H C R 1140 : ILR (1955) M B 355 : AIR 1956 Madh B 84 (85, 86) (Pt A) (Pr 4).

——Expression 'personal injuries' includes physical as well as mental injuries — Claim for compensation for loss of reputation or mental agony does not survive after death of party injured—But claim for compensation for injury to goods survives. See Succession Act (1925), S. 306. AIR 1960 Madh Pra 200.

——Bodily injury—Injury by shock.

It cannot be said that because bodily injury was not manifested by external visible injury, injury caused to a person by a shock to his nervous system which incapacitates him from his ordinary activities and avocations is not therefore bodily injury. The body is controlled by its nervous system and if by reason of an acute shock to the nervous system the activities of the body are impaired and incapacitated from functioning normally, there is clear bodily injury. 1951-2 Mad L J 471 : A I R 1951 Mad 1058 (1058) (Pt C) (Pr 11).

——Assault—Damages.

A with his three of four companions went to take forcible possession of B's house. B's party was four in number. B's father delivered two or three stick blows to A but there was no attempt on the part of A to use any violence against the person of B or his father or his brothers. B, howevor, used an axe and hit A on the head and thus inflicted a dangerous injury upon a vital part of body by a deadly weapon. In a suit for damages for assault.

Held, that B's father was within his right but B exceeded it. B had not a right of self-defence but a right to forcibly remove the trespasser. The harm caused to A could be regarded as an unavoidable result of an act done in a reasonable and careful manner. The maxim "volunti non fit injuria" had no application as it could not be said that because A trespassed into the premises of B, A consented to the injury inflicted upon him.

The assault committed by B was out of all proportion to the harm sought to be prevented. And merely contemptuous damages could not therefore be awarded to A. The justification of B having failed, he must be held liable for all the direct consequences flowing from the wrongful injury caused to A. 88 E R 872 and 137 E R 945, Rel. on. 1951 Nag L J 477 : A I R 1952 Nag 16 (16, 17) (Pt A) (Prs 4, 6 to 9).

——Assault—Damages—Assessment of.

In a suit for damages for assault, the question of damages has to be considered by reference to all the circumstances of the case. Where the assault committed by the defendant was out of all proportion to the harm sought to be prevented by him, he must be held liable for all the direct consequences flowing from the wrongful injury caused to the plaintiff. 1951 Nag L J 477 : A I R 1952 Nag 16 (17) (Pt C) (Pr 10).

——Assault — What amounts to — Abusive language and threat of violence—Liability.

Held, on facts that apart from menacing words the defendant by his action in raising his right hand for the purpose of giving a blow, in addition to using threatening words, made it absolutely clear that his intention was to give a slap to the plaintiff. Whatever may be the provocation there was no justification for assaulting the plaintiff at a public place near the Court premises thereby causing him considerable humiliation and insult. Hence the defendant was guilty of actionable assault. I L R 26 Cal 653, Distinguished. Salmond Torts, (12th Edn.), p. 295, Rel. on. (1959) 25 Cut L T 83.

——Assault — Damages for bodily pain and mental agony.

As to the question of awarding any sum as damages for bodily pain and mental agony, on account of the beating given to the plaintiff and the four injuries including the one grievous caused to him, it is very difficult in such cases to measure exactly as to what should be the quantum of damages. The plaintiff in this case sustained four injuries and one of them was grievous and that injury had diminished the strength of the leg. On account of the injury, the plaintiff had to remain in hospital for 18 days and he had suffered bodily pain and mental agony.

Held, that these were the relevant factors which could be legally considered in the awarding of the damages and as the case did not call for only nominal damages because the plaintiff suffered substantial bodily and mental pain, a sum of Rs. 500/- could not by any means be said to be very excessive. 1959 Raj L W 207.

4. Contribution.

——Contribution — Suit for — Joint decree for costs against A and B — B not contesting suit in any way— Payment of full decretal amount by A — A cannot in equity recover from B, B's share of costs — A wrongdoer cannot recover contribution from an innocent person whom he has led into commission of a tort. AIR 1961 Pat 103.

6. Conversion.

——Conversion — Goods illegally seized and sold by Government — Seizure however not mala fide — Suit against Government for value of goods being one for damages is barred. See Essential Supplies (Temporary Powers) Act (1946), S. 16(2). (1964) 1 Andh W R 333.

——Conversion—Sale of pledged goods by pledgee— Pledgor impugning sale—Pledger must either redeem or sue for damages for conversion — Mere suit for declaration not competent. See Contract Act (1872), S. 176. AIR 1960 Andh Pra 273 (DB).

——Conversion—Trespass to goods—Trespass by co-sharer by removing paddy from possession of tenants —:Conversion may be inferred for the refusal to deliver the paddy — Landlord has right to sue the co-sharer as a wrong-doer in tort for price for paddy. See Tort — Trespass to goods. A I R 1955 N U C (Assam) 2303.

——Conversion—Gain by wrongful act—Fish caught by wrongful act of trespassing — Money realised by sale of—Disposal of.

A wrong-doer is not entitled to keep with himself any part of the money realised by the sale as the result of a wrongful act on his part. A person obtaining money by the sale of the fish as a result of wrongul operations by trespassing into the fishery in possession of another person, cannot be permitted to withhold any portion of the profit accruing to him as the result of the wrongful act on his part. Nor can he be allowed to claim collecting charges incurred in catching fish. AIR 1950 Assam 190 (191) (Pr 7) (DB).

——Conversion—Test—(Railways Act (1890), S. 77).

In order to determine whether there was conversion of goods the test to be applied is not merely to see whether there was failure to return the goods. It must also appear that there was an intention to keep the goods in defiance of the plaintiff. In other words, detention is not conversion unless there is an adverse claim. A carrier who on demand being made states that he would not return the goods because they were looted while in his possession cannot ipso facto be said to have been guilty of conversion. 56 Bom L R 150 : AIR 1954 Bom 297 (300) (Pt D) (Pr 14).

——Conversion — Conversion of cheque — Remedies of claimant pointed out. AIR 1955 N U C (Cal) 6103 (DB).

——Conversion—(Civil P. C. (1908), O. 7, R. 11).

There is no conversion by demand and refusal, without a demand before action having been made. A demand, therefore, is an essential part of such a cause of action and must necessarily be pleaded, except in the case of a bailee or unless at the date of the demand, the defendant had the possession or control over the property, but failed or refused to deliver it.

Conversion by wrongful detention arises when the detention is adverse to the person entitled to the possession of the thing detained and the refusal by the defendant to deliver upon demand is, proof of the detention being adverse. Therefore, refusal to deliver up property on demand cannot be a conversion, i.e., cannot shew an intention to hold them adversely to the owner, if it is no longer in the power or possession of the defendant. AIR 1955 NUC (Cal) 1058.

—Conversion—Elements — Meaning and methods.

The tort of 'conversion' consists in an act of wilful interference, without lawful justification, with a chattel in a manner inconsistent with another's right whereby that other is deprived of the use and possession of it. There are three distinct methods in which one may be guilty of a conversion: (1) by wrongly taking it, (2) by wrongly detaining it, and (3) by wrongly disposing of it. 1957 Ker L T 1106 : 1957 Ker L J 1098 : ILR (1958) Ker 268 : AIR 1958 Ker 47 (48) (Pt A) (Pr 6) (DB).

—Conversion — Failure to deliver goods after demand.

Where the defendant is an agent of steamship carriers and the finding of the Court against the defendant's case of short landing cannot be said to be unjustified, his failure to deliver the goods consigned by the plaintiff after demand therefor amounts to conversion. 1957 Ker L T 1106 : 1957 Ker L J 1098 : ILR (1958) Ker 268 : AIR 1958 Ker 47 (49) (Pt C) (Pr 7) (DB).

—Conversion—What amounts to—Proof of adverse detention — Refusal to deliver forthwith goods to claimant when justified.

A conversion is not act of wilful interference, without lawful justification, with any chattel in a manner inconsistent with the right of another, whereby that other is deprived of the use and possession of it. Two elements are combined in such interference; (1) a dealing with the chattel in a manner inconsistent with the right of the person entitled to it, and (2) an intention in so doing to deny that person's right or to assert a right which is in fact done is necessarily a denial of the other's right. The usual method of proving that a detention is adverse within the meaning of this rule is to show that the plaintiff demanded the delivery of the chattel and that the defendant refused to or neglected to comply with the demand. Presumably, any conduct of the defendant which shows that he not merely possesses the goods, but intends to hold them in defence of the plaintiff and to deprive him of the possession of them is sufficient to constitute a conversion, even though there has been no formal demand of restitution. Where there is a genuine doubt in the defendant's mind as to the ownership of chattels, a temporary and provisional refusal to deliver them to the claimant, pending inquiries into his title, is justifiable, and is neither a conversion nor any other kind of wrong. 1962 MPLJ 1163 : 1963 Jab L J 244 : ILR (1962) Madh Pra 404 : AIR 1963 Madh Pra 89 (92, 93) (Pt B) (Prs 10, 14) (DB).

—Conversion — Notice to pledgee of owner's title —Sale of article pledged by pledgee — He was held guilty of conversion of article by unlawfully effecting sale of it and appropriating the proceeds thereof. See Contract Act (1872), S. 178. AIR 1955 Mad 505 (DB).

—Conversion—Notice of demand before suit.

Notice of demand is not condition precedent to suits for recovery of movables — Demand and refusal do not in themselves constitute conversion but are only evidence— Conversion proved otherwise to have taken place long before suit — Absence of notice of demand cannot defeat claim. ILR (1953) Mys 213 : AIR 1953 Mys 147 (150) (Pt D) (Pr 15) (DB).

—Conversion — Consignment marked for C — Refusal of Goods Clerk to deliver at R—If conversion.

A refusal of delivery to the true owner is not necessarily a conversion though it may be evidence of it. The refusal of the Goods Clerk to give delivery to the plaintiff (owner) at Raipur of a consignment marked for Champa cannot be regarded as a conversion because, under the rules to which he was subject, he could not give delivery of that consignment to the plaintiff at Raipur, even assuming that the plaintiff made it clear to the Goods Clerk that the consignment was his. The conduct of the Goods Clerk cannot be regarded as denial of the plaintiff's title at all. In view of the marking on the consignment, the action of the Goods Clerk must be regarded as bona fide. 1951 Nag L J 450: ILR (1951) Nag 545 : AIR 1951 Nag 245 (247) (Pt A) (Pr 9).

6 (A). Damages.

—Conversion — Conversion of goods — Suit for damages—Essentials to be established.

Before the plaintiffs can maintain an action in trover, they must establish that they had title to the goods in question and that further they were entitled to possession thereof when they called upon the defendants to deliver them. If the parties stood in the relation of sellers and purchasers with reference to the transactions, then the plaintiffs must show that the property in the goods, which initially was with the defendants, passed to them in accordance with the provisions of the Sale of Goods Act. If, however the defendants imported the goods as agents of the plaintiffs, then the title to them would undoubtedly be with the latter, and the only question then would be whether the former were entitled to retain possession, as they would be if they had paid the price of the goods on behalf of the principal, and had not been reimbursed that amount.

Held on the pleadings and on the evidence in the suit that the claim for damages on the footing of conversion must fail. L. J. Leach and Co., Ltd. v. Messrs. Jardine Skinner and Co. 1957 S C A 318 : 1957 S C J 313 : 1957 B L J R 750 : 59 Rom L R 395 : 1957 M P L J 497 : 1957 Nag L J 321 : 1957 S C C 237 : 1957 M P C 583 : 1957 All L J 794 : 1957 S C R 438 : A I R 1957 S C 357 (359 to 362) (Pt A) (Prs 5, 7, 14).

—Compensation—Once a plaintiff claims compensation for conversion he cannot also claim any sum of money for loss of income. ILR (1951) 3 Assam 275:AIR 1952 Assam 141 (147) (Pt F) (Pr 33) (DB).

—Damages — Compensation — The compensation for conversion is to be determined with reference to the date of conversion. 1927 Lah 403 and 1943 Nag 162; Rel. on. ILR (1961) 3 Assam 279 : AIR 1952 Assam 141 (Pt G) (Pr 32) (DB).

—Conversion — Damages — Contract of sale — Buyer not paying price but obtained goods by fraud and converting them — Measure of damages.

Where the buyer in a contract of sale obtained delivery of the goods not by paying the price as provided by the contract but by practising fraud upon the agent of the seller :

Held, that damages in such a case should normally be the value of the property as on the date of conversion but as in the instant case the buyers must be deemed to have knowledge of the contract under which the goods were sold to them they were answerable for all the consequences reasonably flowing from their act. They were therefore liable for damages for the price of the goods under the contract, irrespective of the market value of the goods on the date of the conversion. 1963 Ker L J 638 : 1963 Ker L T 741: ILR (1963) 2 Ker 723:AIR 1964 Ker 135 (138) (Pt C) (Pr 10) (DB).

—Conversion — Damages — Measure of — Declaration made under S. 29, Sea Customs Act — If conclusive as to value of goods—Figures in bill of entry — Effect of — Value as per invoices if should be accepted — (Sea Customs Act (1878), S. 29) — (Evidence Act (1872), S. 115).

The value recoverable in an action for conversion is, in general, the value of the property at the date of the conversion and not its value at an earlier or later date. It is wrong to say that the figures in the bill of entry constitute an estoppel against the plaintiff for, there is no question of the defendant's altering his position on the faith of the representations contained in the bill of entry. The values as per the invoices should therefore be accepted for calculating damages awardable to the plaintiff for the conversion of his goods where the plaintiff's case is that the price of the goods given in the bill of entry was only for the purpose of assessing customs duty and that the correct price was shown in the invoices. 1957 Ker L T 1106 : ILR (1958) Kerala 268 : 1957 Ker L J 1098 : AIR 1958 Ker 47 (50) (Pt E) (Pr 9) (DB).

——Conversion — Remedies of bailor — Defence open to bailee — Measure of damages — Cause of action.

A bailor in the event of non-delivery of the goods by the bailee, on a demand made by him in that behalf, is entitled at his election to sue the bailee either for wrongful conversion of the goods or the wrongful detention thereof and if the bailor pursues hie remedy for wrongful conversion of the goods instead of wrongful detention thereof, it is no answer for the bailee to say that he was guilty of wrongful detention of the goods at an earlier date which fact of detention of the goods the plaintiff knew or ought to have known at or about that time and is, therefore, not liable to the plaintiff for wrongful conversion thereof. It is the option of the plaintiff to pursue either remedy against the bailee.

In general, the measure of damages is the value of the thing, credit being given te the defendant for the return of the goods converted or of their equivalent. Damages to be awarded in a case af conversion should be the damages when the conversion took place.

Conversion does not deprive the plaintiff of his title to the goods. Therefore, he may get judgment either (i) for the goods or their value; or (ii) for the value of the goods or for damages for their conversion. But, whichever of these two judgments he obtains his title to the goods is not (in the absence of special circumstances) affected, he may exercise all his rights as owner until the judgment is fully satisfied.

The cause of action may be based on trover and detinue simultaneously. Where all the ingredients that are necessary to spell out a cause of action on anyone of these two bases are present in the case by the mere use of the word 'Price' in the notice and the demand for price in the suit the real cause of action cannot be made obscure. 1962 M P L J 1163 : 1963 Jab L J 244 : ILR (1962) Madh Pra 404 : AIR 1963 Madh Pra 89 (94, 95) (Pt D) (Prs 19, 22, 23, 24) (DB).

——Damages — Earth dug up by wrong-doer from plaintiff's land converted into bricks—Assessment of damages.

Where a wrong-doer converts the earth dug up from the land of the plaintiff into bricks, then in addition to the expenses incurred by the plaintiff in manuring the plots dug out and for levelling up the pits created in the process of digging of the earth and the value of the crops that he would have been able to realise out of the lands in question and the value of the site prejudicially affected by digging of the pits, the plaintiff will be entitled to the value of the bricks. The value of the bricks is to be arrived at after deducting the making charges incurred by the defendant, it he has acted without fraud or negligence and quite fairly and honestly. ILR (1941) 1 Cal 285, Ref. 64 Mad L W 858 : 1951-2 Mad L J 419 : AIR 1952 Mad 597 (598) (Pr 4).

——Conversion — Damages — Refusal to take delivery offered late — Right to claim damages for total loss.

It is not open to the owner of goods to refuse to take delivery of goods offered to him, even though such delivery may have been offered late and after the goods had deteriorated and then claim damages as if there was a total loss. In such a case the owner can get only nominal damages. 1951 Nag L J 450 : ILR (1951) Nag 545 : AIR 1951 Nag 245 (247) (Pt B) (Pr 11).

——Detinue and conversion — Suit for damages for conversion — Offer of specific restitution—Plaintiff if can refuse.

Any interference with a chattel in manner inconsistent with the right of a person entitled to it accompanied by a denial of title of that person amounts to conversion. Therefore, where the plaintiff sues for the value of materials removed and not for specific restitution the action is one for damages for conversion and not an action in detinue. But where the defendant offers to restore the property and there is no case of deterioration in value of the goods since the date of the wrong the plaintiff cannot insist on damages refusing specific restitution. 1951 Nag L J 44 : ILR (1950) Nag 453 : AIR 1950 Nag 246 (248) (Pt D) (Prs 10, 11) (DB).

——Conversion — Damages.

In the case of wrongful conversion of goods of ordinary merchandise by the agent where the principal can re-purchase goods after getting information of conversion the latter is entitled to claim the market rate of the goods on the day on which he came to know of the conversion for, the market rate on the subsequent date, the option to claim the particular rate being with mim. AIR 1953 Sau 126 (127) (Prs 3-5) (DB).

6 (B). Liability.

——Earth from plaintiff's land removed and placed on railway line — Demand for return of earth not made — Probability of independent contractor for supply of earth having been employed — Railway authorities are liable in conversion for value of earth —Sale of Goods Act (1930), S. 27 — Limitation Act (1908), Art. 43.

If in a given case, there is evidence that the defendant has dealt with goods in a manner adverse to the plaintiff and inconsistent with his right to the use and possession of them, such dealing with the goods, amounts to conversion, notwithstanding the fact that no demand for the return of the goods was made. 1924 Mad 438, Rel. on.

Where a large quantity of earth from land belonging to the plaintiff was removed and placed on the railway track under construction.

Held, that the Union of India was liable in conversion for the value of the earth belonging to the plaintiff, even if the latter had made no demand for the return of the earth. ILR (1951) 3 Assam 279 : A I R 1952 Assam 141 (146) (Pt E) (Prs 28 to 30) (DB).

——Conversion—Hire purchase agreement — Assignment of right to use goods—Assignee becomes trustee and is bound to protect goods — Assignee allowing owner to wrongfully seize goods and purchasing them himself — Assignee is liable for loss suffered by hirer. See Contract—Hire-purchase Agreement. AIR 1965 Mad 257 (DB).

6 (C). Conversion and detention.

——Conversion and detention—Actions for—Scope of and distinction—Reliefs awardable.

A conversion is an act of wilful interference, without lawful justification with any chattel in a manner inconsistent with the right of another, whereby that other is deprived of the use and possession of it. Every person is guilty of a conversion, who without lawful justification, deprives a person of his goods by delivering them to some one else so as to charge the possession. The action of detention is based upon a wrongful detention of the plaintiff's chattel by the defendant, evidenced by a refusal to deliver it upon demand and the redress claimed is not damages for the wrong but the return of the chattel or its value. Action for wrongful conversion and action for wrongful detention are otherwise known as action in trover and action in detinue. Judgment for the petitioner in trover is for recovery of damages for the conversion: Judgment for the petitioner in detinue is for delivery of the chattel or payment of its value and damages for detention. Dhian Singh Shobha Singh v. Union of India, 36 Mys L J 256: 1958 Mad W N (SC) 40: (1958) S C J 363: (1958) 1 Mad L J (SC) 93: (1958) 1 Andh W R (SC) 93: 1958 S C A 307: 1958 S C R 781: A I R 1958 S C 274 (278) (Pt A) (Prs 15, 16, 18).

● ——Conversion and detention—Remedies—Option of plaintiff — Action for wrongful detention against bailee—Plea of in defence.

A bailor in the event of the non-delivery of the goods by the bailed, on a demand made by him in that behalf, is entitled, at his election, to sue the bailee either for wrongful conversion of the goods or the wrongful detention thereof and if the bailor pursues his remedy against the bailee for wrongful detention of the goods it would be no answer for the bailee to say that he was guilty of wrongful conversion of the goods at an earlier date which fact of conversion of the goods the plaintiff knew or ought to have known at or about that time and is therefore not liable to the plaintiff for wrongful detention thereof. It is the option of the plaintiff to pursue either remedy against the bailee just as it suits him having regard to all the circumstances of the case and the bailee cannot be heard to say anything to the contrary for the simple reason that he cannot take advantage of his own wrong and cannot ask the plaintiff to choose a remedy which may be beneficial to him. Dhian Singh Shobha Singh v. Union of India, 1958 S C J 363: 36 Mys L J 256: 1958 Mad W N (SC) 40: (1958) 1 M L J (SC) 93: (1958) 1 Andh W R (SC) 93: 1958 S C A 307: 1958 S C R 781: A I R 1958 S C 274 (280) (Pt B) (Prs 24, 25).

● ——Conversion and detention—Measure of damages —Value at the date of judgment allowed.

The position in law in regard to the measure of damages in an action for wrongful conversion is far from clear and the law in regard to the same cannot be said to be perfectly well settled. It is, however, quite clear that in actions for wrongful detention the measure of damages can only be the value of the goods as at the date of the verdict or judgment. (1946) 1 K B 374, Rel. on. In the case of wrongful conversion, the tort is complete the moment the goods are wrongfully converted by the defendant and no question can arise in those cases of any continuing wrong. In a case of wrongful detention, however, the cause of action may certainly arise the moment there is a refusal by the defendant to re-deliver the goods on demand made by the plaintiff in that behalf. But even though the cause of action thus arises on a refusal to re-deliver the said goods to the plaintiff the wrogful detention of the goods is a continuing wrong and the wrongful detention continues right up to the time when the defendant re-delivers the goods either of his own volition or under compulsion of a decree of the Court. The only verdict of judgment which the Court can give in actions for wrongful detention is that the defendant do deliver to the plaintiff the goods thus wrongfully detained by him or pay in the alternative the value thereof which can only be ascertained as on the date of the verdict or judgment in favour of the plaintiff. Dhian Singh Sobha Singh v. Union of India, 36 Mys L J 256: 1958 Mad W N (SC) 40: 1958 S C J 363: (1958) 1 M L J (SC) 93: (1958) 1 Andh W R (SC) 93: 1958 S C A 307: 1957 S C R 781: A I R 1958 S C 274 (286, 287) (Pt D) (Prs 50, 52).

——Conversion — Detention when becomes conversion.

To be an act of wilful interference, without lawful justification, with any chattel in a manner inconsistent with the right of another, whereby that other is deprived of the use and possession of it. Detention of a chattel amounts to conversion when it is adverse to the owner or other person entitled to possession, i.e., the defendant has an intention to keep the thing in defiance of the plaintiff. Merely, to be in possession of a chattel without title is not conversion nor is it a tort of any kind. If a bailee merely holds over after the end of the period of bailment, he may be liable for a breach of contract but is not guilty of conversion or of any other tort. The usual method of proving that the detention is adverse is to show that the plaintiff demanded the delivery of the chattel and the defendant refused or neglected to comply with the demand. 1959 All W R (HC) 18.

——Conversion — Conversion by detention—Essence of — Cause of action.

A plaintiff's anterior possession is not an essential element of conversion. It is enough if the defendant came by possession of the plaintiff's goods by trespass as against plaintiff or even otherwise and then detained it against the plaintiff's will. If the failure to deliver was not justified, the defendant is not allowed to say that he had not converted the goods. 1957 Ker L T 1106: 1957 Ker L J 1098: ILR (1958) Ker 268: AIR 1958 Ker 47 (48) (Pt B) (Pr 6) (DB).

——Conversion — Detention — Action for—Liability of defendant — (Contract Act (1872), S. 71)—(Penal Code (1860), S. 403, Expln. 2).

Held, (i) that apart from the legal position that the principles of criminal law are not applicable for the purpose of determining Civil liability, the notice given by the defendant in the present case was sufficient within the meaning of Explanation 2 to S. 403, Penal Code, and after the expiry of the notice period the defendant had no liability to the plaintiff in respect of the timber lying on the lands leased to it. (ii) that S. 71, Contract Act, had no application to the facts of the case. Section 71 requires that, to be responsible for the goods, the finder of the goods has to "take them into his custody." The defendant had no animus possidendi which is required to amount to possession in law. Mere corpus or physical existence or lying down of the timbers in the area in question did not amount to possession or taking custody in law. (iii) that the timbers left in the area in question after the notice, could be deemed or treated res derelicto, in any event, after January 15, 1947, i.e., after the expiry of notice period. (iv) that the defendant was in no way liable to the plaintiff in respect of his timber lying on the lands. There was no evidence of any assertion on the part of the defendant of any property in the timber or dealing with the timber as its own. Far from it they repeatedly requested the merchants concerned to remove the timber from the area in question. Hence the defendant was not liable either for conversion or detinue, (1875) 7 H L 757 and (1855) 24 L J C P 198, Dist; (1913) 29 T L R 386 and (1845) Q B 769 and (1920) 1 K B 723, Rel. on. ILR (1959) Cut 32 : AIR 1959 Orissa 103 (104 to 107) (Prs 8, 12, 14) (DB).

——Damages — As result of report by defendant, land in cultivatory possession of plaintiff, attached under S. 145, Criminal P. C. — Proceeding terminating in favour of plaintiff — Suit for damages — (Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 146).

As a result of the report by the defendant that there was a danger of breach of the peace, proceedings under S. 145 were taken and the land in cultivatory possession of the plaintiff was attached. Owing to the order of attachment the plaintiff could not cultivate the land. The proceedings under S. 145 ultimately terminated in favour of the plaintiff. The plaintiff brought a suit for damages for the loss sustained by him.

Held, that the loss suffered by the plaintiff though might be attributable to the order passed by the Magistrate yet it could not be said to be the result of the report made by the defendant which was followed by the proceedings under S. 145. The plaintiff was therefore not entitled to the damages from the defendant. 3 Ind Cas 12 (Cal) and 6 Mad 426, Rel. on. 1955 All W R (HC) 709 : 1956 All L J 42 : AIR 1956 All 119 (120) (Pr 4).

7 (C) Special and general.

——Damages—Measure of — Road accident by lorry driver by defendant, knocking down plaintiff, a lad of six years, trying to cross road—Driver of lorry found negligent and liable — General and special damages — Measure of — No specific pleading is necessary for general damages. Civil P. C. (1908), O. 6, R. 2, O. 7, R. 7.

Damages for personal injury are assessed under two distinct heads. First, there is what is referred to as special damage which has to be specially pleaded and proved. This consists of out of pocket expenses and loss of earnings incurred down to the date of trial, and is generally capable of substantially exact calculation. Secondly, there is general damage which the law implies and is not specially pleaded. This includes compensation for pain and suffering and the like and, if the injuries suffered are such as to lead to continuing or permanent: disability, compensation for loss of earning power in the future. 1956 A C 185 and 1961 A C 545, Rel. on.

Damages under the head of medical expenses may, cover both past and prospective expenses and include not only the cost of medical treatment and attendance but also such matters as increased living expenses, if, e.g., the plaintiff has to live in a special institution because of his injuries, transport costs to and from hospital and charges of nursing attendance.

Expenses incurred on medicine mixture given to the mother of the injured lad (the plaintiff) who was in attendance on the boy at the Nursing Home, can be awarded as special damages to the plaintiff. (1960) 2 Q B 430, Rel. on.

General damages represents pecuniary reparation or solatium to the plaintiff for the injuries sustained by him. In practice, a mere general allegation that the plaintiff has suffered damage or injury or a mere statement of facts about the accident with a prayer for award of damages is sufficient. Even in valuing the claim, it is open to the plaintiff to put an estimate of the general damages paying Court-fee thereon and offering to pay before decree is passed additional Court-fee on the fixation of damages due to him. (1907) 17 Mad L J 625, Rel. on. The relief of general damages must necessarily be more imperative in a case of collision causing personal injuries with concomitant pain and suffering—physical and/or mental. 1965 Ker L T 1172 : 1965 Ker L J 1112 : ILR (1966) 1 Ker 226 : AIR 1966 Ker 172 (178) (Pt C) (Prs 11, 13, 15).

——The matters that should be taken into account in the assessment of general damages are, (1) pain and suffering endured, past, present and future, (2) inconvenience and loss of enjoyment of life sustained, past, present and future and injury to health; (3) and a shortened expectation of life. The damages must give the plaintiff a reasonable compensation for the injuries sustained and the suffering entailed. Madh B L J 1955 H C R 1479 : Madh B L R 1955 Civ 489 : ILR (1955) Madh-Bha 306 : AIR 1955 Madh B 214 (221) (Pt C) (Pr 14) (DB).

—Damages—Plaintiff failing to make out special damages—Right to claim damages in general way.

Where the goods of the plaintiff are wrongfully attached and formally made over to the custody of the sureties under a surety bond and the defendant has not even made out that the attachment was affected bona fide, the plaintiff is entitled to claim damages in a general way, even if he fails to make out the special damages he has sought to recover. In fact the need for granting nominal damages arises only where the party has failed to make out any grounds for the award of special damages. Case law discussed. ILR (1952) Mys 176 : AIR 1952 Mys 90 (94) (Pt F) (Pr 16) (DB).

—False imprisonment — Damages — General and special damages — Pleading and proof—(C. P. Code (1908), O. 7, R. 7).

In a suit for damages for false imprisonment the plaintiff need not specially plead and prove general damage though it is necessary for him to plead and prove special damage. In the case of the former, the principle which is generally applied is one of restitutio in integrum while in the case of the latter the quantum is assessed on the principle of fair compensation. AIR 1959 Pat 490 (499) (Pt F) (Pr 17).

—Damages — General damages — Claim for—No separate averment or proof necessary — Special damages—Specific averment is necessary.

Where the plaintiff claims general damages, it is not necessary for him to prove such damages specifically. The reason is that general damages are considered at law to be pecuniary reparation for the damage which is presumed to follow the injury, and therefore which is not required to be separately averred or proved. On the other hand, special damages are the pecuniary equivalent of the loss actually sustained such as medical expenses incurred by reason of bodily harm or loss of business due to wrongful confinement. The plaintiff can recover such damages only if he specifically avers and claims them. AIR 1958 Raj 257, Rel. on. ILR (1962) 12 Raj 202 : 1962 Raj L W 77 : AIR 1962 Raj 127 (133) (Pt D) (Pr 26).

—Damages — Special damages — Bodily injury — Medical expenses.

In a suit for damages for bodily injury suffered by the plaintiff in a motor accident in calculating the expenses spent over medical treatment by the plaintiff the fact that the doctor who treated the plaintiff did not take any fees from the plaintiff would not entitle the defendant to take advantage of it, because a wrong-doer cannot claim any benefit that the plaintiff may have had in that regard for reasons of his own : A I R 1955 Madh B 214, Foll. 1960 Raj L W 284 : ILR (1960) 10 Raj 705 : AIR 1960 Raj 224 (229) (Pt D) (Pr 20) (DB).

—Damages—Special damages — Personal injury—Damages for pain and suffering and loss of prospective earning.

The Court is legally justified in granting damages both for physical and mental pain and suffering and loss of earning on account of the injury. AIR 1959 Mad 369; (1959) 1 Mad L J 278, Rel. on. Damages for personal suffering cannot be measured by any precise rule and it is scarcely intended to be a full compensation for the injury sustained. The principle of 'restitutio in integrum' is an unattainable ideal in this respect.

Held, on facts that by reason of the injury which the plaintiff sustained, and the permanent deprivation of his limb, there was no doubt that it must seriously interfere with his earning capacity. In the circumstances compensation of Rs. 15,000 for loss of earning was not quite speculative, but was based upon the background of his pecuniary status and his prospective earning in future. 1960 Raj L W 284 : ILR (1960) 10 Raj 705 : AIR 1960 Raj 224 (229, 230) (Pt E) (Prs 21 to 23) (DB).

—Damages.

Damages are of two kinds; general and special, while special damages are required to be specifically pleaded and proved, general damages are not. General damages are damages which the law presumes to flow from and, as it were, be the natural and probable consequence of, the defendant's act. Therefore general damages need not be pleaded specifically nor need any evidence be produced to prove them as such. 1059 Raj L W 222 : ILR (1959) 9 Raj 498: AIR 1959 Raj 169 (175) (Pt E) (Pr 29).

—General damages—Proof—(C. P. Code (1908), O. 7, R. 7—Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101 to 104).

The legal principle is well established that general damages are not required to be proved specifically. ILR (1958) 8 Raj 681 : 1959 Raj L W 247: AIR 1958 Raj 257 (258) (Pt A) (Pr 5).

—Damages—Special and general damages—Distinction pointed out. AIR 1955 NUC (Raj) 291 (DB).

7 (D). Measure.

● —Measure of damages—In absence of any special circumstances, the measure of damages cannot be the amount of loss ultimately sustained by the representee—It can only be for difference between price which he paid and the price which he would have received if he had resold the shares in the market forthwith after purchase provided there was a fair market there—Ordinarily market rate of shares on date when fraud was practised would represent their real price in absence of any circumstance. See Contract Act (1872), S. 73. AIR 1953 S C 235.

—Damages — Injury — Suit for compensation for personal injury—Court should consider nature of Injury as well as status of plaintiff in assessing compensation.

In assessing compensation for personal injury to the plaintiff, the Court has to consider not merely the nature of injury but also the status of the plaintiffs. If a person gives a respectable person a slap in broad day light in the market place and afterwards pleads that damages should be nominal because a slap is a trival matter, the Court is entitled to consider the status and class of the plaintiff before deciding whether the wrong done to the plaintiff is serious or trivial. 1965 All L J 805.

See Railways Act (1890), S. 72 (Prior to Amendment of 1961). AIR 1965 Cal 636.

——Damages—Loss of earning due to loss of one leg in motor accident—Fifty per cent of normal earning is proper measure — Workmen's Compensation Act (1923), Sch. 1.

Under Sch. 1 to the Workmen's Compensation Act, the loss of earning capacity on account of loss of leg below the knee is stated to be fifty per cent of the normal earning capacity. This is a fair measure of damages for loss of earning due to the loss of one leg caused in a motor accident due to the defendants' negligence. 1962 M P L J 657 : 1962 Jab L J 852 : ILR (1963) M P 270.

——Damages—Injury to person —Assessment.

The principle on which damages were awarded in tort was to compensate the person wronged, so far as money could compensate for the wrongful act of the defendant and for all its direct and natural consequences. If the tort is in relation to property, assessment of damage is comparatively easy because the damages then are measured by the actual pecuniary loss suffered but when injury was to a person or his reputation damages were difficult to assess because it is not possible to assess in money value the pain and suffering of a person or the effect of damages to reputation. Where the tort was accompanied by malicious intent, such malice might be taken into consideration in assessing damages. 1960 M P L J (Notes) 184.

——Damages—Assessment—Principle of.

Damages in cases of tort, are allowed to compensation and not by way of restoration or restitution. Applying this principle to the case of bodily injury, the plaintiff would be entitled only to compensation for the loss of future employment and not an amount on the basis of an absolute mathematical calculation without taking into consideration the probable fluctuations in life. 1957 M P C 393 : 1957 Jab L J 765 : 1957 M P L J 585 : I L R (1957) Madh Pra 43 : AIR 1957 Madh Pra 159 (161) (Pt B) (Pr 13) (DB).

——Damages—Loss caused by wrongful act—Measure of damages.

The measure of damages is the loss of the value of the property caused by the wrongful acts of the tort-feasor. 1957 M P C 343: 1957 M P L J 418 : 1957 Jab L J 722.

——Damages—Mode of assessment—Loss of expectation of life of deceased—Factors to be taken into account stated, See Fatal Accidents Act (1855), S. 1-A. AIR 1962 Mad 309.

——Nervous shock—Measure of damages.

The nervous complexes of persons are different and so are their reactions to violent shock and even to physical injury. The measure of damages in a case of this kind is by no means easy to assess. 1951-2 Mad L J 471 : AIR 1951 Mad 1056 (1059) (Pt E) (Pr 14).

——Damages — Physical injury due to motor accident — Damages on heads of pain, loss of amenities and future earnings—Principles.

Held, that in a claim for damages for personal injury, when caused by negligence the damages apart from special damages, will be given for the physical injury itself and, in case of loss of limb, disfigurement or disablement, for its effect upon the physical capacity of the injured person to enjoy life, as well as for his bodily pain and suffering or for shock or injury to health. Such damages cannot be a perfect compensation but must be arrived at by a reasonable consideration of all the heads of damages in respect of which the plaintiff is entitled to compensation and of his circumstances making allowances for the ordinary accidents and chances of life. In addition to such general damages special damages may be recovered for pecuniary loss subject to remoteness and mitigation sustained whether it be for expenses properly incurred in medical attendance, or for any other loss or injury actually suffered which follows in the ordinary course of things from the tort. The heads of compensation may differ from case to case.

Damages on the head of 'medical expenses' claimed by the plaintiff not being challenged, could be awarded.

The award of damages on the head of pain and suffering and for loss of future amenities due to disablement a disfigurement of the arm, by the trial Court is more or less in its discretion which has to be used judicially. In the instant case, though the trial Court might have, to some extent erred on the side of generosity, the award of Rs. 10,000 on this head made by it was not either unreasonable or improper.

On the head of loss of future profits and business, it was not established that the business had suffered on account of the injury sustained by the plaintiff. The loss was due to the fact that many shops of similar type had come into existence due to the growth of the town. But since the injury imposed on the plaintiff a general permanent handicap in his life it must be compensated. It could not be ignored that there are several contingencies in life which might arise which would affect the earning of the injured person. Though therefore, this loss had to be compensated, yet it must be done having regard to the various chances of life and other imponderable events and having regard to the fact of getting the money now in the one lump sum. It could not also be forgotten that the damages awarded in actions for torts are compensatory and not punitive. (Rs. 15,000 were awarded as proper compensation). (1879) 5 CPD 280, Rel. on. 1963 Mys L J (Supp) 159 : AIR 1963 Mys 161 (164, 166, 167) (Pt B) (Prs 20, 25, 42, 44, 55, 56) (DB).

——Damages—Personal injury—Assessment of damages—Principles—Compensation for pain and suffering undergone as well as impairment of health and reduced capacity to work—Award of special damages for treatment.

In an action for damages for personal injuries caused to the plaintiff in an accident the plaintiff is entitled to be compensated for the pain and suffering undergone by him as a result of the accident as also in respect of the general impairment of his health, if there has been any such impairment, and reduced capacity for work, if there has been lowering of his endurance or stamina in that regard, besides the special damages awardable to him for the expenses which he had to incur for his treatment during the period, he was an in-patient in the hospital. In such a case the assessment of compensation should necessarily be a matter to some extent of conjecture. 1930 A C 113, (1953) 1 All E R 314, Rel. on. 38 Mys L J 323 : ILR (1960) Mys 130 : AIR 1960 Mys 222 (225, 226) (Pt B) (Prs 16, 19, 20, 24, 25) (DB).

——Damages — Death by accident — Pecuniary loss suffered by dependants—Computation.

The compensation to be awarded to the members of the family of a person injuriously affected by an accident must be proportioned to the loss resulting to the plaintiffs from the death of that person which means the loss of the pecuniary benefit to them according to reasonable expectations. This assessment of the compensation must undoubtedly be based on reasonable future probabilities. It is not the compensation which is in the nature of and which sometimes is described as sentimental damage caused by bereavement, pain or suffering, an action in such cases being an action which is purely compensatory in nature.

When the deceased met his death by the accident he was 52 years old drawing a salary of Rs. 140 per month. The District Judge, while awarding compensation to the plaintiffs, the dependants of the deceased for the pecuniary loss suffered by them, took into account only the monthly salary of the deceased and capitalised the same by applying three years rule :

Held, that the three years rule was utterly inadequate. He should also have capitalised the pension. 37 Mys L J 718 : ILR (1958) Mys 759 : AIR 1960 Mys 105 (110, 111) (Pt C) (Prs 29 to 32) (DB).

——Determination of Court's duty — Plaintiff claiming damages for cutting 1,500 trees and deposing so —Court relying on indirect testimony by fixing rate in relation to number of trees and awarding damages for 3,000 trees—The mode of determining damages is unsatisfactory. ('51) 1951 Nag L J (Notes) 199.

——Damages—Live trees cut—Measure of damages.

The price of a living tree is always more than its price after it is cut. If a tort-feasor, after cutting a live tree, leases it to the charge of the owner, then alone he can urge that he is liable only for the difference between the price of the standing tree and that of the cut tree. If he cuts a tree without authority and does not specically leave it to the custody of the owner, he is liable to reimburse the owner for the loss of the whole tree and he cannot claim any concession on the ground that the owner does not prove that he has misappropriated the dead tree. 26 Cut L T 392 : AIR 1961 Orissa 124 (128) (Pt D) (Pr 6) (DB).

——Damages—Computation of—Death of husband in car accident which was driven negligently and rashly by defendant—Expectancy of life—Deceased at time of death 42 years old — For arriving at a fair period for computing damages to the widow, the conclusion of Court that deceased would have lived for 15 years more, held was not shown to be erroneous, so as to call for interference in appeal. AIR 1961 Punj 400 (403) (Pt C) (Pr 16) (DB).

——Damages —Computation of—Death due to rash and negligent driving of motor car—Loss of expected provident fund contribution by employer — Relevancy—Fatal Accidents Act (1855), S. 1-A.

Where the deceased is killed in an accident caused by a motor car driven negligently and rashly by the defendant it is true that damages are awardable only to the extent that the plaintiffs (widow and minor children of the deceased) have suffered pecuniary loss but this may legitimately include reasonable expectation of pecuniary benefit in the future. The plaintiffs are not in law, debarred from getting pecuniary benefit of the Provident Fund that would be payable in April 1972, the date on which the deceased would have died naturally when the children were at the time of the accident only 7 and 11 years of age. This amount has to be included while computing the compensation. AIR 1961 Punj 400 (404, 405) (Pt D) (Prs 19, 20) (DB).

——Damages—Computation—Death in car accident by rash and negligent driving—Deduction for expected amount of maintenance of deceased.

Where the deceased met his death in an accident caused by rash and negligent driving of a motor car by the defendant, from compensation to be paid to widow and children of deceased, calculated upon the basis of what the deceased would have earned had he lived, the amount which would have been required or expended for the personal and living expenses by the deceased has to be deducted; in other words, the estimated amount of his maintenance, has necessarily to be deducted.

In fixing the amount, the possibility of addition to the number of family members, had the deceased lived longer, has to be taken into account and the plaintiff's pecuniary loss has to be proportionately reduced. AIR 1961 Punj 400 (405) (Pt E) (Pr 27) (DB).

——Damages—Assessment of.

Where damage to the attaching creditor has resulted on account of the wrongful acts of the sarpurdar a mere uncertainty as to the amount of damages and the difficulty in quantifying damage in terms of money cannot preclude the right of recovery. This is certainly true, where from the nature of the case, the amount of damage is not capable of exact and accurate proof. Even where the tort is of such a nature so as to preclude the determination of the amount of damage with certainty, the Courts have to draw just and reasonable inference, although the deduction is based only on approximation. AIR 1958 Punj 348 (351) (Pt C) (Pr 13).

7 (E). Remoteness.

——Damages—Remoteness.

If the result that has followed the act is far too remote, there is no liability for any damages quite apart from the question of quantum of damages.

Where a Municipal Board grants a licence to A to erect a flour mill near the house of B, when the bye-laws prohibited the Board from granting such licenses and the licence was granted in spite of the opposition of B and A erects a flour mill and as a consequence of its working the house of B is damaged by vibrations, the Board is not liable for the damage which is remote. Damage to the building could not be a direct consequence of the grant of the licence by the Board. 1962 All W R (HC) 64 : AIR 1961 All 430 (431, 432) (Pt B) (Prs 2, 3).

——Damages—Remoteness — Voluntary payment — Wrongful detention.

In tort a man is not answerable for damages which are too remote. The tort-feasor or the wrong-doer is liable only for the natural and probable consequences of his act, or, as it is usually called, the direct, immediate or proximate damages, resulting therefrom, and, although a third party intervention or the action of a third party does not necessarily break the chain of causation and make subsequent damage too remote, yet when there comes, in the chain, the act of a person who is bound by law to decide the matter judicially and independenty the consequences of his act are too remote from the original wrong which gave him a chance of deciding, except in cases where the decision had to be made as a matter of course, or, where it is ex parte in the sense that the person sought to be affected thereby was not a party to the proceeding in which the decision was given and, possibly also, where the decision was not final or binding, so far as the party sought to be affected thereby, was concerned. These exceptions however, are in the nature of apparent exceptions which do not affect the rule. Further for a payment voluntarily made and never demanded back, no damage can be claimed either for detention or otherwise. 8. Deceit.

——Deceit — Action on — Essentials.

In order to sustain an action of deceit, there must be proof of fraud, and nothing short of that will suffice. Fraud is proved when it is shown that a false representation has been made (1) knowingly, or (2) without belief in its truth, or (3) recklessly careless whether it be true or false. This principle, applies to 'actual' fraud, a conscious misrepresentation as opposed to constructive fraud. 1960 M P L J 865 : 1960 M P C 481 : 1960 Jab L J 965 : (1962) 32 Comp Cas 830 : I L R (1960) Madh Pra 265 : AIR 1960 Madh Pra 323 (326) (Pt A) (Prs 6, 7) (DB).

——Deceit — Action on — Misrepresentation—'Suppressio veri suggestio falsi'.

A particular statement verbally accurate may be a false statement in effect as if the fact had been misstated altogether. If by a number of statements a person intentionally gives a false impression and induces a person to act upon it, it is not the less false although if one takes each statement by itself there may be a difficulty in showing that any specific statement is untrue. It is a case of suppressio veri suggestio falsi. Equally, a misrepresentation may be implied from a party's conduct; if one conducts himself in a particular way with the object of fraudulently inducing another to believe in the existence of a certain state of things contrary to the true fact and to act upon the basis of its existence, and damage results therefrom to the party misled, he who misled him will be just as much liable as if he had misrepresented the facts in express terms. 1960 M P L J 865 : 1960 M P C 481 : 1960 Jab L J 965 : (1962) 32 Comp Cas 830 : ILR (1960) Madh Pra 265: AIR 1960 Madh Pra 323 (327) (Pt B) (Pr 12) (DB).

——Deceit — Misrepresentation by person having no knowledge — If 'fraud'.

Where a person having no knowledge whatever on the subject, takes upon himself to represent a certain state of facts to exist, he does so at his peril; and, if it be done either with a view to secure some benefit to himself he is in law guilty of a fraud, for, he takes upon himself to warrant his own belief of the truth of that which he so asserts. ——Deceit — Action on — Vicarious liability—Agent of company by misrepresenting facts about the financial position of company and the position of shares in the market selling shares to plaintiff—Plaintiff suffering great loss — Managing directors and a relation of his benefiting themselves by this transaction — It is not unreasonable to infer that the managing director was primarily responsible for sending agent to plaintiff to dispose of unyielding and unprofitable shares held by him and his relation — Managing director cannot escape liability for damage suffered by plaintiff. 1960 M P L J 865 : 1960 M P C 481 : 1960 Jab L J 965 : (1962) 32 Comp Cas 830 : I L R (1960) Madh Pra 265 : AIR 1960 Madh Pra 323 (328) (Pt D) (Pr 17) (DB).

——Deceit — Vicarious liability — False representation by agent.

Where an agent makes a false statement in the course of his employment, the principal will be liable under the normal rules of vicarious responsibility for the torts of his agent. Where an agent by making false representation about the position of the company whose agent he is, sells some shares of the Company to the plaintiff and the representations are false both to the knowledge of the principal, i e., the directors and the agent and are made during the agent's course of employment, the directors and the agent all are liable as joint tort-feasors. ——Deceit — False representation — Action, when lies.

The tort of deceit is not complete till the false report is acted upon. Where a person makes false representation about a company and its shares and induces the plaintiff to buy some shares and the plaintiff acting upon these misrepresentation and inducement purchases the same, which but for the misrepresentation he would not have purchased, the tort of deceit is complete and action for damages by the plaintiff against the person and the directors for whom he acted is maintainable. 1960 M P L J 865 : 1960 M P C 481 : 1960 Jab L J 965 : (1962) 32 Comp Cas 830 : ILR (1960) Madh Pra 265 : AIR 1960 Madh Pra 323 (329) (Pt F) (Pr 19) (DB).

——Deceit — Remedies — Suit in tort for damages and not for rescission — Parties.

Various remedies are available to a person who has been the victim of fraud, deceit or other unconscionable conduct. Rescission, restitution, damages or constructive trust are some of the usual remedies for fraudulent misrepresentation. A plaintiff may sue to rescind a contract to which his assent was procured by fraud or deceit in an action for breach of such contract or for specific performance. But the plaintiff in all cases of rescission must do equity which means that he must return any consideration which he may have received in the transaction. If the suit were for rescission of the contract induced by fraud and misrepresentation by the agent of a company allotting shares to the plaintiffs, the Company would be a necessary party. But where the plaintiffs have not purposely made he company a party defendant nor bave they claimed rescission in terms but the relief claimed is a relief in tort, i.e., damages suffered by him due to directors', and their agent's deceit in inducing them to purchase shares by false representations, the suit against the directors individually and the agent without, joining the company as party defendant is maintainable. 1960 M P L J 865 : 1960 M P C 481 : 1960 Jab L J 965 : (1962) 32 Comp Cas 830 : ILR (1960) Madh Pra 265 : AIR 1960 Madh Pra 323 (329) (Pt G) (Prs 20, 21) (DB).

——Deceit—Measure of damages—Plaintiff induced by false representations to purchase worthless shares of Company.

Where the shares were worthless from the time they were fraudulently palmed off to the plaintiffs because of the inherent defect in the project itself, the measure of damages is the price the plaintiffs were induced to give for such worthless shares by the fraud of the defendants. 1960 M P L J 865 :1960 M P C 481 : 1960 Jab L J 965 : (1962) 32 Comp Cas 830 : I L R (1960) Madh Pra 265 : AIR 1960 Madh Pra 323 (329) (Pt H) (Prs 22, 23) (DB).

——Deceit — False inducement — Actionability — Plea of contributory negligence — When to be raised — (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 100 — New plea).

In an action based on deceit, in that the defendant by falsely identifying the payee, knowing it to be false, induced the postman to deliver the money order to a person, who was not the real payee, it is no defence that the postman had other means of knowledge which he did not avail of or that he made an incomplete investigation of facts. The defendant cannot also raise a plea that the postman was guilty of contributory negligence, for the first time, in second appeal, when it was not taken in the written statement. When the statement, which according to the postman induced, him to pay the money to the payees, was false to the knowledge of the defendant and there was no question of honest belief, in the truth of that statement, it must be regarded as fraudulent within the meaning of the rule in (1889) 14 A.C 337 so as to furnish basis for an action for deceit. 1959 Jab L J 367 : 1959 M P C 559 : 1959 M P L J 884 : AIR 1959 Madh Pra 389 (390, 391) (Prs 8, 11).

——Defamation — Damages — Statement of unchastity to a woman is defamation—Slander is actionable without further proof of any special damage.

Held, that the imputation was a deliberate statement of fact made by the appellants and as it was made in the presence of several persons, it amounted to defamation. That they were provoked to make that statement by the respondent starting the quarrel was another matter and could be considered as a circumstance mitigating damages, but it could not be a complete defence to the action. Further that imputation of unchastity to a woman was actionable in India without proof of special damages. In England words imputing unchasity to a woman were not actionable per se before the Slander of Women Act, 1891, by which such an imputation was made actionable without proof of any special damage. ——Defamation — Witness — Putting defamatory questions to witness — Remedies at law.

Where a witness is put questions per se defamatory the remedies open to him under the law are threefold, viz., (a) protection by court; (b) self-help in the shape of setting the criminal law in motion or (c) filing a suit for damages. The extensive powers which have been granted to the court for protecting witnesses from questions not lawful in cross examination are set out in Ss. 146 to 153 of the Evidence Act.

The first remedy is, however, unsatisfactory as half the mischief is done when the questions are put and it becomes too late for the court to prevent the putting of the same. Therefore, valuable as the powers are under these sections, owing to the timid way in which it is exercised and owing to the difficulties not unoften in the exercise of the same, the aggrieved party has to rely only upon his own remedies for ventilating his grievance, viz., file a suit for damages or file a complaint under S. 500, Penal Code.

——Defamation — Civil and Criminal liability — Difference in law in India and England — Penal Code (1860), S. 499.

In India the criminal liability for defamation is codified and embodied in S. 499 of the Penal Code and differs from the law in England in that regard. The civil liability for defamation to pay damages, however, is not governed by any statute law but is determined with reference to the principles of justice, equity and good conscience, which generally have been imported in this country from the English principles. There seems to be a little scope for an appreciable difference between the Indian and the English law on this subject. 1962 (1) Cri L J 737 : ILR 41 Pat 816 : AIR 1962 Pat 229 (230) (Pt A) (Pr 4) (DB).

9(A). Cause of action.

——Defamation — Damages — Suit for — Cause of action when arises.

The essence of a cause of action for defamation lies in the fact that the person defamed is lowered in the estimation of others. If none else has heard the defamatory remark, no suit is maintainable for damages for defamation. It is immaterial that the plaintiff's feelings were hurt by the said remark. 1951 All L J 268 : AIR 1953 All 302 (306) (Pt D) (Pr 18) (DB).

9 (C). Corporation.

——Defamation — Resolutions passed at a meeting of Board of Directors —Whether per se defamatory.

Held, that in order to determine whether particular resolutions passed by the Board of Directors at their meeting were defamatory per se, the Court must ignore all the surrounding circumstances relating to the aforesaid resolutions and should view them as divorced from the context in which they were passed. The Court should look at the resolutions as a whole, giving to the words used therein their obvious and natural meaning. Defamation has a particular legal sense and unless the stinging character of the alleged statement reaches that level, it is not possible for the Court to predicate that the resolutions in question are defamatory per se. If the resolutions are not defamatory per se, the plaintiff has to make out their defamatory character by showing that there was an innuendo behind them which by insinuation converted what prima facie was not defamation into a tortious wrong styled as defamation. Clerk and Lindsell on Torts, 10th Edn., pp. 711 to 715, Ref. AIR 1957 All 219 (224) (Pt A) (Prs 15, 16).

——Defamation — Resolutions passed at meeting — Validity or otherwise of meeting or resolution—Relevancy.

In an action for damages for passing certain defamatory resolutions against the plaintiff the Court is not concerned with the validity or otherwise of the meeting or the resolutions passed therein, but: it is only concerned with the bona fide nature of the resolutions. If the publication of the resolution is made on privileged occasions then unless the plaintiff proves that the resolutions were actuated by express malice he cannot succeed. A I R 1957 All 219 (228) (Pt D) (Pr 31).

9 (D). Damages.

——Libel and defamation — Damage—Measure of—Interference by appellate Court.

It is true that in England, a Court of Appeal rarely interferes on the ground of the quantum of damages being inappropriate, but that is for the reason that the quantum is a question for the jury. In India, an appellate court may interfere on proper grounds being made out because the appraisement of the damages is an act of the trial Judge himself and the appellate Judges are in the same position as he.

The omission to tender an apology before the suit is not an aggravating circumstance in the case, when the demand for an apology was accompanied by a further demand for the payment of two big sums of money. But it is certainly a material circumstance that the defendants pleaded justification and sought unsuccessfully to prove it.

Where the plaintiff was at the relevant time, a person of considerable prominence in public life and at the date of the plaint, she was a member of the Legislative Assembly of Bengal, a member of the West Bengal Provincial Congress Committee, a member of the Executive Committee of Indian National Trade Union Congress, the Treasurer of the Bengal Provincial National Trade Union Congress, a member of the Executive Committee of the Indian Women's Conference and the President of ten Labour Unions, in addition to the Union of Press Workers of the defendant's publication and after the publication of the libel, she had gradually to withdraw from all those organisations, because she found her position to be extremely uncomfortable and was practically shunned and had lost the confidence of the public and it was evident that considering the large publication of the defendant's paper, her reputation must have been damaged seriously.

Held, that the award of Rs. 5,000 as damages by the trial Judge was not excessive. AIR 1955 N U C (Cal) 407 (DB).

——Defamation — Article in monthly journal — Libellous attack on person characterising him as a Godseite and as a member of that group — Effect of — Absence of any occasion for the writing and absence of inquiry as to facts relied on for attack — Personal animus—If to be proved — Motive — Relevancy — Malice in law — Sufficiency — Quantum of damages—Factors to be considered—Principles.

Held : (1) To brand any person as a Godseite or a member of that group from whom danger may be apprehended was to impute that the person was likely to adopt the methods of political assassination for enforcing his opinions and there could be no doubt that the expressions complained of were highly defamatory per se; (2) that there was hardly any occasion for the offending article which was highly defamatory per se and hence no personal animus need be shown; the defendants were not therefore entitled to claim privilege of occasion; (3) that the act of blackening the plaintiff in the eyes of the reading public of the periodical was not justified either as fair comment or as truth; (4) the question of motive was not material, and it was sufficient that malice in law was fully proved; (5) that the imputation against the plaintiff was cruel and unjust, and since the occasion was not privileged; the libel was established; (6) that while the fact of an offer to apologise having been offered was certainly a relevant fact in assessing the damages, there was no real or fair opportunity for an honourable apology; (7) that the plaintiff had not estabItshed that he suffered any actual or substantial injury to his reputation; (8) that Courts of law are not bound to sustain in full actions for damage for libel which are primarily intended for the monetary benefit of the plaintiffs taking advantage of the occasion of a libel; and (9) that therefore the case was only one for nominal damages and not for award of substantial damages. 1961 Mad W N 56 : (1961) 2 M L J 189 : 74 Mad L W 10 : AIR 1961 Mad 254 (255 to 258) (Pt A) (Prs 2, 3, 4, 6, 10 to 12).

——Defamation — Apology when bars a suit for damages.

The publication of the 'contradiction' and the expression of regret in certain issues of the paper is not tantamount to apology, 1956 Nag L J 586: 1956 M P L J 66: ILR (1956) Nag 439: AIR 1957 Nag 19 (23) (Pt B) (Pr. 15) (DB).

——Defamation—Damages—Proof—Necessity.

Where, the allegations are defamatory the plaintiff in a suit for damages is entitled to damages even without proving actual loss sustained by him. 1956 Nag L J 586 : 1956 M P L J 66: ILR (1956) Nag 439: AIR 1957 Nag 19 (23) (Pt C) (Pr 18) (DB).

——Defamation and Malicious prosecution — Damages.

A claim for damages for malicious prosecution is quite a separate species of tort from a claim for damages for defamation. In a suit for damages for defamation the law requires that the plaint ought to allege the publication of the defamatory statement set out the actual words used and also state that they were published or spoken to some named individuals and specify the time and place when and where they were published. Where the plaint allegations only make out a case for malicious prosecution there could not be a decree for damages for defamation in favour of plaintiff. ——Defamation—Suit for damages—Scope of damages—Duty of Court.

In actions for defamation the function of the Court is to see whether the words complained of are capable of a defamatory meaning and are capable of being defamatory of the plaintiff. ——Defamation—Essentials to be proved—Defendant sending defamatory letter in Urdu script to plaintiff's home address — Plaintiff, not conversant with Urdu getting it read by third person—Publication.

In a suit for damages for defamation the plaintiff in order to succeed has not only to prove that the words used by the defendant in the letter addressed to him are defamatory but also that the defendant knew or ought to have known that the letter would probably be read by some person other than the plaintiff.

Held, that in the absence of pleading and proof of the important fact that the defendant while writing the letter in question in Urdu script knew that the plaintiff did not know Urdu which would necessitate reading of the letter by a third person it must be held that the defendant was not responsible for the alleged publication of the libellous matter. 10 Suth W R 184, Rel. on. 1958 Pat L R 106: A I R 1958 Pat 445 (447, 448) (Prs 7, 9, 10).

——Defamation — Publication — Proof — (Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101 to 104).

If the words used by the defendants in connection with the plaintiff were per se defamatory and tended to injure his reputation, it was scarcely necessary for him to show 'how and to what extent he was lowered in the public eyes'. Another essential factor which is necessary for the plaintiff to prove in a suit for defamation is that of publication. 9(F). Fair comment.

——Libel and defamation — Fair comment, what amounts to.

The right of fair comment is not a special privilege of newspapers but is a right which every citizen or person has. But the comment must be fair in the sense that it must be based on facts truly stated and must consist in an inference, reasonably warranted by such facts and honestly drawn. One must state as facts only the truth and cannot state mere matters of one's belief, but after he has stated facts truly and laid a foundation for criticism, he may add observations by way of comment and such observations will be within the range of fair comment and so protected from an action for libel, if they consist in inferences which might legitimately be drawn from the facts stated and if the plaintiff does not prove that although prima facie and objectively fair, the comment was nevertheless made with a malicious motive. If these conditions are satisfied, the mere fact that there was some exaggeration will not defeat the defence. But the exaggeration will be excused only if it is merely an excess of severity short of violent invective and cannot take the form of an addition of untrue facts. It is true that an inference or comment may sometimes take the form of a statement of fact but it must appear that what has been stated in terms of fact is only a conclusion or deduction from other facts truly stated and such deduction must be one fairly warranted. An independent and further allegation of dishonourable conduct cannot be made as a fact and immunity cannot then be claimed for it on the basis that it is comment. It is one thing to comment upon or criticise even with severity, the acknowledged or proved acts of a public man, and quite another to assert that he has been guilty of a particular act of misconduct.

[The publication held not protected by the right of fair comment.] AIR 1955 NUC (Cal) 407 (DB).

——Libel and defamation — Fair comment — Onus is on defendant — He must not only establish that the matter which he defends as comments is comment on matter of public interest but also that it is not founded on misstatements of facts in the so-called comment. AIR 1955 NUC (Cal) 407 (DB).

——Fair comment—Editor of newspaper stating facts and drawing fair inferences — Comment in public interest without malice—Onus is on accused to show that a statement that is prima facie defamatory is justified under Exception 2 or 3, of S. 499, Penal Code. See Penal Code (1860), S. 499, Exceptions 2 and 3. 1961 (2) Cri L J 114: AIR 1961 Madh Pra 205 (DB).

9 (G). Innuendo.

——Libel and defamation — Innuendos.

Where the publication is found to be libellous in its plain meaning, it is immaterial whether the plaintiff succeeds or fails in establishing the innuendos alleged by her. If she fails, she can treat the unproved innuendos as surplusage and still contend that the words of the publication are defamatory in their natural and ordinary meaning. AIR 1955 NUC (Cal) 407 (DB).

——Libel and defamation — Innuendos—Proof.

In order to prove an innuendo, evidence of surrounding circumstances which would lead those who read the libel, to conclude that the plaintiff was the person referred to, is admissible.

When the alleged libel is contained in a newspaper, the plaintiff can, in explaining its meaning, put in evidence any article or paragraph contained in the same or a previous issue of the same newspaper which is connected with the subject-matter of the libel.

Having regard to the false pretences contained in one of the paragraphs of the publication and the allegations in the previous publications, the innuendo was held to be established. AIR 1955 NUC (Cal) 407 (DB).

——Defamation—Innuendo— Imputation in published matter made by winning candidate, alleged to be defamatory of rival candidate in context of extrinsic facts — Failure to plead extrinsic facts— Imputation cannot be held defamatory of rival candidate. 9 (H). Justification.

——Defamation — Defence of justification — Pleading and proof — Civil P. C. (1908), O. 6, R. 4 — Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101 to 103.

In an action for damages for defamation, the defendant who wants to put forward the defence of justification must not only raise the plea in his written statement but should prove it strictly by leading evidence that the defamatory remarks about the plaintiff were true. The onus to prove justification always lies on the defendant. ('51) 1951 All L Jour 268 : AIR 1953 All 302 (307) (Pt I) (Prs 29, 30) (DB).

9 (I). Malice.

——Defamation — Malice — Onus — Malice in law and malice in fact.

In an action for defamation malice in law which is alleged at the first stage of the case is merely a formal allegation. It is more or less a matter of presumption and hardly requires any proof. Malice in fact, or in other words, express malice, the burden of which is shifted on the plaintiff once the occasion is proved to be a privileged one, is the substantial malice which the plaintiff has to prove before he can succeed in the case. AIR 1957 All 219 (227) (Pt C) (Pr 29).

——Libel and defamation — Malice — Proof.

A defamatory statement, not germane in any way to the privileged occasion and not pertiment to the defendant's vindication, is itself evidence of malice; it may be such evidence as to the whole of the publication. The malice required to be proved is express malice, in other words, malice in fact, as distinguished from the implied malice which the law presumes from the mere publication of defamatory matter. In a case of qualified privilege, such implied malice is excluded by the nature of the occasion and in order to be able to succeed, the plaintiff must prove express malice which means an actual wrong state of mind in which the defendant acted, not bona fide and for a reason which would make the statement privileged but from an indirect and wrong motive, such as spite, ill-will or prejudice or with knowledge that the statement was untrue or recklessly "careless whether it was true or false."

Held, that there was considerable extrinsic evidence to show that the defendants acted from malice. AIR 1955 NUC (Cal) 407 (DB).

——Defamation — Malice — Qualified privilege — Charges framed against plaintiff on report by head of department—All charges except two, proved or found to have reasonable basis — Malice held could not be imputed against the head of department. 1963 BLJR 316.

9 (J). Privilege.

——Defamation — Action for damages — What plaintiff has to prove — Defence of qualified privilege—Scope.

In order to sustain an action for defamation it is necessary for the plaintiff not only to prove that a defamatory statement regarding him has been made but also that the person making it has published it to some person other than the person defamed. In such a case it is open to the person who is sought to be charged with the liability to take up the defence of qualified privilege in respect of the publication. Five cases are relevant. Firstly, that the publication was made by him in discharge of a duty owed by him. Secondly, that there existed between him and the party to whom the publication was made a common interest in the subject-matter in question. Thirdly, the doctrine would also cover a confidential relationship between persons and societies as a result of which one party is empowered or entitled to tender advice or information to another party respecting a matter in which both are concerned. Fourthly, where such a relationship exists, any enquiry made by one party from another might be an additional ground involving the other party in a kind of moral obligation to convey the information to the party that seeks the said information. Fifthly, that the publication was made for the protection of the legitimate interests of the person or persons who make the publication or even for the protection of the interest of another person in which both the parties are concerned. The publication thus made is of a defensive nature and where it falls within the four corners of this definition, it is difficult to weigh the defence set up in golden scales. AIR 1957 All 219 (226, 227, 229, 233) (Pt B) (Prs 23, 24, 29, 42, 71).

——Qualified privilege—Remark by Superior officer about his subordinates.

A superior officer has a qualified privilege to comment upon the conduct of his subordinate. Even if the remarks about the conduct of the subordinate are incorrect they are privileged unless they are malicious. ('51) 1951 All L Jour 268 : AIR 1953 All 302 (306) (Pt E) (Pr 19) (DB).

——Publication of defamatory remarks by an official when privileged.

A privileged occasion is, in reference to qualified privilege, an occasion where the person who makes a communication has an interest or a duty, legal, social, or moral, to make it to the person to whom it is so made has a corresponding interest or duty to receive it. 1917 A C 309, Rel. on.

Hence the publication of defamatory remarks made by a superior officer about the conduct of his subordinate would not in the absence of malice, be actionable if the publication is made in the performance of his duty.

When an official act is to be performed, naturally it must necessarily pass through the hands of subordinates. Publication to such subordinates is always privileged. (1951) 1951 All LJ 268: AIR 1953 All 302 (306) (Pt G) (Prs 20, 21) (DB).

——Defamation of rival by way of retaliation if permissible.

Even where a person is defamed, and the law gives him an opportunity to defend himself, he may publish such matters as will clear his own conduct. But the privilege does not extend to defame one's opponent if such defamation does not clear his own conduct. Therefore, defamation of one's rival carried out by way of retaliation is not permissible. (1951) 1951 All L J 268 : AIR 1953 All 302 (307) (Pt H) (Pr 28) (DB).

——Defamation—Privilege—Statements made before Police Officer in course of investigation—(Evidence Act (1872), S. 124).

A statement if made before an officer who was not acting in a judicial capacity or who was not exercising the attributes of a Court, cannot be said to be absolutely privileged. Hence the defamatory statements made before the Police Officer in the course of the investigation carried on under Criminal P. C., cannot be regarded as absolutely privileged, but only a qualified privilege attaches to them which is liable to be destroyed by proof of malice. A I R 1943 Bom 167, Foll.; AIR 1939 Cal 477 and AIR 1926 Mad 521, Not approved. That the statements were made with full knowledge that those statements were untrue is a conclusive proof of malice. 61 Bom L R 143 : 1959 Nag L J 128 : I L R (1959) Bom 405 : AIR 1959 Bom 443 (446) (Pr 15).

——Libel and defamation — Qualified privilege, defence of.

When a person publishes statements which are false in fact and injurious to the character of another, the law regards such publication as malicious and therefore actionable, but in a case where such statements are fairly made by a person in the discharge of some public or private duty, whether legal or moral, or in the conduct of his own affairs, in matters where his interest is concerned, the occasion rebuts or rather excludes the initial presumption of malice and throws upon the plaintiff the burden of proving malice in fact. In other words, the defendant must first prove that the occasion on which the statement was made was in fact of the above character and therefore privileged, but once he proves it, he can claim that the statement, although untrue and libellous, is protected by the privilege. A privileged occasion is an occasion where the person who makes a communication has an interest, or a duty, legal, social or moral, to make it to the person to whom it is made, and the person to whom it is so made has a corresponding interest or duty to receive it. The reciprocity is essential.

No special privilege attaches to the position of a newspaper. AIR 1955 N U C (Cal) 407 (DB).

——Defamation — Suit for damages on account of defamation — Defence may be of qualified or absolute priviiege — Scope of qualified and absolute privilege.

Held, that the defence of privilege was of two kinds; (1) Absolute privilege and (2) qualified privilege. Absolute privilege was concerned with speeches made in Houses of Legislature and also extended to Judges, Jurors, Advocates and witnesses. The instant case was of qualified privilege. As a generel rule, the publication of information injurious to the character of any one was considered by law as malicious, unless it was fairly made by a person in discharge of some public or private duty, whether legal or moral, or in the conduct of his own affairs, in matter where his interest was concerned. A qualified privilege was, therefore, one where generally speaking no one had a right to defame any one, unless such defamatory statement was warranted by any reasonable occasion or exigency and was honestly made. Such communications were protected for the common convenience and welfare of the society. 1965 M P L J (Notes) 61.

——Defamation—Absolute privilege.

The defendant sent a petition to the Deputy Inspector-General of Police containing allegations about some ancient history as to the affairs in the village and the part which the plaintiffs took in the village matters without specifying any definite or separate offence which had been committed calling upon the police to investigate and take action. There was no basis for any belief by the defendant that he was making these statements with a view to repeat them on oath at a subsequent judicial proceeding to be taken by the Deputy Inspector-General of Police on his petition. The allegations in the petition were enquired into and found to be false and frivolous. The plaintiffs thereupon brought an action against the defendant. The defendant pleaded absolute privilege in defence.

Held, that the petition could not be considered to be a petition whereon action was sought to be taken under S. 107, Criminal P. C., and that the defendant was not free from liability for damages. The plea of absolute privilege was unsustainable. 1957 Mad W N 239 (2) : (1957) 2 Mad L J 71 : A I R 1957 Mad 756 (758) (Pr 6).

——Defamation — Special privilege — Publication of news item by newspaper — (Constitution of India, Art. 19 (1) (a)).

According to the common law in England, which is also the law of the various States of America, subject to statutory modifications, the publication of a news item in a newspaper is not subject to any exceptional privilege. No doubt the law of libel recognises absolute privilege in some cases and qualified privilege in other cases. Under the common law the newspapers have no absolute privilege with regard to the publication of any matter excepting complete and accurate copies of parliamentary papers. A qualified privilege is accorded to the reports of proceedings in Parliament, of meetings of local authorities and other public meetings, and of judicial proceedings but there is no such privilege in respect of news. In India the same principles would apply. 1956 Nag L J 586: 1956 M P L J 66 : I L R (1956) Nag 439 : A I R 1957 Nag 19 (23) (Pt A) (Prs 13, 14) (DB).

——Defamation — Privilege — Absolute privilege — Conditions.

The occasions of absolute privilege as defence to an action for defamation may be classed as the administration of justice proceedings in Parliament and advising the State in affairs of State, this last-mentioned category :extending to communications between officers of State in relation to State affairs. The plea of 'absolute privilege,' therefore is available for example in respect of any statement made in the course of and with reference to judicial proceedings by any Judge jurymen, party, witness or advocate. Such privilege is called 'judicial privilege' and 'professional privilege'. 1961 B L J R 554 : I L R 40 Pat 84 : AIR 1961 Pat 164 (168) (Pt A) (Pr 28).

——Defamation — Privilege — Absolute privilege — Judicial privilege—Extent of.

Judicial privilege applies not only to all kinds of Courts of justice but also to other tribunals recognised by law and acting judicially. The privilege although it extends to tribunals acting in a manner similar to Courts of Justice does not, however apply to tribunals which merely discharge administrative functions or to officials possessing merely administrative functions. The privilege attaches not merely to proceedings at the trial but also to proceedings which are essentially steps in judicial proceedings. The privilege also applies to officers of Court who have a duty to report in the course of judicial proceedings. 1961 B L J R 554 : ILR 40 Pat 84 : AIR 1961 Pat 164 (168) (Pt B) (Pr 29).

——Defamation— Privilege — Qualified privilege — What is — Onus —Pleadings.

Privilege is qualified where the defendant is entitled to make the statement even if it is false but only if he makes it honestly with respect to what he states and carefully with respect to the means by which he states it. Qualified privilege exists when the defendant is exempted from the rule of strict liability for defamation not absolutely but only conditionally on the absence of malice. Qualified privilege, therefore; is an intermediate case between total absence of privilege and the presence of absolute privilege. The privilege extends only to a communication upon the subject with respect to which the privilege exists.

A statement made in the performance of a duty is conditionally privileged if it is made in the performance of any legal or moral duty imposed upon the person making it provided that the person to whom the statement is made has a corresponding interest or duty to receive it. A statement made in the protection of an interest even when there is no duty to make the statement is nevertheless privileged if it is made in the protection of some lawful interest of the person making it; for example if it is made in the defence of his own property or reputation. There must be a interest to be protected on one side and a duty to protect it on the other. It is for the defendant to prove the facts and circumstances which establish that the occasion was privileged. If he does so the burden of showing actual or express malice rests upon the plaintiff. 1961 B L J R 554 : I L R 40 Pat 84 : AIR 1961 Pat 164 (169, 171 to 174) (Pt C) (Prs 39, 56 to 60, 73, 74, 82, 91).

——Defamation — Privilege — Statement made in reply to notice of action.

The statement is protected if it is fairly made by a person in the discharge of some public or private duty whether legal or moral; or in the conduct of his own affairs in matters where his interest is concerned. If fairly warranted by any reasonable occasion or exigency, and honestly made such communications are protected for the common convenience and welfare of society and the law has not restricted the right to make them within any narrow limits.

Certain statements though by themselves libellous were made by the defendant in answer to the notice given by the plaintiffs that it was the defendant who got them arrested and that not only without any reasonable and probable cause but also maliciously and as such he was liable to pay damages for the same.

Held, that the statements were made on a privileged occasion and therefore the defendant was not liable for defamation. Here the privilege arose for two reasons; firstly for the reason that the statements were made in the performance of a duty, and secondly that they were made in the protection of interest; and it could not be denied that in either case reciprocity was there as contemplated in law. Further though it is true that in the case of qualified privilage as was the case here it can constitute protection only if the statements were made honestly and without any indirect or improper motive but here there was no evidence that the statement made in reply to the notice was made either dishonestly or with any indirect or improper motive and not only with an honest intention to be consistent with what had already been stated in the F. I. R. AIR 1959 Pat 490 (498) (Pt E) (Pr 16).

——Privilege—Members of Legislative Assembly and Parliament—Absolute privilege in regard to statements made in the House — Privilege does not extend to their repetition outside the House either by members or third persons. See Penal Code (1860), S. 499. 1961 (1) Cri L J 710 : AIR 1961 Punj 215.

——Defamation — Absolute privilege — Report to Police.

Privilege is of two kinds: (1) absolute privilege and (2) qualified privilege. The plea of absolute privilege means that by a sort of legal fiction law owing to compelling considerations of public policy invests statements made upon certain occasions with a special protection so that all statements made on such occasions, even though they may be defamatory cannot be made the subject-matter of litigation in Courts of law and no action for defamation will lie in respect of them. As to a qualified privilege a communication is said to be so privileged if it is made by a person in discharge of some duty whether public or private of a legal moral or social character or having an interest to be protected to a person who has some interest in receiving it or to a person honestly believed to have a duty to protect that interest. Such communications where they are fairly warranted by any reasonable occasion or exigency are also protected for the common convenience and welfare of the society. It may also be pointed out that a plea of qualified privilege can always be defeated by proving malice, that is malice actual or in fact. A statement made by a party in his report or complaint to the police is absolutely privileged. The doctrine of absolute privilege forbids any inquiry into the motives of the persons who made the complaint. 1959 Raj L W 222 : ILR (1959) 2 Raj 498 : A I R 1959 Raj 169 (170, 171 to 175) (Pt A) (Prs 6, 17, 20, 22, 23, 26, 29).

——Defamation—Privilege.

The defence of privilege is of two kinds; first, an absolute privilege, and secondly, a qualified privilege. The term 'privilege' is used in the sense of an excuse or immunity conferred by law on certain statements or communications made on certain occasions which are called 'privileged occasions'. These are occasions when a person has a duty or interest in making certain statements to some person or persons having a corresponding duty or interest. In the case of an absolute privilege, once such a privilege is established there is an end of the matter and thereafter it is not open to the plaintiff to negative the privilege by establishing malice on the part of the defendant. In the case of a qualified privilege, the demands of public policy are not so high and the exigencies demand that protection should be afforded only so long as such persons are not proved to have acted maliciously or from an improper motive. ILR (1958) 8 Raj 681 : 1959 Raj L W 247 : AIR 1958 Raj 257 (259, 260) (Pt C) (Prs 8, 9).

——Defamation — Qualified privilege — Slanderous statement by Patels of community while caste dispute was pending before Court — Good faith and honest belief of makers.

In order to claim the privilege, the defendants have to prove that there was a privileged occasion on which they had a duty or interest in making the communication to a person or persons who had the corresponding duty or interest to receive it, and the communication was relevant or pertinent to the occasion. If that is established, then it is for the plaintiff to prove malice of the defendants in making the statement, by malice being meant an improper motive.

Where in a caste dispute between husband and wife, pending before a Court, the Patels of the community to which the parties belonged, including some of the persons nominated by the State for being called upon to assist the Court in deciding caste disputes, send a slanderous statement against the husband to the Court before they were called upon to assist the Court, the statement cannot be said to have been made on privileged occasion.

If the occasion is not lawful then it is immaterial whether the person making the statement was the headman of the estate or a member, and had in that capacity a legal or moral duty to speak. 8 Sau L R 27 : AIR 1955 Sau 110 (111 to 113) (Prs 2, 3, 6, 8) (DB).

9 (K). Publication.

——Defamation—Publication—Privileged, communication — Resolutions passed at meeting—Reading of minutes at subsequent meeting — Effect. AIR 1957 All 219 (230, 231) (Pt E) (Prs 48, 52, 54).

——Libel and defamation—Publication libellous in regard to personal capacity of plaintiff.

Personal capacity of a person is not limited to his character as an individual in private life, but comprises also his personal conduct in relation to the affairs of associations or concerns with which he may be connected. Where the publication represented the plaintiff as a person who has been guilty of trickery and employment of hirelings in conducting the affairs of the Union of which she was the President, and who had also been responsible for acts or violence, including daylight robbery, while outwardly professing to subscribe to the creed of the Congress Labour Organization, the publication is not only defamatory of her, as regards her personal conduct in relation to her duties as the President of the Union, but it also defames her as regards her general character on which such allegations are bound to react. AIR 1955 NUC (Cal) 407 (DB).

——Defamation—Publication.

The word "publish' means to make known to others. Though in common parlance the word 'publication' is usually understood in the sense of making the contents known to the public, yet the meaning of this expression is not so limited in law. When the report was made to the police. it was certainly made known to persons other than the plaintiff and this was sufficient publication in the legal sense. 1959 Raj L W 222 : ILR (1959) 9 Raj 498 : AIR 1959 Raj 169 (175) (Pt B) (Pr 28).

——Highway — Access to — Interference — Owner of land abutting public Highway—Right of access—Extent of.

The owner of a land which is contiguous to a public highway has a right of access to the highway from his land and vice versa at any point along the line of contact and that right cannot be interfered with though he may have fenced his land off or raised a wall for his convenience.

Where the construction made on a part of the public street did not prevent the owner of the adjoining land from stepping into the highway at any point from his premises but he complained of the construction because it prevented him from using the entire width of the road at the point where it stood.

Held, that the right of access into the highway is different from the right of user of the public highway. The former was a private right and the latter a public one. As the construction left unaffected the portion of the road immediately abutting on the premises, the plaintiff had access to every bit of the highway. Therefore it could not be held that his right was in any way interfered with. (1957) 2 Andh W R 546 : 1957 Andh L T 930 : AIR 1958 Andh Pra 586 (590) (Pt B) (Prs 17a and 19) (DB).

——Owner of property adjoining highway—Interference with his right as such owner — Suit for injunction — Estoppel — (Evidence Act (1872), S. 115).

When a party having a right stands by and sees another dealing with the property in a manner inconsistent with that right and makes no objection while the act is in progress, he loses the remedy by injunction which he would otherwise have. Where the owner of property adjoining a highway actively participated in the joint endeavour of the locality to establish a shrine on a part of the road abutting on his premises and consciously stood by for a period of 10 years when the institution gradually progressed and thereafter upon a misunderstanding arising with the other sponsors complained that the shrine and its structures constituted a source of damage to his property and person.

Held, that the owner who was an active participant in the encroachment and who stood by for a long period of time had so acquiesced in the act and was so guilty of laches that he would not be entitled to any equitable relief. (1957) 2 Andh W R 546 : 1957 Andh L T 930 : AIR 1958 Andh Pra 586 (592) (Pt E) (Prs 30, 31) (DB).

12. Joint Tort-feasors.

——Joint tortfeasors — Liability — (Married Women and Tort-feasors Act, 1935 (25 and 26 Geo. V. C. 30), S. 6 (1) (b)).

There is no statutory law of torts in India. The Courts here act on the principle of equity, justice and good conscience in matters which are not covered by statute and rely upon the principles established under the English law to find out what the rule of justice, equity and good conscience is. Any technical rule or statutory law of England is not, as such considered to be based on the principle of equity, justice or good conscience. unless it appears to be so to the judge deciding the case. The rule of law indicated in Cl. 6 (1) (b) is not necessarily based on any principle of equity, justice or good conscience.

There is no justifiable reason why in the subsequent suit, if more than one suit is brought for damages against different persons, the plaintiff should be restricted to the amount decreed against one joint tortfeasor in his suit against the other joint tortfeasors against whom the cause of action is not only joint but joint and several. ing locked up by N and he alone must be held responsible. AIR 1955 All 594 (595) (Pt B) (Pr 6) (DB).

●——Joint tort-feasors — Contribution — Rule in Merryweather v. Nixon—Applicability of, to cases in India—Contract Act (1872), S. 43.

Per Full Bench—The rule laid down in the English case of Merryweather v. Nixon, which is formulated in these terms, namely, there is no contribution among joint tort-feasors and wrong doers, has no application to cases arising in India, A I R 1932 All 334, Overruled: A I R 1932 Mad 1 Not Appr. Case Law discussed.

Per Wali Ullah, J.—After a decree has been obtained against two or more tortfeasors, which imposes a joint and several liability upon each one of the judgment-debtors, if one of them is made to pay the entire amount of the decree, justice and fairplay require that he should be able to share the burden with his compeers, i.e, the other joint judgment-debtors. Further, a tortfeasor may recover contribution from any other tortfeasor who is, or would, if sued, have been liable in respect of the same damage, whether as a joint tortfeasor or otherwise. The question whether contribution is actually recoverable and, if so, in what proportion, would necessarily depend on various factors and principally on the facts of the particular case. Apportionment of the entire liability is to be made in such proportions as the Court thinks just and equitable having regard to the extent of the moral responsibility of the parties concerned for the damage caused.

Per Agarwal J.: — Even in the case of conscious tortfeasors, contribution should be allowed where the facts warrant the same. This should be so whether a joint decree has been passed against the joint tortfeasors or not. Contribution is to be allowed as between conscious tortfeasors not upon the principle of implied agreement but upon equitable considerations. The mode of calculating the amount of contribution depends upon the facts of each case. Dharni Dhar v. 13. Liability.

——Liability of Government for wrong orders passed by Courts of Justice — (Master and Servant)—(Bengal Regulation (11 of 1822), S. 38),

The Government is not liable for orders passed by Courts of justice. The reason is obvious. Although the presiding officers of the Courts of Justice may be Government servants in the sense that their salaries are paid by Government and their appointment and removal rest with the Government, yet it goes without saying that once appointed they are independent of the Government. The Government cannot dictate, nor even suggest to them in what manner they should decide a particular case. Since they are totally independent of the Government in the discharge of their duties, the Government is not liable for their acts on the ground that it cannot control the said acts. This principle has received statutory recognition in S. 38 of Bengal Regulation (11 of 1822). The holding of a patni sale by a Collector is an act done by an officer of the Government in the exercise of powers conferred on him by the Patni Regulation and done in the course of his official duties. It is not a private enterprise by the Crown nor an act by which the Crown, acting as such, invades for its own purposes lands or goods or money belonging to a subject. Hence, where the Collector negligently pays out of the sale proceeds of a patni-sale a certain sum to an attaching creditor of the defaulting patni holder, the superior landlord who is entitled to the proceeds cannot sue the Government for damages for negligent act of the Collector. 51 C W N 537 : ('47) ILR (1947) 2 Cal 141 (149) (DB).

—Liability of Crown for acts of its servants—Present position in India—Immunity of State for tortious acts—Exceptions to—(Constitution of India, Arts. 294 (b) and 300).

Per Ahmed, J.—It is true that in England common law does not recognise an action against Crown on the principle either that 'the King can do no wrong' or that the King cannot be sued in his own Court. There the liabilities against Crown under common law are enforced only on a Petition of Right, which extends to detention of the land, chattels or money of the subject, and also to breach of contract. The law on the subject in India is, however, in many respects different.

The general immunity of the State in India in the field of torts has been put to at least three broad exceptions and in those cases the State is liable to an action in Courts for the tortious liabilities of its servants. They are as follows :

(1) Where the act complained of is done in the conduct of undertakings which might be carried on without having sovereign power delegated to it. That is the State is liable for the negligence of its employees in the course of their employment in the same way as any private employer in a similar case, where the act complained of is of a private nature and not done in the exercise of powers usually called sovereign or Governmental power or in the performance of an act of State. 5 Bom H C App 1 and 40 Cal 391, (PC), Ref. to.

(2) Where the acts complained of consist in detention by the State of land, goods or chattels belonging to the subject though in fact those acts are done by the officers of the State in the exercise of power given to them under the municipal law. In cases of this class the subject has a right to maintain an action against the State which in England, is done by Petition of Right. The acts done in the exercise of sovereign power are broadly divisible into two groups—(i) the first covering the acts of State properly so called, such as, making a treaty, commandeering private property for war purposes, or quelling civil disturbances by force, over which the Court has no jurisdiction—as regards which the agent is protected as well as the principal and (ii) the second covering the acts done under colour of municipal law as to which the agent at any rate is always responsible. These acts done under colour of municipal law are again divisible into two sub-groups—(1) those consisting in detention, by the Crown, of land, goods or chattels belonging to the subject and (2) those done by officers of the Crown in the discharge of their official duties. The former, as stated above, constitutes the second exception to the general rule. 51 Cal W N 537, Ref. to.

(3) As a rule acts falling in the second sub-group done by the servants in the discharge of their duties imposed upon them by the municipal law do not constitute a liability for action against the State on the principle that in exercising such authority or in exceeding it they cannot be considered to have been the agents of the authority appointing them so as to render the latter liable. In such cases neither the doctrine of 'Respondeat Superior' apply. In cases of this class even ratification by the State would make no difference, because there can be no ratification unless the act is done on behalf of the principal in the first instance. But where it is proved that the impugned act has been expressly authorised by the State or that the State has been profited by its performance, the State will not be left immune from an action for the liability arising from them. They, therefore, constitute the third exception to the rule. 1954 Cri L J 1593 : ILR :33 Pat 603 : AIR 1954 Pat 513 (517, 518) (Pt A) (Prs 14, 15) (DB).

—Damages — Malicious detention — Chaining of undertrial prisoner to window bars in hospital during medical treatment — Trial and acquittal — Suit for trespass to person — Act when mala fide and malicious — Limitation for suit, under S. 53, Madras District Police Act (1959).

The plaintiff claimed damages from a police officer in action for a tort for trespass on his person on the ground, that the trespass was mala fide and malicious. The fact was that the police officer had kept the plaintiff, when he was an undertrial prisoner in handcuff when he was undergoing treatment in the hospital and chained him to a window like a ferocious animal. In the criminal trial the plaintiff was ultimately acquitted. The defence in the suit was that he bona fide followed the instructions of his superiors and certain rules to prevent his escape.

Held, that, with reference to the commission of a tort of the character a motive or intention need not be attributed; that if the officer exceeded and abused his authority, the act would be malicious and mala fide unless it is established that circumstances justified the use of the power. That the use of handcuffs and chaining of the plaintiff, an undertrial prisoner, like a ferocious animal was not justified, even upon literal interpretation of O. 666 of the Madras Police Standing Orders, Chap. 31, p. 423 in Vol. I (1960 Edn.) Held, further: that the protection under S. 53 of the Madras District Police Act, 1959, barring suits filed after three months of the date of the cause of action would include acts done or intended to be done under the provisions of the Police Act and also acts done or intended to be done under the provisions of any other Act conferring powers on the police but not when the act is outside the ambit altogether. A distinction can be drawn between the acts done without judicial sanction and acts done under judicial sanction which is improperly obtained, where defendants by obtaining an order of injunction from a Court on false and baseless allegations cause injury to the plaintiffs property the injury is the direct and proximate result of the defendants action in obtaining the order of injunction on wholly improper and unjustifiable grounds. 16. Malicious prosecution.

——Malicious prosecution, suit for — Meaning of — Application under S. 107, Criminal P. C. may be basis of — Test of damage sustained.

An application filed against a party making false and malicious allegations of breach of the peace by the latter for the purpose of initiating proceedings under S. 107 of the Criminal P. C,, against him, amounts to a prosecution for which damages may be claimed. Such an application may be made the foundation of a suit for damages for malicious prosecution. The proceedings on the application must, however, reach a stage at which damage to the plaintiff results. 17 C W N 554; 19 C W N 935 and 51 C W N 723, Rel. on.

Thus where in an application against the plaintiff to initiate proceedings under S. 107, Criminal P. C. the plaintiff was directed by the Magistrate to show cause and he did show cause; he had to appear before the Magistrate and incur costs for appearance and showing cause, the plaintiff must be held to have sustained damage. ILR (1959) 2 Cal 395.

——Magistrate's finding in favour of defendant — Effect.

Even though the Magistrate may have arrived at a finding in favour of the defendant, Civil Courts have got to reach their own conclusions in decreeing the suits for damages for malicious prosecution. The burden of proof in such cases is always on the plaintiff. ILR (1952) Hyd 709: AIR 1953 Hyd 215 (218) (Pt C) (Pr 16) (DB).

——Malicious prosecution — Essentials — Effect of dismissal of criminal case.

There is no presumption with respect to criminal proceedings that they were wrongly taken, if the proceedings fail in a Court of law. It is therefore, necessary for the plaintiff in a suit for malicious prosecution to prove not only that he has been declared innocent, but that he must also show that there was no probable or reasonable cause for the complainant to have started proceedings in the case. 12 J & K L R 67: AIR 1953 J & K 20 (21) (Pr 3).

——Malicious prosecution—Essentials—Proceedings under S. 13, Legal Practitioners Act—Nature.

The foundation of the action for a malicious prosecution lies in abuse of the process of the Court by wrongfully setting the law in motion and it is designed to discourage the perversion of the machinery of justice for an improper purpose. The plaintiff must prove that the proceedings instituted against him were malicious, without reasonable and probable cause. that they terminated in his favour (if that be possible), and that he has suffered damage. Damages might be claimed in such an action under three heads (i) damage to the person, (ii) damage to property, and (iii) damage to reputation. The word 'prosecution' in the title of the action is not used in the technical sense which it bears in criminal law. AIR 1947 P C 108, Rel. on. Proceedings under S. 13 of the Legal Practitioners Act are not purely of a civil nature but are quasi-criminal in nature. Therefore, even if costs are awarded in proceedings under that section, the reputation of a legal practitioner cannot be said to be re-established by the award of costs. 1960 M P L J 243 : 1960 M P C 138 : 1960 Jab L J 298 : 1960 Cri L J 829 : ILR (1959) Madh Pra 544 : AIR 1960 Madh Pra 171 (173) (Pt A) (Prs 7, 9) (DB).

——Malicious prosecution — Suit for damages — When lies — Proof required—"Prosecution"—Malice — "Reasonable and probable cause"—Tests — Judgment in criminal case — Value of — (Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 33, 157 and 158).

The action for damages for malicious prosecution is part of the common law of England. In India, the law on the subject is exactly the same as the law in England and the U. S. A. The foundation of the action for damages for malicious prosecution lies in the abuse of the process of the Court by wrongfully setting the law in motion and it is designed to discourage the perversion of the mchinery of the justice for an improper purpose. The gist of the action is the putting of legal process in force.

To render one liable for malicious prosecution it must appear that he has proximate and efficient cause of putting the law in motion; some affirmative action in connection with the prosecution must be shown,

In order to succeed in a suit for malicious prosecution, the second essential is that the plaintiff must establish that his prosecution by the defendant ended in his favour. A prosecution may end favourably not only by acquittal but also end favourably by discharge, discontinuance of the proceedings excepting where it is due to the possibility or impracticability of bringing the accused to trial on dismissal of the complaint. The plaintiff must show that the defendant prosecuted him without reasonable and probable cause. AIR 1957 Mad 646 (652 to 657) (Pt A) (Prs 19 to 31, 35) (DB).

——Malicious prosecution—Withdrawal of criminal proceedings due to settlement how far defence.

Where the prosecution launched was withdrawn due to settlement, the accused could not make a claim for damages for malicious prosecution. But in order to so bar him the settlement must have been one between him and the prosecutor in pursuance of which the prosecution was withdrawn. Therefore where the prosecution was withdrawn as a result of settlement between the prosecutor and one of several accused, the other accused are not disentitled to make the claim. 1950 Mad W N 145 : (1950) 1 Mad L J 219 : 63 Mad L W 229 : 1950 Mad W N (Cri) 29 : (1950-51) 2 F J R 65 : 51 Cri L J 1563 : AIR 1950 Mad 831 (832) (Pr 3).

AIR 1955 N U C (Orissa) 713.

——Malicious prosecution—Nature of wrong—False imprisonment — Distinction.

As contradistinguished with the wrong of malicious prosecution the wrong of false imprisonment isan action of trespass. In this wrong the injury is always forcible and direct, forcible in the sense of being an act of physical interference with the person or property of another. As such trespass lies for all direct injuries, whether wilful or merely negligent. An action for false imprisonment will lie against any person who authorises or directs the unlawful arrest or detention of the plaintiff by a merely ministerial officer of the law, as distinguished from a judicial officer or Court of justice. Unlike the case of malicious prosecution, it is not necessary for liability that the arrest should have been malicious; it is enough that it was without reasonable and probable cause. The burden of proving the existence of reasonable and probable cause is on the defendant. Where the defendant by making a complaint under S. 420, I. P. C.. to the police against the plaintiff had caused the latter to be arrested by the police and it was not the result, of any judicial order, the claim for malicious prosecution is; wholly misconceived. AIR 1959 Pat 490 (494, 495) (Pt A) (Prs 8, 9).

——Malicious prosecution.

Whenever the law has been set in motion not for the bona fide purpose of vindicating justice, but there is a perversion of the machinery of justice for improper purposes. an action will be maintainable. 1957 B L J R 546 : ILR 36 Pat 786; AIR 1958 Pat 329 (333) (Pt A) (Pr 8a) (DB).

——Malicious prosecution—Ingredients — (Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101 to 103).

Ingredients stated — The co-existence of malice and want of probable cause are essential pre-requisites to the success of an action for malicious prosecution — Malice alone, however great, is insufficient—Want of probable cause cannot be inferred from malice, however great such malice may be but malice may be implied or inferred as a fact from want or probable cause—The question is not what the actual facts were but what the defendant had reason to believe they were. ILR (1954) Punj 8; 55 Punj L R 218; AIR 1953 Punj 213 (213) (Pt A) (Pr 5) (DB).

16(A). Burden of proof.

——Malicious prosecution—Burden of proof.

Both as regards malice and the absence of reasonable and probable cause, the burden of proof lies upon the plaintiff and the questions whether there was malice and whether there was absence of reasonable and probable cause are questions of fact. ('50) 1950 A L J 754 : ILR (1950) All 1310 : AIR 1952 All 554 (557) (Pt B) (Pr 9) (DB).

——Malicious prosecution — Suit for damages — Facts to be eslablished — Onus — "Prosecution" — Test.

In an action for malicious prosecution the plaintiff must show first that he was prosecuted by the defendant that is to say, the law was set in motion against him on a criminal charge; secondly, that the prosecution was determined in his favour; thirdly that it was without reasonable and probable cause; fourthly, that it was malicious. The onus of proving every one of these is on the plaintiff. The question in all cases is who was the prosecutor and the answer must depend on the circumstance of the case. 1956 Andh L T 406 : 1956 Andh W R 530 : AIR 1957 Andh Pra 347 (348, 349) (Prs 5, 11, 12) (DB).

——Malicious prosecution—Burden of proof—Essential facts to be proved.

The plaintiff in order to succeed in a suit for damages for malicious prosecution has to prove, (1) that he was prosecuted by the defendant, (2) that the proceedings complained of terminated in favour of the plaintiff if from their nature they were capable of so terminating, (3) that the prosecution was instituted against him without any reasonable or probable cause, (4) that the prosecution was instituted with a malicious intention, that is, not with the mere intention of carrying the law into effect or in furtherance of justice but with some indirect or improper motive. ILR (1950) 2 Assam 181 : AIR 1950 Assam 101 (105) (Pt C) (Pr 15) (DB).

——Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101 to 103. The onus of proving want of reasonable and probable cause, and of proving the existence of such facts as are evidence of such want. lies on the plaintiff. It is also essential that the plaintiff should give some evidence of the defendant's malice, where it is denied, But if the plaintiff should prove want of probable cause malice may be inferred although want of probable cause is not conclusive evidence of malice. 56 Cal W N 248 : AIR 1952 Cal 242 (243 to 245) (Pt A) (Prs 5, 6).

——Malicious prosecution — Burden of proof—Plaintiff has to prove that defendant invented and instigated whole proceedings for prosecution.

In a suit for damages for malicious prosecution, the question is not whether the plaintiff committed the acts complained of or whether the defendant invented the acts or the offences imputed to the plaintiff, but the question is, whether the plaintiff has proved, that the defendant invented and instigated the whole proceedings for prosecution. AIR 1926 P C 46, Foll. 1964 Ker L J 879 : 1964 Ker L T 602.

——Malicious prosecution — Burden of proof — Absence of reasonable and probable cause — Burden when shifts on defandant.

In a suit for malicious prosecution the burden of proving absence of reasonable and probable cause, a negative, is not static, and may shift to the opposite party. As a matter of law, this is so but then the condition pre-requisite is that "the plaintiff has given such evidence, as if not answered, will entitle him to a veredict". AIR 1957 Mad 646, Rel. on. 1964 Ker L J 879 : 1964 Ker L T 602.

——Malicious prosecution—Suit for—What plaintiff should prove — Prosecution.

In an action for malicious prosecution, the onus is upon the plaintiff to prove (1) that he was prosecuted by the defendant; (2) that the proceedings complained of terminated in favour of the plaintiff, if from their very nature they were capable of so terminating; (3) that the prosecution was instituted against him without any reasonable and probable cause; and (4) that it was due to a malicious intention of the defendant and not with a mere intention to carry the law into effect. In the case of a person who merely gives some information to the Police on the basis of which the Police starts investigation and ultimately lays a charge against the person, who according to them, may be involved in a particular occurrence, it cannot be stated that such a person who merely laid information to the Police, without anything more, can be considered to be a prosecutor unless he misleads the Police by bringing suborned witnesses to support it and influences the Police to assist him in sending an innocent man for trial before the Magistrate. In proper cases, Courts must consider even such a person as a prosecutor and make him liable for damages for malicious prosecution. In such cases the complainant is regarded as a person who had set the law in motion. ILR 30 All 525 (P C), Foll.; AIR 1919 Mad 229 (2) : 37 Mad L J 234, Relied on; ILR 26 Mad 362, Not Foll. 1959 Ker L J 1172 : 1960 Ker L T 312 : ILR (1960) Ker 557 : AIR 1960 Ker 264 (268, 269) (Pt A) (Prs 32, 39).

——Malicious prosecution—Burden of proof — Plaintiff must show that defendant had no reasonable and proboble cause — Facts alleged by defendant not obviously false — Question depending upon inquiry into previous history of subject-matter in dispute and its surroundings — It cannot be said that defendant acted without reasonable and probable cause. 51 Cri L J 418: AIR 1950 Kutch 12 (12) (Prs 5, 6).

——Malicious prosecution — Burden of proof is in plaintiff to prove falsity of case and their innocence, that there was no reasonable and probable cause and that the proceedings were initiated in malicious spirit that is not in furtherance of justice. AIR 1955 N U C (Madh-B) 3342.

——Malicious prosecution—Burden of proof.

In an action for malicious prosecution, the plaintiff has to prove (a) that he was prosecuted by the defendant; (b) that the proceedings complained of terminated in favour of the plaintiff; (c) that the prosecution was instituted without any reasonable and probable cause; and (d) that it was due to a malicious intention. AIR 1926 P C 46, Foll. AIR 1953 Madh B 269 (269) (Pt A) (Pr 3).

——Malicious prosecution—Reasonable and probable cause — Onus.

In a suit for malicious prosecution the onus of proving want of reasonable and probable cause for the prosecution is on the plaintiff and the question of absence of reasonable and probable cause is a question of fact.

Reasonable and probable cause is defined as an honst belief in the guilt of the accused based on a full conviction founded upon reasonable grounds of the existence of a state of circumstances which, assuming them to be true, would reasonably lead any prudent and cautious man, placed in the position of the accused, to the conclusion that the person charged was probably guilty of the crime imputed. 1952 N L J 183, Foll. 1961 M P L J (Notes) 132.

——Malicious prosecution — Burden to prove want of reasonable and probable cause and malice is always on plaintiff—(Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101-104). AIR 1959 Manipur 32 (33) (Pt C) (Pr 8).

——Malicious prosecution — Action for — What plaintiff has to prove—(Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101 to 103).

In an action for malicious prosecution the plaintiff has to prove that (i) he was prosecuted by the defendant; (ii) the proceedings terminated in favour of the plaintiff, if from their nature they were so capable of terminating; (iii) the prosecution was instituted against him without reasonable and probable cause; (iv) it was due to malicious intention of the defendant and not with the intention of carrying the law into effect.

The plaintiff has, in the first place, to give some evidence tending to establish an absence of reasonable and probable cause operating on the mind of the defendant. To do this he must show the circumstances in which the prosecution was instituted. ILR (1955) Nag 872 : 1955 Nag L J 617 : AIR 1955 Nag 265 (267) (Pt A) (Prs 11, 12) (DB).

——Malicious prosecution — Reasonable and probable cause — Onus of proof — Plaintiff must prove absence of such cause.

It is settled law that the initial onus of proving the absence of reasonable and probable cause is on the plaintiff even though this means that he has to prove the negative. It is true that where the criminal case has ended in the acquittal of the accused person and the complainant had claimed to be an eye-witness to the commission of the offence by the accused, slight evidence on the accused's side may suffice to discharge his initial burden. But some evidence on his side is absolutely necessary and he cannot merely rely on the fact that the Magistrate did not take cognizance of the case or that the case ended in the acquittal or discharge of the accused. ILR (1964) Cut 153 : 1964 (2) Cri L J 168 : AIR 1964 Orissa 187 (189) (Pt C) (Pr 9).

——Malicious prosecution — What plaintiff has to prove — Presence of reasonable and probable cause —Onus of proof — Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101 to 104.

In a suit for malicious prosecution, it is incumbent upon the plaintiff to establish that; (i) the proceedings were instituted or continued by the defendant; (ii) the defendant acted without reasonable and probable cause; (iii) the defendants acted maliciously; and (iv) the proceedings terminated in favour of the plaintiff.

The onus of proof regarding the presence of reasonable and probable cause would lie on the defendant where the plaintiff has been acquitted on merits is a criminal complaint filed by the defendant against the plaintiff. S. A. No. 490 of 1950 (Ori.), Foll. AIR 1962 Pat 478, Not. foll. ('63) 29 Cut L T 357.

——Malicious prosecution—Absence of probable and reasonable cause — Onus of proof — Rule as to — (Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101-104).

In an action for malicious prosecution the initial burden of proving the absence of probable and reasonable cause and the existence of malice on the part of the defendant in launching the prosecution against the plaintiff rests on the plaintiff. The burden may shift during the trial and the nature of evidence required to discharge the initial burden depends upon the facts and circumstances of each case. Where the plaintiff has failed to discharge the initial onus of proving the case against the defendant, there is no question of shifting of onus. (General principles stated). 24 Cut L T 421.

——Malicious prosecution — Suit for — Essentials to be proved — Burden to prove that prosecution was instituted without reasonable and probable cause with malicious intention lies upon plaintiff — Onus not shifted even where defendant purports to be an eye-witness to the offence alleged. AIR 1938 Pat 529, held no longer good law. ILR 41 Pat 369 : AIR 1962 Pat 478 (479 to 481) (Prs 3, 4) (DB).

——Malicious prosecution — Burden of proof.

In action for malicious prosecution the burden of proof, in the first instance lies on the plaintiff. He must show not only that he was prosecuted by the defendant, and, that the prosecution terminated in his favour, but also that he suffered damage, and that the defendant acted maliciously, and without reasonable and probable cause. The plaintiff no doubt in proving absence of reasonable and probable cause has to prove a negative, and, in general, need only give slight evidence of such absence. The amount and nature of evidence required to fulfil the initial burden depends upon the facts and circumstances of each case. 1957 B L J R 546 : ILR 36 Pat 786 : AIR 1958 Pat 329 (334, 350, 351) (Pt D) (Prs 15, 162, 163) (DB).

——Malicious prosecution — Essentials to be proved —Onus — (Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101 to 103).

In an action for malicious prosecution the onus is upon the plaintiff to prove (1) that he was prosecuted by the defendant; (2) that the proceedings complained of terminated in favour of the plaintiff; (3) that the prosecution was instituted against him without any reasonable and probable cause; and (4) that it was due to a malicious intention of the defendant and not with a mere intention to carry the law into effect. AIR 1926 P C 46 : 51 M L J 42 and AIR 1944 P C 1 : (1944) 1 M L J 40, Rel. on. AIR 1956 Pat 285 (287) (Pr 3).

——Malicious Prosecution — Suit for damages — Plaintiff's onus of proof to establish that prosecution was false — Extent of — Shifting of onus.

In cases for damages for malicious prosecution though the initial burden would lie on the plaintiff to establish that his prosecution was false and that it was made without any reasonable and probable cause the burden is not particularly heavy on plaintiff. There are many cases where the plaintiff's case is negative, and then very slight evidence on the part of the plaintiff may be sufficient to shift the onus on to the defendant. In such a case after the plaintiff has denied on oath his participation in a particular crime, it is for the defendant to prove by positive evidence that the plaintiff had committed the act complained of. This would be so where the prosecution was based on facts which must have been within the knowledge of the prosecutor. AIR 1959 Raj 37, Foll. 1963 Raj L W 316 : ILR (1963) 13 Raj 801.

If a servant of a statutory body like the municipality has laid the prosecution in the circumstances under which that servant would be liable for damages, then if he had not acted within the scope of his authority and in excess of the powers conferred on him by the statute, then the employer, namely, the statutory body will be equally liable. 1955 Mad W N 133 : 68 Mad L W 317 : (1955) 1 M L J 269 : AIR 1955 Mad 562 (563) (Pt B) (Pr 3).

A suit for damages for malicious prosecution was decreed by the trial Court with costs, but on appeal by the defendants, the decree of the trial Court was reversed and the suit dismissed with costs. The plaintiff died thereafter and his legal representatives filed a second appeal. During the pendency of the second appeal the defendant died and his legal representatives were brought on record. On a preliminary objection raised by the respondents to the hearing of the second appeal founded on the rule actio personalis moritur cum persona:

Held, when the plaintiff respondent in the lower appellate Court died after the decree of that Court there was no right to seek relief in further appeal on the part of his legal representatives. With the decree of the lower appellate Court in reversal of that of the trial Court, the plaintiff lost in appeal what he had gained in the Court of trial. It is as if he were thereafter to agitate the matter with a clean slate, so to say, if he should file a second appeal, and if before he could, file it he died, his legal representatives could not file it after his death because with his death the cause of action personal to him died too. Further, when the defendant-respondent died during the pendency of the second appeal, the right to seek further relief did not survive against his legal representatives. After wiping out of the trial Court's decree by the lower appellate Court's the position was that there was merely an outstanding claim in the second appeal indeterminate in character on the part of the legal representatives of the plaintiff against the respondent after whose death the claim cannot be pursued against his estate since it is only an unliquidated claim which has not been perfected by judgment at the time of the death of the defendant. 1951 Mad W N 330 : 64 Mad L W 291 : (1951) 1 M L J 442 : AIR 1951 Mad 733 (733, 734, 736) (Prs 4, 6, 10).

——Malicious prosecution — Suit for damages — Forum — Court at place where plaintiff was served with summons in criminal case—If part of cause of action.

Even if S. 19 of the Code of Civil Procedure is the statutory provision determining the jurisdiction of the Court within whose jurisdiction a suit for malicious prosecution has to be instituted, the Banglore Court in this case within whose jurisdiction the plaintiff was served with summons in the criminal case commenced by the defendant in the Bombay Court is the Court in which it was competent for the plaintiff to institute his suit. ——Malicious prosecution—Suit for damages—Basis of claim.

Damages claimable in a suit for malicious prosecution may be classed under two heads, namely, (1) solatium for injury to reputation and feelings of the plaintiff and his detention (if any) and consequent suffering and (2) legitimate expenses incurred by him in his defence. Damages under the first head are variable. They may be aggravated or mitigated according to the circumstances of the case. Where both the plaintiff and the defendant were actuated by malicious motives, the Court would be justified in awarding only nominal damages. In a proper case exemplary damages may be awarded. Exemplary damages sometimes called by the rather unpleasant name of vindicative damages—are consolatory rather than penal, resting upon the principle that where there is malice, the mental pain caused to the plaintiff must be taken note of and a solatium awarded for it. AIR 1957 Mad 646 (656) (Pt B) (Pr 34) (DB).

——Malicious prosecution — Damages — No satisfactory evidence to show that sums claimed as defence expenses were actually spent — Assessment of damages.

Although the plaintiffs did not produce any satisfactory evidence that they spent the sums of money which they claimed to have spent in their defence in those Courts, they must have spent some money over their defence in the criminal Courts. Some damages are also awardable to them for the pain and suffering which they had to endure as a result of their having been unjustly prosecuted. 39 Mys L J 754 : AIR 1962 Mys 153 (155) (Pt B) (Pr 17).

——Malicious prosecution—Suit for damages—Facts to be proved.

In order to succeed in an action for damages for malicious prosecution the plaintiff must prove (1) the prosecution by the defendant of a criminal charge against the plaintiff; (2) that the proceedings complained of terminated in his favour if from their nature they were capable of so terminating; (3) that the defendant instituted or carried on such proceedings maliciously; (4) that there was an absence of reasonable and probable cause for such proceedings, and (5) that the plaintiff has suffered damages: Case Law Ref. 1965 Kash L J 64.

——Suit for — Essentials to be proved — 'Malice' — 'Prosecution'—What constitutes.

Held, In an action for malicious prosecution the plaintiff must prove all the following points : (a) that the plaintiff was prosecuted by the defendant; (b) that the prosecution ended in plaintiff's favour; (c) that the defendant acted without reasonable and probable cause; and (d) that the defendant was actuated by malice. The term 'malice' has to be construed as meaning an improper or indirect motive, that is to say, some motive other than a desire to vindicate public justice or a private right. The question as to who is the real prosecutor has to be established irrespective of the fact whether the complaint is by the defendant himself or the prosecution is started at his instance. It is well-settled that instigating a prosecution is something different from the act of giving information on the strength of which a prosecution is commenced by some one else in exercise of his own discretion. 1959 Cri L J 328 : (1959) 1 M L J 135 : 1959 M L J (Cr) 157: A I R 1959 Mad 89 (94 to 96) (Pt A) (Prs 16, 18, 21, 24, 26, 27, 28, 31).

——Malicious prosecution — Foundation of action for damages—Factors to be proved.

The foundation of an action for malicious prosecution lies in abuse of the powers of Court by wrongfully setting the law in motion and it is designed to discourage the perversion of the machinery of justice for an improper purpose. Before a plaintiff can succeed in an action for damages for malicious prosecution, it should be established that — (a) the defendant prosecuted the plaintiff; (b) the prosecution has ended in favour of the plaintiff, (c) the prosecution was without reasonable or probable cause; (d) the defendant was actuated by malice and (e) the plaintiff has suffered special damages or the proceedings are such that in their very nature are calculated to injure his honour or credit. If any one of these elements is lacking the plaintiff cannot succeed in the action. 1958 MLJ (Cr) 58: (1958) 1 Mad L J 79.

16 (D) (i). Judgment of Criminal Court.

——Malicious prosecution—Burden of proof — Innocence of plaintiff — Order of acquittal in criminal trial—Effect.

An order of acquittal in a criminal case does not by itself establish innocence. It merely establishes that the case against the accused is not proved, but merely failure to move the accusation in a criminal case cannot be equated with establishing the innocence of the accused. 1952 N L J 183, Not foll. 1958 Nag L J (Notes) 30.

——Malicious prosecution — Want of reasonable and probale cause—Burden of proof.

Per Division Bench (Khan and Shiv Dayal JJ.):—

In a suit for the recovery of damages for malicious prosecution, the production of the judgment in the criminal case is not sufficient for the plaintiff to discharge the burden of proving want of reasonable and probable cause for the prosecution. Observations in AIR 1952 Nag 310 to the contrary, Dissent. from.

Per Khan J.: — The rule of common law is that the plaintiff is bound to give some evidence, which may prima facie suggest absence of reasonable and probable cause. If he does, the onus then shifts to the defendant to rebut it.

Per Shiv Dayal J.: — The defendant will be deemed to have had reasonable and probable cause for a prosecution where (a) he took reasonable care to inform himself of the true facts; (b) he honestly, although erroneously believed in his information and (c) that information, if true, would have afforded a prima facie case for the prosecution complained of. 1960 Jab L J 509:1960 MPC 545: AIR 1960 Madh Pra 397 (399, 400) (Prs 13, 15, 21, 22, 23) (DB).

——Malicious prosecution — Evidence — Criminal Court judgment — Admissibility of — (Evidence Act (1872), S. 43).

It is not judgment of the criminal Court has to be ignored altogether but it should not be relied upon as conclusive for deciding the civil suit for malicious prosecution. A civil Court has to go into the matter on the evidence adduced before it in the civil suit independently of the view expressed by the criminal Court. The sense in which it is said that the criminal Court judgment is not admissible in evidence is that apart from the fact of the result of the criminal Court judgment, namely, its termination in favour of the accused persons, the observations of the criminal Court or the reasoning on which the order of acquittal is based is not to be accepted as conclusive. 25 Cut L T 366 : A I R 1960 Orissa 29 (31, 32) (Pt B) (Prs 9).

——Malicious prosecution — Proof — Judgment in criminal Court—Admissibility.

It is well settled that in every case of malicious prosecution, the civil Court must hear evidence of both sides and decide for itself independently of the findings of the criminal Court whether or not the prosecution of the plaintiff was without reasonable and probable cause and malicious, and will not take into consideration the judgment or reasons which may have led the criminal Court to an acquittal. It is equally well settled that in such an action, it is no part of the duty of the Judge of the civil Court to criticise the judgment of the criminal Court acquitting the plaintiff. The judgment of the criminal Court is in no way binding upon the civil Court in such a case, and, it cannot be pleaded as a bar to prevent the defendant from proving that the charge made by him against the plaintiff was in fact true. Such a judgment is evidence and, a conclusive evidence, merely to show the acquittal of the plaintiff as a fact in issue. A I R 1936 All 537, Rel. on. But such a judgment is admissible to show who were the witnesses examined by the parties and what documents were produced in that case when the existence of such documents and the non-examination of such witnesses, is challenged in the civil action. 1957 B L J R 546 : I L R 36 Pat 786 : A I R 1958 Pat 329 (348) (Pt L) (Pr 150) (DB).

16 (D) (ii). Malice and absence of reasonable and probable cause.

——Suit for damages — Proof of malice.

In an action for malicious prosecution the plaintiff has to prove (1) that he was innocent and so pronounced by the tribunal before whom the complaint was preferred against him, (2) that there was no reasonable or probable cause for the prosecution, and (3) that the proceedings were initiated in a malicious spirit, that is, from an indirect or improper motive and not in furtherance of justice.

Held : In the absence of the complaint and the judgment of the Court which tried the case ending in the acquittal, it is difficult for any Court of law to find the prosecution was in fact malicious. A I R 1952 Ajmer 36 (1) (36) (Pr 3).

——Malicious prosecution — Suit for damages — Absence of reasonable or probable cause and presence of malice are necessary ingredients — Both must be proved—Finding as to absence of reasonable cause — Malice cannot be presumed — Distinction between absence of reasonable cause and malice. ——Malicious prosecution — Duty of prosecutor — Want of reasonable and probable cause.

The duty of the prosecutor is not to ascertain whether there is any defence. If the prosecutor has honest belief on the materials placed before him in the guilt of the accused and the materials placed before him are such that a reasonable man, in the circumstances of the case, would believe that the accused was guilty, then it cannot be said that there was want of reasonable and probable cause. I L R (1950) All 1310 : 1950 A L J 754 : AIR 1952 All 554 (557, 558) (Pt C) (Prs 12, 14) (DB).

——Malicious prosecution — Malice and want of reasonable cause — Proof of—Onus is on plaintiff — Civil Court must adjudge on evidence before — Evidence in or findings by criminal Court not sufficient.

The burden lies on the plaintiff to establish want of reasonabe and probable cause as well as malice. Malice cannot be inferred from want of reasonable and probable cause. The two elements must coexist.

In an action for malicious prosecution it is not open to the civil Court to rely on the findings recorded by the criminal Court or the evidence adduced before the criminal Court, to reach the conclusion as to the existence of malice and the absence of reasonable and probable cause; but it is incumbent upon the civil Court to examine the evidence adduced before it and adjudge on that evidence irrespective of the views expressed by the criminal Court as to the credibility of witnesses is examined before it or to the findings recorded by the criminal Court. A I R 1925 All 337 and A I R 1945 Bom 320, Rel. on. (1964) 2 Andh W R 148 : 1964 M L J (Cri) 515.

——Malicious prosecution—Ingredients of—Absence of reasonable and probable cause—Burden of proof.

A complaint under S. 408, Penal Code, was filed by A, alleging that A, on behalf of his master G, had booked certain goods for sale at Gauhati and had deputed M, another employee of G, to take delivery of goods and sell them through X who were the agents of G, that M took the delivery of goods and instead of selling through X sold them through J and by showing a bogus sale at lower rates misappropriated the balance. The accused were discharged by the Magistrate. Upon the suit for malicious prosecution brought by J :

Held, that under the circumstances if G bona fide believed that J along with M without any authority sold the goods and misappropriated the balance, it could not be said that he had no reasonable and probable cause to think that J had committed an offence.

Held, also that from the mere fact that the case in the civil Court was different from the one taken in the criminal Court an inference could not be drawn that the facts were known to the complainant at the time when the complaint was filed and they were false to the knowledge of the complainant at that time. (1881) 8 Q B D 167; AIR 1944 P C 1, Rel. on. ILR (1962) 14 Assam 470 : AIR 1962 Assam 129 (131) (Pr 9) (DB).

——Malicious prosecution — Malice — Evidence and proof of.

In actions for malicious prosecution, malice can be proved either by showing what the motive was and that it was wrong, or by showing that the circumstances were such that the prosecution can only be accounted for by imputing some wrong or indirect motive to the prosecution. Salmond on Torts, 13th Edn., pp. 724, 725, Rel. on. Absence of reasonable and probable cause for launching the prosecution may be some evidence of malice. 1964 Ker L J 879 : 1964 Ker L T 602.

——Malicious prosecution — Essentials to be proved —Plaintiff must prove absence of reasonable cause and presence of malice on part of defendant.

The points that require to be proved, in a suit for damages for malicious prosecution are, inter alia, that the defendant launched the prosecution without reasonable and probable cause and that he acted maliciously. 1964 Ker L T 602 : 1964 Ker L J 879.

——Malicious prosecution — Malice and absence of reasonable and probable cause — Onus of proof.

In a suit for damages for malicious prosecution, it is necessary for the plaintiff, inter alia, to prove that the defendant acted without reasonable and probable cause and that the defendant was actuated by malice. Even when plaintiff succeeds in establishing malice of the defendant, in order to make out a cause of action, however, malice and want of reasonable and probable cause must concur. Either is insufficient without the other, and the important question for determination in such a case is whether the defendant acted without reasonable and probable cause when he sent the information leading to prosecution of the plaintiff. The burden of proving the absence of reasonable and probable cause is on the plaintiff.

Held, that the plaintiff had not discharged the burden cast upon him to prove the absence of reasonable and probable cause for the conduct of the defendant. AIR 1944 P C 1, Foll. 1959 Ker L T 1081 : 1959 Ker L R 1141 : 1959 Ker L J 1233: ILR (1959) Ker 1189 : AIR 1960 Ker 131 (132, 133) (Prs 5, 10, 11, 19) (DB).

——Malicious prosecution — Ingredients — Want of reasonable and probable cause — Proof of—Absence of reasonable and probable cause—Inquiry into malice not necessary.

In a suit for malicious prosecution the plaintiff must establish inter alia (1) that the defendant acted without reasonable and probable cause; and (2) that he acted maliciously. The question of reasonable and probable cause depends on the facts as known to the defendant who initiated the prosecution. When the facts upon which the prosecutor acted have been ascertained and when the facts operating on the prosecutor's mind at the time of the prosecution are known then the Court has to determine whether those facts afforded reasonable and probable cause for prosecuting the accused. If these facts do accord reasonable and probable cause then the prosecution would be justified and it would not as a rule be necessary for an inquiry to be made into the prosecutor's belief. The state of his belief goes to malice but not, as a rule to reasonable and probable cause. (1951) 1 All E R 814 and (1952) 1 All E R 1, Rel. on; AIR 1952 Nag 310, Dissented from. ——Suit for damages for malicious prosecution — Want of reasonable and probable cause—Proof.

Reasonable and probable cause is an honest belief in the guilt of the accused based upon a full conviction founded upon reasonable grounds of the existence of a set of circumstances which, assuming them to be true would ordinarily lead a prudent and cautious man placed in the position of the accuser to the conclusion that the person charged was probably guilty of the crime imputed. ——Malicious prosecution — Malice — Inference of, from absence of reasonable and probable cause — (Evidence Act (1872), S. 114).

Malice can be inferred in certain circumstances from absence of reasonable and probable cause. If a prosecution is launched with the knowledge that the accused has committed no offence, a presumption would arise that the prosecution was due to a malicious intention. ——Malicious prosecution — Absence of reasonable and probable cause—Civil P. C. (1908), S. 135.

In execution of a decree which was nearly 15 years old, the decree-holder, who was a senior advocate, sought the arrest of the judgment-debtor by pursuing him with a process server and two others. When the judgment-debtor was stopped on his way and was shown the warrant of arrest. The process-server was apprised of an order granting immunity from arrest under S. 135, Civil P. C. The Process-Server respected the order and did not execute the warrant of arrest. Thereupon the judgment-debtor filed a criminal case against the decree-holder under S. 341 read with S. 109, Penal Code which ended in acquittal. In a suit for damages for malicious prosecution filed by the decree-holder;

Held, that the decree-holder was perfectly within his rights in pursuing the judgment-debtor and in trying to arrest him. The judgment-debtor, in launching a criminal prosecution, acted not only maliciously but without reasonable and probable cause. The plaintiff's suit can, in the circumstances, be decreed. (1960) 26 Cut L T 289.

——Malicious prosecution — Malice — Proof.

One J made a report at the police station that there had been a theft of movable committed in his house in his absence and that his suspicion was against one M and his companions. This report was followed by a house search made by the police but nothing incriminating was recovered. M was a young lad of about 10 years. Evidently the grounds for J's suspicion against M were that the family of M bore ill-will to him and they were his close neighbours.

Held, that these circumstances evidently showed that J had reasonable grounds for the suspicions which he expressed in the report lodged by him. If J had made a definite statement that the theft had been committed by M it could very well be said that he should have proved his bona fides for making that positive assertion; but when he expressed only a suspicion and there were good grounds for that suspicion, it could not be said that J was actuated by malice in making that statement. The statement made by J was a bona fide statement and although he had not entered into the witness-box his statement was privileged and no action for damages could be brought on the basis of that statement. He could not therefore be held liable for damages for this act of the police. The mere non-recovery of any stolen articles from the house of the plaintiffs was also not in itself a conclusive proof of the fact that the plaintiffs had no hand in the theft. All that had to be seen in this case was if these proceedings initiated by a report had been shown to be malicious. I L R (1957) 1 All 501.

——Malicious prosecution — Absence of reasonable and probable cause — Legal malice when to be inferred.

In a particular case it may be possible to infer improper motive from the obvious or the apparent illegality of the action taken. But it is not in every case that because there is absence of reasonable or probable cause for a prosecution that a Judge would be justified in inferring malice. Where there is something more to indicate the existence of indirect or improper motive besides the mere absence of reasonable or probable cause, a finding that the prosecution was malicious would be justified. ILR (1952) 2 Assam 181 : AIR 1950 Assam 101 (105) (Pt D) (Pr 19) (DB).

——Arrest by railway servant.

As to malice, which is an essential ingredient in an action for malicious prosecution, the principle to be followed in a case of arrest by a railway servant under S. 132 of the Railways Act is that which applies to a corporation. In respect of a prosecution initiated by an agent with the principal's authority, express or implied, the malice of the agent will be imputed to the principal. It is on this principle that a corporation is liable to an action for malicious prosecution, although it has no mind and cannot be guilty of malice. 56 Cal W N 248 : AIR 1952 Cal 242 (247) (Pt C) (Pr 10).

——Absence of reasonable cause is no malice—Held that there was reasonable cause.

In order to make a case for damages for malicious prosecution successful, the plaintiff must first establish that he was prosecuted by the defendant. Secondly, he must prove that the proceeding terminated in his favour. Thirdly, the plaintiff must show that his prosecution was without reasonable and probable cause and lastly, he should convince the Court about the prosecution by the defendant being due to a malicious intent, and not with one of carrying law into effect. AIR 1926 PC 46, Rel. on.

Mere absence of reasonable and probable cause does not necessarily mean malice. The Court must come to the conclusion not only that the lodging of the complaint by the defendant was without reasonable and probable cause but he did then entertain no genuine belief in the accusation he was making. ——Malicious prosecution—Malice—What is.

Malice is a legal term which has now acquired a judicial definition. Malice in law in a suit for damages for malicious prosecution means the presence of some improper and wrongful motive, that is to say an intent to use the legal process in question for some other than its legally appointed and appropriate purpose. It means an improper or indirect motive other than a desire to vindicate public justice or a private right. It need not necessarily be a feeling of enmity, spite or ill-will; it may be due to a desire to obtain a collateral advantage. Case Law Ref. (1965) Kash L J 64.

——Malicious prosecution — Requisites — Malice, meaning of.

The plaintiff, in order to succeed in a suit for malicious prosecution, has to prove that the defendant was actuated by malice and that he had acted without reasonable and probable cause. The mere fact that the complaint filed by the defendant against the plaintiff was dismissed and the plaintiff was discharged does not render the defendant liable for malicious prosecution. Malice has been said to mean any wrong or indirect motive but a prosecution is not malicious merely because it is inspired by anger. However wrongheaded a prosecutor may be, if he honestly thinks that the accused has been guilty of a criminal offence he cannot be initiator of a malicious prosecution. AIR 1955 J & K 27 (28) (Pr 4) (DB).

——Malicious prosecution—Malice—Meaning of.

Malice means the presence of some improper and wrongful motive—that is to say, an intent to use the legal process in question for some other than its legally appointed and appropriate purpose. Salmond on Torts, 13th Edn. pp. 724, 725, Rel. on. 1964 Ker L J 879 : 1964 Ker L T 602.

——Malicious prosecution—Malice.

If a person prefers an indictment, or sets the criminal law in motion knowing at the time he did so that he has no reasonable ground for it, that alone is evidence of malice on his part. By the term malice is meant an indirect wrong motive. Any motive other than that of simply instituting a prosecution for the purpose of bringing a person to justice is a malicious motive on the part of the person who acts in that way. Malicious intention is a wish to injure person rather than to vindicate the law. AIR 1932 Bom 259, Foll. 1961 Ker L J 1313 : (1962) 2 Ker L R 649 : 1961 Ker L T 1067.

——Malicious prosecution—Malice.

Malice means wrong or improper motive, that is, motive other than securing ends of justice. If the complaint was a false one, it would have followed that the charge was made maliciously. Where however it is found affirmatively that there was reasonable and probable cause for filing the complaint, it cannot be held that the complaint was filed maliciously. AIR 1954 Kutch 39 (42) (Pt D) (Pr 11).

——Malicious prosecution—Proof of malice.

Malice can be inferred in certain circumstances from absence of reasonable and probable cause. If a prosecution is launched with the knowledge that the accused has committed no offence then whatever may be the motive which actuates the prosecutor, the prosecution would be considered to be due to malicious intention in law. AIR 1953 Madh-B 269 (269) (Pt C) (Pr 3).

——Malicious prosecution—Malice—Proof.

Where the prosecution for criminal breach of trust was being conducted by Assistant Public Prosecutor and the accused was defended by no less than three advocates, from the fact that the complainant also engaged an advocate, with the permission of the Magistrate to assist the Assistant Public Prosecutor it cannot be said that the complainant was actuated by malice and vindictiveness against the accused. AIR 1957 Mad 646 (659) (Pt C) (Pr 44) (DB).

——Malicious prosecution—Malice.

Malice exists unless the predominant wish of the accuser is to vindicate the law. Where the defendant does not believe in the truth of the charge he makes against the plaintiff and there is a long standing feud between the parties, the defendant's predominant motive cannot be to vindicate the law but to humiliate and harass the plaintiff. (1891) 2 Q B 718, Ref. to. 1952 Nag L J 183 : ILR (1953) Nag 529 : AIR 1952 Nag 310 (312) (Pt D) (Pr 9).

——Malicious prosecution—Malice.

Malice does not necessarily connote personal spite or ill-will but only means an indirect or improper motive rather than a desire to vindicate the law. AIR 1938 Pat 529, Foll.

A mere absence of reasonable and probable cause does not justify, as a matter of law, the conclusion that the prosecution was malicious, though it is quite conceivable that the evidence which is sufficient to prove absence of reasonable and probable cause may also establish malice. AIR 1948 Pat 167, Foll. 21 Cut L T 423 : AIR 1955 Orissa 129 (132) (Pt B) (Prs 23, 24) (DB).

——Malicious prosecution—'Malice'—Proof—Prosecution inspired by anger.

Malice and absence of reasonable and probable cause must unite and co-exist in order to produce liability. Where there is such plain lack of reasonable and probable cause that obviously the prosecutor could not have believed in the charge this may itself provide an evidence of malice. A prosecution is malicious only if it is animated by a desire to use the criminal law for some such purpose for which it is not intended. Malicious intention means a wish to injure the party, rather than to vindicate the law. But a prosecution is not malicious merely because it is inspired by anger. However wrong-headed a prosecutor may be, if he honestly thinks that the accused is guilty of a criminal offence, he cannot be called the initiator of a malicious prosecution. 1957 B L J R 546 : I L R 36 Pat 786 : AIR 1958 Pat 329 (336) (Pt I) (Prs 24, 25) (DB).

——Malicious prosecution—Malice.

If the defendant had a reasonable and probable cause for setting the criminal law in motion the mere fact that he might have pursued a civil remedy cannot render him liable for malicious prosecution. ILR (1954) Punj 8 : 55 Punj L R 218 : A I R 1953 Punj 213 (214) (Pt B) (Pr 7) (DB).

——Malicious prosecution—Malice.

Where the prosecutor honestly thinks that the accused has been guilty of a criminal offence, he cannot be initiator of a malicious prosecution. But malice alone is not enough; there must also be shown absence of reasonable and probable cause. ——Malicious abuse of process of Court—A obtaining injunction preventing B from taking possession—Suit by B against A for damages—Maintainability—Proof of malice—(Limitation Act (1908), Art. 109).

Held on facts that the true principle is that where the interference with the plaintiff's possession is by way of valid or regular order of Court, the only action which lies is one of trespass and not trespass simpliciter, and it is necessary to prove malice before the plaintiff can recover damages. (A I R 1944 Cal 289, Rel on.) (2) That by merely avoiding the word "damages" and using the words "loss of profits" the plaintiff cannot make his position any better. Where the essence of the action is the malicious abuse of the process of the Court, it cannot be ignored by merely framing the suit as one for loss of profits on ground of trespass alone, under Art. 109, Limitation Act. AIR 1931 P C 28, Rel. on. (3) That the suit was not therefore maintainable in absence of the proof of malice and want of reasonable and probable cause in obtaining the injunction. 1955 Ker L T 783 : A I R 1956 Trav Co 222 (223) (Prs 5, 6) (DB).

——Malicious prosecution — Damages — Proof of — Prosecution under Municipalities Act.

A person filing a suit for damages for malicious prosecution has to prove that he suffered damages either to his reputation or to his person or to his property. It is not necessary that the proceedings should have been in a criminal Court, even in other cases where such damage has been incurred a suit for damages for malicious prosecution would lie. It is not therefore correct to say that such a suit would not lie merely because the plaintiff has been prosecuted under the Municipalities Act or any other similar Act. In each case, the Courts would have to decide whether there was a likelihood of damage to his reputation, person or property. ('50) 1950 All L J 754 : ILR (1950) All 1310 : A I R 1952 All 554 (558, 559) (Pt D) (Prs 15, 21) (DB).

——Malicious Prosecution—Damages—Person giving information to police when can be held liable for damages.

If a person has done nothing beyond giving information to the police which he considered to be true, an action for damages for malicious prosecution could not be maintained against him. But if besides setting the law in motion he has taken an active part in the conduct of the prosecution he could be regarded as the real prosecutor although the actual prosecution was by the police and rendered himself liable for damages. So also if the complaint made by him was false to his knowledge, if he has misled the police by bringing suborned witnesses in support of his complaint or if he has influenced the police to assist him in sending an innocent man for trial before the Magistrate, it would be highly improper to allow him to escape liability merely because, he has not conducted the prosecution. But merely showing that the complainant knew that the complaint made by him was false would not be sufficient to make him, liable for damages. In order to fix the liability on him, the further facts, that he influenced the police to assist him in sending an innocent man for trial and that he misled the police by bringing suborned witnesses, have to be proved. ——Malicious prosecution — Prosecutor, who is — Person giving information to police resulting in police prosecution — Informant when can be held liable as prosecutor.

A person setting the criminal law in motion may either present a complaint to a Magistrate or give information to a plice-officer or in the case of a non-bailable offence, give information to the village-headman who is bound by law to communicate that information to the nearest police-officer. If the story told to the police is untrue to the knowledge of the person lodging the first information or if he misleads the police in their investigation by bringing in false witnesses, then he would be liable as a prosecutor. If in his first information to the police or complaint to a Magistrate a person positively asserts that another person has committed the offence and the latter is arrested and on inquiry by the Magistrate is discharged, the person lodging the information or the complaint must be held to have started the prosecution. If all that is furnished in a first information report or a complaint is that, on the facts and circumstances truly stated therein, there is an honest suspicion against a person, it cannot be said that the person lodging the first information or making the complaint initiated the prosecution, for all that he had done is to give a mere narration of facts and circumstances from which the police or Magistrate may or may not infer that the person suspected has committed a crime. 26 Mad 362; 12 M L J 389 held not good law in view of 35 I A 189; 18 M L J 394 (PC). 69 Mad L W (Andhra) 3 : 1956 Andh W R 17 : A I R 1956 Andh 174 (175, 176) (Pt A) (Pr 5).

——Malicious prosecution — Prosecutor who is — Person giving information to complainant.

It is now well established, that, if a person does nothing beyond giving information to the police which he considers to be true, an action for damages for malicious prosecution is not maintainable against him. If, on the other hand, besides setting the law in motion he takes an active part in the conduct of the prosecution he will be regarded as the real prosecutor although the actual prosecution is by the police and renders himseff liable for damages. ——Malicious prosecution—Prosecution—Test—Mere filing of false complaint.

The question whether in a particular case there has been a prosecution or not depends on the facts of that particular case. The test is not whether the criminal proceedings have reached a stage at which they may be certainly described as a prosecution, but the test is whether the criminal proceedings have reached a stage at which damages to the plaintiff may result. The mere filing of a false complaint which may fail is not per se such a prosecution. 54 Cal W N 135 : AIR 1950 Cal 259 (260) (Pt B) (Pr 9).

——Malicious prosecution—Prosecutor — Who is — Evidence required.

In an action for malicious prosecution, the first important question is 'who is the prosecutor?'

The fact that a private person, who merely makes a statement or complaint to the police giving out information which he believes to be correct, would not make him 'the prosecutor.' To become prosecutor, he must be actively instrumental in putting the criminal law in motion. Where there is no evidence of the conduct of the private person before and after he made the statement or complaint to the police to show that he was directly responsible for the charge being made, had taken principal part in the conduct of the case and had done all he could do to secure the conviction of the plaintiff in a suit for malicious prosecution, it cannot be said that he was the prosecutor so as to sustain an action against him for malicious prosecution. Madh B L J 1955 H C R 250 : 1955 Cr L J 1078 : Madh B L R 1955 Civil 441 : ILR (1955) Madh Bha 189 : AIR 1955 M B 124 (125, 126) (Prs 4, 6, 8).

——Malicious prosecution — 'Prosecution' — Meaning of.

Held, that it could not be said that the prosecution was started by the informant (defendant), because the res gestae were primarily the discovery by the authorities and not the information given by the informant. But whether or not the defendant was the real prosecutor in the case would not decide the instant case.

The main question was whether the plaintiffs had proved that the defendant invented and instigated the whole proceedings for prosecution. As this was not proved, the plaintiff's suit was bound to fail. As the information given by the defendant turned out to be true, the question whether defendant was prompted by malice or by a genuine desire to vindicate the law was irrelevant : A I R 1952 Nag 310, Disting. 1961 M P L J 263 : 1960 Cr L J 1337 : A I R 1960 Madh Pra 305 (306) (Prs 7 to 10).

——Malicious prosecution — Prosecutor — Liability of informant.

If on the merits the finding is that the person who gave the information which resulted in launching the prosecution had no reasonable and probable cause and was actuated by malice, then a suit against him for malicious prosecution would certainly lie and the mere fact that he has not actually figured in name as a prosecutor would not absolve him from liability if he is really culpable.

Where all that the person had done was to request the Municipal Commissioner to direct the plaintiff to cut and remove the overhanging branches of his trees which were a source of danger to the building in the neighbouring compound, and on failure to comply with the direction of the Commissioner to cut and remove them, the latter filed a complaint against the plaintiff under the Municipal Act, the person cannot be held liable for initiating the criminal prosecution. 1955 Mad W N 133 : 68 Mad L W 317 : (1955) 1 M L J 269 : AIR 1955 Mad 562 (564, 565) (Pt A) (Prs 7, 8).

——Malicious prosecution—Essentials — Prosecution under Municipal Acts.

In order to entitle the plaintiff to claim damages for malicious prosecution the prosecution must have been for an offence of which a conviction would carry reprobation impairing the party's fair fame. It is not enough that the proceedings were penal in form as is the case under many administrative statutes. Prosecution under the municipal Acts or for failure to pay tithe or revenue cannot be deemed to be completely criminal proceedings. They are quasi civil in nature.

Where on failure by the plaintiff to comply with the direction of the Municipal Commissioner to cut and remove the overhanging branches of the trees which were a source of danger to the building in the neighbouring compound, the commissioner files a complaint before magistrate under Ss. 219 (1) and 313 (c), Madras District Municipal Act, there is no slur or odium upon the character and good name of the plaintiff. 1955 Mad W N 133 : 68 Mad L W 317 : (1955) 1 M L J 269 : AIR 1955 Mad 562 (569) (Pt D) (Prs 26, 27).

——Malicious Prosecution—"Prosecution"—Meaning — Word includes proceedings under S. 107 Criminal P. C. — Words and Phrases—"Prosecution". (1963) 1 Mys L J 292.

——Malicious prosecution — 'Prosecution'.

Where the defendant has not gone beyond giving an account of his honest suspicion about the plaintiff to the police, who launched the prosecution without any further interference on his part and there is no evidence that the defendant produced false witnesses to support the prosecution or did anything more to help the prosecution (except giving such honest assistance as was required of him) it cannot be said that it was the defendant who, in effect, prosecuted the plaintiff. 30 All 525 (P C), Foll. 1956 Nag L J 315 : I L R (1956) Nag 236 : AIR 1956 Nag 264 (265) (Pt B) (Pr 8) (DB).

— Malicious prosecution — Employer's liability for malicious prosecution committed by his servant.

Although employers have been held liable for the malicious prosecution committed by their servants, where a servant did not give a false report to the police about an occurrence which led to the prosecution of the plaintiff and there was a reasonable and probable cause for him to do so, the prosecution of the plaintiff is not malicious or wrongful and neither the servant nor his employer is liable for any damages on that account. ——Malicious prosecution — Malicious prosecution by Assistant Station Master — Liability of Dominion of India for tortious acts.

Where an Assistant Station Master prosecuted a person under S. 113, Railways Act, though he was not empowered to do so and charges under Ss. 121 and 122 of the said Act were later on added at his instance out of private malice.

Held, that the Dominion of India was not liable for the tortious acts of the Assistant Station Master. ILR (1955) Nag 872 : (1955) Nag L J 617 : AIR 1955 Nag 265 (268) (Pt D) (Pr 22) (DB).

——Defendant informing that plaintiff incited processionists to loot his shop—Plaintiff found not to be present — Information leading to prosecution — Defendant is prosecutor.

Defendant gave information to the police that when a procession was passing by his shop, plaintiff and others incited the processionists to loot his shop. Plaintiff was prosecuted but acquitted and he then sued defendant for malicious prosecution. The Court found that plaintiff was not present in the procession.

Held, that the information given by defendant to the police was false to his knowledge and he must be regarded as a prosecutor. 31 All 525 (533-534) and 26 Mad 362, Rel. on. 57 Cal 25, Dist. ('52) 1952 Nag L J (Notes) 100,

A mere complaint, not followed by any issue of process or notice under S. 204, Criminal P. C., does not amount to prosecution to form a basis of the suit for malicious prosecution. If the person complained against, voluntarily incurs the risk in attending the enquiry under S. 202, Criminal P. C. arising out of the complaint, the complainant is not liable for the consequence. The test is whether the criminal proceedings have reached the stage at which damage to the person complained against results. ——Malicious prosecution — Information given to police by private person—Prosecutor, who is.

If the defendant gives information of the commission of a cognizable offence and names the accused in that report in consequence of which the police after investigation files a charge-sheet against the person complained against, it can be said that the defendant is the prosecutor. A I R 1953 Orissa 56, Dissent, from.

Where the evidence showed that the defendant made the report which showed that it was based upon his personal knowledge, followed the police and was present during a portion of the investigation, pointed out the plaintiff upon which he was taken into custody, attended the criminal Court during the trial of the case and on one or two days even conducted the prosecution, there is no doubt that the defendant was the prosecutor in the case. 21 Cut L T 423 : AIR 1955 Orissa 129 (132) (Pt A) (Pr 19) (DB).

——Malicious prosecution — Prosecutor who is—Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101 to 103.

The real question is to determine who is the real prosecutor. The mere giving of information, even though it was false, to the police cannot give cause of action to the plaintiff in a suit for malicious prosecution :if the defendant is not proved to be the real prosecutor by establishing that he was taking active part in the prosecution, and that he was primarily and directly responsible for the prosecution. Case law discussed. ILR (1952) Cut 633 : A I R 1953 Orissa 56 (56, 57) (Prs 7, 8, 9).

——Malicious prosecution — 'Prosecution'—Meaning of.

To found an action for damages for malicious prosecution based upon criminal proceedings the test is not whether the criminal proceedings have reached a stage at which they may be correctly described as prosecution; the test is whether such proceedings have reached a stage at which damage to the plaintiff results. The mere presentation of a false complaint which first seeks to set the criminal law in motion will not per se found an action for damages for malicious prosecution. The malicious criminal prosecution, therefore, means instituting unsuccessful criminal proceedings against anyone resulting in damage to him, if the prosecution is inspired by malice and is destitute of any reasonable and probable cause. 1957 B L J R 546 : I L R 36 Pat 786 : A I R 1958 Pat 329 (334) (Pt B) (Pr 9) (DB).

——Malicious prosecution—'Prosecutor'—Who is.

Where as a result of a statement made by A to choukidar on his personal knowledge and as an eye-witness to the occurrence implicating the plaintiff in the murder, the plaintiff was prosecuted for murder, A must be held to be the prosecutor. AIR 1956 Pat 285 (287) (Pt B) (Pr 3)

——Foundation of action — Test—Prosecution when starts in criminal cases.

The foundation of the action for malicious prosecution lies in abuse of the process of the Court by wrongfully setting the law in motion and it is designed to discourage the perversion of the machinery of justice for an improper purpose. In order to succeed the plaintiff must prove that the proceedings were malicious, without reasonable and probable cause, that they terminated in his favour and that he had suffered damage. The word 'prosecution' in the title of the action is not used in the technical sense which it bears in Criminal Law. For the action lies for the malicious prosecution of certain classes of civil proceedings, for instance, falsely and maliciously presenting a petition in bankruptcy or a petition to wind up a company. 11 Q B D 674; 17 C W N 554; 20 C L J 518, Ref. to.

To found an action for malicious prosecution the test is therefore not whether the criminal proceedings have reached a stage at which the magistrate could take cognizance. The test is whether the defendant was actively instrumental in putting the criminal law into force, in other words whether the defendant maliciously set the law in motion through a constituted authority without regard to the technical form in which the charge has been preferred. AIR 1952 Pat 283 (284, 285) (Prs 6, 10) (DB).

——Malicious prosecution—Prosecutor—Liability of informant.

Where criminal proceedings were started against the plaintiffs on the report of the defendant, it cannot be said that no action for malicious prosecution lay against the defendant on the ground that the defendant was not the prosecutor of the plaintiffs. ——Person lodging false information to police and helping police by suborned evidence—Liability.

Where a person by lodging a false information with the police that his money purse was stolen misleads the police to send an innocent man for trial and also supports the complaint by brining suborned witnesses and even engages a pleader to conduct the prosecution, it scarcely lies in his mouth to say that the police and not he himself was the prosecutor so as to escape from the liability to pay damages for the malicious prosecution : 35 I A 189, Foll. AIR 1952 Sau 16 (17) (Pt B) (Pr 4).

——Malicious prosecution — Absence of reasonable and probable cause—Judgment of criminal Court — Relevancy —Burden of proof—(Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101-104).

The judgment of acquittal of the criminal Court can be used only to prove the fact of acquittal and is of no other use in the civil Court. The civil Court must decide the existence of reasonable cause on evidence tendered before it. It is erroneous to say that the judgment of acquittal affords a prima facie proof that the complaint filed in the criminal Court was without reasonable and probable cause and it by itself is enough to shift the burden on to the defendant. ILR (1945) Bom 547 ; AIR 1945 Bom 320; 25 Bom 332 (PC); 56 Mad 641, Rel. on. The burden to prove want of reasonable and probable cause is on the plaintiff. 1958 Nag L J (Notes) 105.

——Malicious prosecution—Reasonable and probable cause—What is.

Reasonable and probable cause may be stated to mean reasonable grounds for suspicion, supported by circumstances sufficiently strong in themselves, to warrant an ordinary prudent and judicial man into the belief that the person charged with a crime was probably guilty of the offence with which he is charged. ——Malicious prosecution — Absence of reasonable and probable cause.

Reasonable and probable cause may be defined to be an honest belief in the guilt of the accused based upon a full conviction, founded upon reasonable grounds, of the existence of a state of circumstances, which assuming them to be true, would reasonably lead any ordinarily prudent and cautious man, placed in the position of the accuser, to the conclusion that the person charged was probably guilty of the crime imputed. ——Malicious prosecution—Reasonable and probable cause—Onus—(Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101 to 103.)

Initial onus of showing want of reasonable and probable cause is on the plaintiff. The fact of the plaintiff's acquittal cannot discharge or shift the onus as from acquittal only a presumption of innocence can be raised. But innocence may wear the aspect of want of reasonable and probable cause if the fact of innocence involves with it other circumstances which show that there was want of reasonable and probable cause. As the judgment of the criminal Court is admissible only to show the fact of acquittal, the plaintiff could have discharged the initial onus by showing that innocence involved with it such circumstances. But innocence is not proved but presumed and like any other rebuttable presumption, it could be rebutted.

Where the story stated by the defendant was true or false to his knowledge as distinguished from information and belief the plaintiff's acquittal raising a presumptive proof of innocence prima facie showed that there was want of reasonable and probale cause and thus shifted the onus on the defendant to show that there existed reasonable and probable cause. So also where it was proved by the plaintiff that he was prosecuted on the allegation that he abused and thus criminally intimidated the defendant on a day, time and place certain and that his defence was that he was not at all present on the said day and the said time and place and that he was acquitted, the plaintiff's acquittal raising a presumptive proof of innocence involved circumstances showing want of reasonable and probable cause. Onus had shifted on the defendant to show existence of reasonable and probable cause.

The onus could be discharged by the defendant by showing that accusation was true. The question of honest belief in the accusation does not arise in such cases. Held, that the lower Court was right in relying on the positive evidence and in holding that there was no absence of reasonable and probable cause. AIR 1954 Kutch 39 (40, 41) (Pt A) (Prs 3, 4, 5, 7, 8, 10).

——Malicious prosecution—Reasonable and probable cause—Determination of—Mixed question of law and fact.

The question of reasonable and probable cause depends on the facts as known to the defendant who initiated the prosecution; the Court has to determine whether those facts afforded reasonable and probable cause for prosecuting the accused. The question whether on certain facts found, the inference about the want of reasonable and probable cause can be drawn is a mixed question of law and fact. 1961 Jab L J 332 : 1961 M P L J 36 : 1961 M P C 419 : ILR (1960) Madh Pra 1008 : AIR 1961 Madh Pra 329 (330 to 332) (Pt B) (Prs 6, 10) (DB).

——Malicious prosecution — Reasonable and probable cause — What is — Nature and extent of enquiry —Question depending on facts.

Reasonable and probable cause means a genuine belief based on reasonable grounds. The issue, therefore, is one of fact which depends upon the circumstances of each case. The question of the nature and the extent of enquiry, which a man should make before launching a prosecution therefore, depends upon the facts of each case. ——Malicious prosecution—Reasonable and probable cause.

The fact that complainant obtained the opinion of counsel as to the propriety of institution of a prosecution will not excuse the defendant if the charge was in fact unreasonable and improbable. Similarly if the charge is unfounded to the knowledge of the complainant he cannot escape liability because the prosecution has not technically been conducted by him. ——Malicious prosecution — 'Reasonable and probable cause' — Charge of more than one offence in a complaint—Standard of proof—Defence.

Reasonable and probable cause means an honest belief in the guilt of the accused based upon a full conviction, found upon reasonable grounds of the existence of a state of circumstances which, assuming them to be true would reasonably lead any ordinarily prudent and cautious man placed in the position of the accused to the conclusion that the person charged was probably guilty of the crime imputed. Where the plaintiff is charged with more than one offence in one complaint, it is sufficient to show that there was no reasonable and probable cause for some of the charges in the complaint, though there may have been such cause for others. 1938 A C 305 and (1881) 8 Q B D 167, Foll. Lack of honest belief would destroy the defence of reasonable and probable cause. When the defendant himself does not support in his evidence the charge he had laid in the complaint, it is sufficient to hold that there is lack of honest belief in him that the plaintiff committed that offence. In such circumstances, it cannot be said that the defendant commenced the prosecution with an honest belief of the plaintiff's guilt. 40 Mys L J 1065 : 1964 (1) Cri L J 247.

——Malicious prosecution — Absence of reasonable and probable cause — Duty of Court to record independent finding.

In a suit for recovery of compensation for malicious prosecution, a fact of acquittal or discharge is a fact in issue and therefore a relevant fact. That being so, an order of discharge or acquittal made by a criminal Court is not only admissible to prove that fact but also for the purpose of ascertaining the circumstances leading to the order of acquittal or discharge. The civil Court before which a suit is instituted for the recovery of compensation for malicious prosecution should independently record a finding whether the person prosecuted was or was not guilty of the offence with which he was charged and whether the prosecution was commenced without reasonable or probable cause. 39 Mys L J 754 : AIR 1962 Mys 153 (154, 155) (Pt A) (Prs 12, 13, 15).

——Malicious Prosecution—Reasonable and probable cause—What is.

Reasonable and probable cause may be defined as an honest belief in the guilt of the accused based upon a full conviction founded upon reasonable grounds, of the existence of a state of circumstances, which assuming them to be true, would reasonably lead any ordinarily prudent and cautious man, placed in the position of the accuser, to the conclusion that the person charged was probably guilty of the crime imputed. 1938 A C 305, Foll. 1952 Nag L J 183 : ILR (1953) Nag 529 : A I R 1952 Nag 310 (311) (Pt A) (Pr 5).

——Malicious Prosecution—Reasonable and probable cause—Burden of proof—Discharge of.

Innocence is proved by proving acquittal in criminal proceedings where the prosecutor must know whether his accusation against the accused is false or true. If the accused is innocent it follows that the prosecutor must be telling a falsehood and there must be a want of reasonable and probable cause. Thus, in this class of case proof of innocence of the accused by production of the judgment in the criminal case is sufficient for the plaintiff to discharge the burden of proving want of reasonable and probable cause for the prosecution. 1952 Nag L J 183 : I L R (1953) Nag 529 : AIR 1952 Nag 310 (312) (Pt B) (Pr 6).

——Malicious prosecution—Reasonable and probable cause — What is — Question is limited to whether defendant bona fide believed that plaintiff committed the offence.

An honest belief in the guilt of the accused based upon a full conviction, founded on reasonable grounds, of the existence of a state of circumstances which, assuming them to be true, would reasonably lead an ordinary, prudent and cautious man placed in the position of the accuser, to the conclusion that the person charged was probably guilty of the crime imputed. The question ultimately does not depend on whether a Court after reviewing the entire evidence and the probabilities of the case would believe as true allegation that the plaintiff had committed the offence alleged against him. The question is a narrower one and is limited to whether on the facts and circumstances, as they appeared to the defendant at that time, he had in good faith believed that it was the plaintiff who committed the alleged offence. I L R (1964) Cut 153; 1964 (2) Cri L J 168: AIR 1964 Orissa 187 (189) (Pt B) (Pr 11).

——Malicious prosecution — Issue not specific on malice but on want of reasonable and probable cause — Concurrent findings on point — Binding — Effect - (Civil P. C. (1908), Ss. 100-101).

Where, in a suit for damages for malicious prosecution, no specific issue was raised as to the malice but the issue was raised as to whether the plaintiff-accused were entitled to damages for want of reasonable and probable cause in instituting the criminal case.

Held, that both these questions as to absence of reasonable and probable cause and malice are questions of fact and not of law. As there were concurrent findings of both the Courts below that there was absence of reasonable and probable cause and that the plaintiffs-accused were prosecuted maliciously and that case ended in acquittal of the plaintiff-accused it was sufficient to hold the defendant-complainant liable for malicious prosecution. The term 'malice' means the presence of some improper and wrongful motive—that is to say, an intent to use the legal process in question for some other than its legally appointed and appropriate purposes. Malice can be presumed from the facts as they transpire from the evidence at the trial. 25 Cut L T 366 : AIR 1960 Orissa 29 (30, 31) (Pt A) (Prs 5, 7).

——Malicious prosecution — Suit for damages — Burden of proof — Complaint based on personal knowledge — Acquittal on merits — Presumption — (Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101-104 and 114).

In a suit for damages for malicious prosecution, where the complaint was made by the defendant-complainant on facts based on his personal knowledge the burden of proof is different from a case where the complaint is based on information believed to be true. In the case of complaint based on personal knowledge if the trial ended in acquittal on merits, there would be a presumption in favour of the plaintiffs that there was no probable and reasonable cause for the accusation. 25 Cut L T 366 : A I R 1960 Orissa 29(33) (Pt C) (Pr 10).

——Malicious prosecution—Reasonable and probable cause.

The question of reasonable and probable cause depends in all cases not upon the actual existence but upon the reasonable bona fide belief in the existence of such a state of things as would amount to a justification of the course pursued in making the accusation complained of, no matter whether his belief arises out of the recollection and memory of the accuser, or out of information furnished to him by another.

It cannot of course be laid down as abstract proposition that an accuser is justified in acting either upon the credited statement of an informant or upon his own memory — The question must always arise according to circumstances whether it was reasonable to trust either the one or the other.

The mind of the prosecutor at the time when he initiated the prosecution is an important factor in determining the existence of reasonable and probable cause. (1936) 2 All E R 1377, Foll.

It is not required of any prosecutor that he must have tested every possible relevant fact before he takes action. ——Malicious prosecution—'Prosecutor'—Who is.

In the case of a police prosecution the question as to who is the prosecutor is a question of fact which depends upon the facts and circumstances of each particular case.

In a suit for damages for malicious prosecution it was proved that the defendants had made statements to police during the course of investigation in a murder case that they suspected the plaintiffs of a criminal offence but apart from these statements there was nothing to show that they had taken any active part in the investigation before the police.

Held, that in the circumstances the defendants could not be said to be prosecutors so as to make them liable to pay damages to the plaintiffs for the tort of malicious prosecution. ILR 30 All 525 (P C), Dist. 1960 B L J R 523 : A I R 1960 Pat 570 (570) (Pr 2) (DB).

——Malicious prosecution — Absence of reasonable and probable cause.

Reasonable and probable cause is an honest belief in the guilt of the accused based upon a full conviction founded upon reasonable grounds of the existence of a state of circumstances which assuming them to be true would reasonably lead any ordinarily prudent and cautious man placed in the position of the accuser to the conclusion that the person charged was probably guilty of the crime imputed. It is well settled that the question of the absence of reasonable and probable cause is for the Judge. At the same time it is clear that the question is one of fact and not law. 1957 B L J R 546 : I L R 36 Pat 786 : A I R 1958 Pat 329 (335) (Pt E) (Prs 16a, 17, 18, 19) (DB).

——Malicious prosecution — Absence of reasonable and probable cause — Innocence of accused — Sufficiency.

It is never true that mere innocence is proof of want of reasonable and probable cause. Innocence per se does not, therefore, raise the presumption as to want of reasonable and probable cause. ——In torts damage is essential ingredient but that element is not necessary in law of master and servant —In law of crimes there are a series of offences based on negligence in which loss or injury is not material – Apart from the question of loss another ingredient is that there must be a duty to take care— Extent of error of judgment in good faith and negligence indicated. See Penal Code (1860), S. 405. 1965 (1) Cri L J 539 : AIR 1965 All 233.

——Relationship—Essentials.

A person is said to be a servant where by agreement express or implied he places himself under the control of another — the master. A person is under the control of another if he is bound to obey the orders of that other not only as to the work which he shall execute but also as to the details of the work and the manner of its execution. 1957 : N L J 100 : 59 Bom L R 267 : A I R 1957 Bom 238 (238) (Pt B) (Pr 5) (DB).

Where the agreement of service provides that the servant may be dismissed summarily for :misconduct without any notice being given to him beforehand and also suggests that some investigation may be made but the nature of the investigation is not indicated it may be an investigation by the employer to inform its own mind and may not be a judicial enquiry. AIR 1953 Cal 581 (585) (Pt D) (Pr 7).

——Master and servant — Railways servant is not servant for all purposes—All principles of law relating to master and servant do not necessarily apply.

Merely because a person may be a railway servant within the meaning of the Railways Act does not necessarily mean that that person is servant for all purposes and that all the principles of law relating to master and servant must apply. A I R 1950 East Punj 40 (51) (Pt G) (Pr 18) (DB).

——Mastsr and Servant — Liability for collateral negligence, explained.

A person employing another is not liable for his collateral negligence unless the relation of master and servant existed between them. On the other hand a person causing to be done, something the doing of which casts on him a duty cannot escape from the responsibility attaching on him of seeing that duty performed, by delegating it to a contractor. ——Master's right to punish — Carelessness on part of employee—Punishment.

It cannot be suggested that carelessness on the part of an employee in relation to his work would not justify serious punishment. A compositor who carelessly places a plus sign instead of a minus sign in a question paper may cause numerous examinees to fail. A compounder in a hospital or chemist's shop who makes up the mixtures or other medicines carelessly may cause quite a few deaths. The man at an air-port who does not carefully filter the petrol poured into a plane may cause it to crash. The railway employee who does not set the points carefully may cause head-on collision. It is axiomatic that when two parties are so moving in relation to one another as to involve a risk of collision, each owes to the other a duty to move with due care no matter whether they both are in control of vehicles, or both are proceeding on foot or whether one is on foot and the other in a moving vehicle. 1963 M P L J 162 : 1963 Jab L J 336 : (1963) 33 Com Cas 667 : I L R (1964) Madh Pra 91 : A I R 1963 Madh Pra 164 (168) (Pt A) (Prs 12, 14) (DB).

● ——Accident of vehicle of transport company due to negligence of driver — Claim for compensation— Driver not impleaded as party — Effect—Civil P. C. (1908), O. 1, R, 10, (Per Division Bench.)

Per Division Bench — It is not necessary for a claimant to implead every person guilty of tort so long as the party (transport company in the case) against whom the claim is pressed is joined in the claim. ——Negligence—Public vehicle — Injury to passenger's hand—Presumption of negligence of driver.

It is the duty of the driver and the owners of vehicles to take reasonable care that the passengers travelling do not receive injuries during the journey. Therefore, it is necessary for the driver to be on the lookout for any possible obstruction on the road or even in the air and to take reasonable steps to avoid the obstruction without causing any injury to the passengers. If a driver fails to take precaution then he is acting negligently. (1942) 1 All E R 433, Relied on.

A bus was passing over a bridge having one way traffic. The driver of the bus however in order to cross a rickshaw which was going ahead of him, turned towards extreme right. ——Negligence—General principles.

Broadly speaking, tort may come under one of the three headings; a nuisance for which the defendant will be liable without proof of negligence; a tort where the negligence being an ingredient will be presumed against the defendant unless rebutted; or one where the negligence of the defendant will have to be proved by the plaintiff.

Where after a few days rains defendant's wall and the plaintiff's out-house near it came down at night when nobody saw the actual process of falling in a suit for damages filed by the plaintiff averring that his house was in a good condition and had been damaged by the fall of the defendant's wall the case was one of strict liability and not of presumed negligence. Strict liability of the defendant therefore had to be proved by the plaintiff. AIR 1953 Vin Pra 21 (22) (Pt A) (Pr 6).

——Negligence — Plaintiff injured in collision of buses—Buses belonging to defendant — Burden of proof—Negligence of driver when may be inferred— Applicability of principle of res ipsa loquitur — Damages—Liability of defendant.

Where a plaintiff is injured as a result of a collision of two transport buses owned by the defendant corporation and he files a suit for damages, the burden is on the plaintiff to prove that the injuries to him were caused as a result of negligence of the defendant corporation or some one in the service of the defendant. If in the ordinary course of things, a collision would not have occurred between two moving bodies in charge of different persons, if both had taken due care and had not acted negligently, the fact that there was such collision would be prima facie proof that either or both of them acted negligently. But in such cases the principle of res ipsa loquitur would not be of any assistance in fixing the negligence of one of the two drivers. And if in such a case the prima facie proof of negligence of either of the two drivers is not rebutted then it can be held that the accident was due to the negligence of either of the drivers or both of them. And if the drivers of both the vehicles happen to be servants of the defendants (as in this case), the defendant would be liable. (1961) 2 Guj L R 304 : AIR 1961 Guj 196 (197 to 200) (Pt A) (Prs 5, 6, 16) (DB).

——Damages—Collision—Collision between railway train and truck — Owner of truck giving truck on hire—Driver of truck, servant of hirer - Driver found negligent — Owner's claim against railway and against hirer.

There was a collision between a passing train and a truck, at level crossing. The truck was damaged. It was established that the driver of the train engine was not negligent. The accident was due to the negligence of the truck driver who was found to be drunk. The plaintiff who was the owner of the truck, had given the truck on hire to another. The driver of the truck was the servant of the person who hired the truck. The plaintiff filed a suit for damages against the Union of India.

Held, that the plaintiff had no cause of action against the railway company. His rights would be against the hirer of the truck only. However, the correct legal position was that, as property belonging to him had been damaged by an alleged tort committed by the defendant Railway, he will have a cause of action against the defendant subject to the limitation that his rights would be the same as the rights which hirer had in respect of the alleged tort. Hence the negligence of the truck driver was relevant to the plaintiff's claim and the Railway was not liable because it was the truck driver who was negligent. 1957 M P C 492 : (1957) M P L J 617 : 1957 Jab L J 939 : ILR (1957) Madh-Pra 348 : AIR 1958 Madh Pra 93 (95) (Pt A) (Prs 7, 8) (DB).

——Negligence — Collision between bus and lorry—Negligence of drivers—Injury to passenger—Suit for damages against owners of vehicles — Burden of proof—(Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101-104).

Where a plaintiff, a passenger in a bus, sustained an injury on account of a collision between the bus and a lorry and he brought a suit for damages against the owner of both the vehicles on the allegation that the accident was caused by the negligence of the drivers of both the vehicles :

Held, that the burden did not lie on the plaintiff to prove affirmatively to the exclusion of the driver of the bus that the driver of the lorry alone was guilty of negligence. In such a case the plaintiff is not bound to a strict analysis of the proximate or immediate cause of the event to find out whom he can sue. Subject to the rules as to remoteness of damage, the plaintiff is entitled to sue all or any of the negligent persons and it is no concern of his whether there is any duty of contribution or indemnity as between those persons though in any case he cannot recover in the whole more than his whole damage. AIR 1939 Mad 261 : (1939) 1 M L J 143 ; (1921) 2 K B 664, Relied on. 1956 Mad W N 269 : 69 Mad L W 192 : (1956) 26 Com Cas (Ins) 31 : (1956) 1 M L J 477 : ILR (1957) Mad 306 : AIR 1956 Mad 464 (465) (Pt A) (Pr 8).

——Negligence — Collision — Suit for damages — Parties.

In cases of injuries resulting from a 'composite negligence,' the plaintiff is entitled to sue all or any of the negligent persons. Consequently for injuries caused as a result of collision between two buses, action can be brought against the owners of the buses, the drivers and the Insurance Company. 1963 Mys L J (Supp) 368.

——Negligence — Collision — Suit for damages by injured person — Burden of proof.

Generally speaking in running down cases, or as they are sometimes called collision on land cases, the plaintiff is not entitled to succeed unless he gives affirmative proof of negligence on the part of the defendant or his servant. Persons who base a claim for negligence must prove negligence.

In a case of this kind, presumptions on question of fact arise and may have to be rebutted. Thus it may be sufficient for the plaintiff to prove that the bus in which he was travelling took a turn and proceeded beyond the road and in turning back to go to the road, it struck against a tree which caused injury to him. Then it is for the defendant to prove that one of the bullock carts going in front turned and stood across the road and he could not avoid taking a turn. If it is proved, then the presumption raised in plaintiff's favour stands rebutted by the defendant's evidence. ILR (1953) Mys 539 : 32 Mys L J 78 : AIR 1954 Mysore 138 (139) (Pt A) (Prs 3).

——Negligence — Collision — Duty of wiser course —Limits of.

When by the negligent conduct of a vehicle or foot-passenger on the road a collision with another person or vehicle is rendered imminent, the latter will not be liable in respect of a collision if in the stress and agitation of the moment he takes unwise course in seeking to avoid it.

Good sense and the policy of the law impose some limit upon the amount of care, skill and nerve which are required of a person in a position of duty, who has to encounter a sudden emergency.

Thus even if it be possible to take a view that it would have been wiser for the driver to apply the brakes though he was quite near the bullock carts, he cannot be expected to be as wise as he or anybody else is expected to be at a cooler moment. ILR (1953) Mys 539 : 32 Mys L J 78 : AIR 1954 Mysore 138 (139) (Pt B) (Pr 4).

——Collisions in Canals.

The principles regarding collision at sea can be applied to collisions in backwaters and canals. Every vessel is to observe the regulations and rules prescribed therefor. It is always a positive duty on the part of the boat-men to observe the regulations and a departure from the same can only be justified by necessity. Non-observance of the regulations is prima facie negligence, unless it can be shown that the departure from the regulation either did not in fact, wholly or in part, cause the collision. AIR 1952 Trav-Co 143 (147) (Pt A)(Prs 12, 13, 13a)(DB).

——Negligence — Collision of Vessels—Liability of owners — Principles — Duty to comply with regulations promptly — Failure — Effect of.

A vessel is not justified in delaying to take precautions until the last moment or in trusting to being able to "stave" clear of the other. If, by doing so, she frightens another vessel into taking a wrong step and a collision occurs, she will be responsible for the entire loss. By a prompt compliance with the regulations, where a vessel is required to alter her course to avoid another, she apprises the latter of her ability and intention to comply with the regulations. Whereas by delaying to take the required step, she may lead the other vessel to suppose that she is unable to comply with them, and cause her to take a step which may make a collision inevitable. Where a ship or boat, in order to show that she is free from blame, is required to prove that she altered her course at the proper time, it is not enough for her to show that her helm was altered at that time; she must prove that she altered her helm in time. AIR 1952 T-C 143.

——Negligence—Motor accident—Children playing on road—Duty of motor driver pointed out—Contributory negligenee of children.

The responsibility of a driver of a motor vehicle when he sees infants playing on the road becomes greater and he must take into account the fact that their behaviour would be uncertain. The driver is under a duty to take reasonable care to avoid harm to the children. Things would be different if the boys suddenly appear on the road or one of them crosses all of a sudden while they were quietly standing on one side of the road. That would be a case of inevitable accident. But where the boys are right in the middle of the road and are playing, the driver should slow down well in time to allow the boys to run away from the road. It may be that he could not succeed on account of the electric pole in avoiding the accident but that does not exonerate him from his responsibility to take special care on seeing infants playing on the road. A different view of the matter might be taken if the accident occurs to an adult pedestrian who behaved in an uncertain manner after receiving a warning by horn being blown; but in the case of children of tender ages the same standard of care cannot be accepted.

Contributory negligence of a child is seldom a good defence to such a tort, though in some cases the defence of inevitable accident may prevail. 1962 M P L J 657 : 1962 Jab L J 852.

——Negligence — Contributory negligence—'Volenti non fit injuria' — Applicability of maxim.

The plaintiff owned paddy lands adjoining a stream, which served as the only outlet for the excess water collected in his paddy land. As a result of unusually heavy rainfall in a particular year the excess water spread over the paddy lands of the plaintiff higher up and the paddy crop in the plaintiff's lands was kept submerged for a few days and also prevented him from raising other cultivation during that year. In a suit for damages against the State in respect of the alleged tortious acts.

Held, that the claim was unsustainable. Even apart from the defendants' plea that this case comes within the exceptions of 'vis major' as also of the plaintiff's consent, as recognised in Fletcher v. Rylands, (1866) 1 Ex 265, the two essential conditions necessary to attract the rule of absolute liability are not satisfied in this case. Indian law has all along recognised the use of a property as a reservoir of water for irrigation purposes as a natural use essential to the welfare of the community. When such is the position, under normal circumstances, greater immunity must attach itself to similar works undertaken to tide over the extraordinary situation brought about by the acute shortage of the staple commodity of paddy as in the present instance. The plea of 'volenti non fit injuria' raised by the defendant in answer to the plaintiff's claim for compensation, is also fully supported by evidence on record. 1956 Ker L T 291 : ILR (1956) Trav-Co 639 : AIR 1956 Trav-Co 225 (228 to 230) (Prs 6, 7, 8) (DB).

——Negligence — Death caused due to negligent act —Estimation of damages to be awarded to dependents of deceased —Principles — Matters to be considered — (Fatal Accidents Act (1855), Ss. 1 and 2).

Estimating the amount of damages in case of actionable negligence resulting in death is always a difficult task for the Court. The standard must not be a subjective standard but an objective standard. The Court has some discretion in fixing the measure of reparation and the important consideration would be the probable earning of the deceased and what is more important what amount the deceased would have probably spent for the support of his wife and children. Expectation of life of the deceased having regard to his age, bodily health and habits and the possibility of premature death is one of the other relevant considerations. Where the deceased has left property which goes to the claimants the resulting acceleration of interest in that property would also be a factor of reduction in the final assessment. 1942 A C 601 (617): 1951 A C 601 (614), Foll. 59 Bom L R 1196 : AIR 1958 Bom 218 (221) (Pt B) (Pr 9).

The fact that payment has not actually been made by the plaintiff in respect of liabilities incurred under any of the heads of damages is immaterial, as long as the liability is a genuine liability actually incurred. The fact that the doctors who treated the plaintiff, on account of their friendship with him or for some other reason did not claim from him any fees, is a matter, which is completely collateral to damage.

If the plaintiff for reasons peculiar to him gets the benefit of free medical advice, the defendants cannot appropriate the benefit to themselves, by saying that by their negligent act they have not inflicted any financial burden on the plaintiff in the shape of doctor's fees. Madh B L J 1955 H C R 1479 : Madh B L R 1955 Civ 489 : ILR (1955) Madh Bha 306 : AIR 1955 Mah B 214 (220) (Pt B) (Pr 12) (DB).

——Negligence — Damages — Loss of one leg caused by the rash and negligent driving of motor vehicle — Compensation for — Principles.

In so far as the injury results in actual pecuniary loss, past or prospective, the plaintiff should be awarded full compensation for that loss; but that does not mean that in the case of loss of prospective earnings the plaintiff is to be awarded his annual earnings multiplied by the number of years for which he could be expected to have worked, if he had not been injured. A simple calculation of that sort ignores many contingencies which would or might operate to reduce the plaintiff's future and so would mean that the plaintiff would get more than full compensation for his loss. In so far as the injury results in damage which does not admit of assessment by arithmetical calculation, the plaintiff should be awarded fair and reasonable compensation, such compensation to be assessed in the light of previous awards in respect of comparable damage.

——Negligence — Damages — Damage by fire — Burden of proof.

The plaintiff filed a suit against the defendant claiming damages in respect of the destruction said to have been caused to his orange garden on account of the fire started by the defendant in his garden which was adjacent to the plaintiff's garden.

Held, the burden of proving negligence on the basis of which a claim for damages is made lies upon the party who alleges it and to establish a case, he should prove the negligence affirmatively by adducing credit-worthy evidence of it. Mere proof that an accident has occurred, the cause of which is unknown, is not invariably proof of negligence. The plaintiff had, therefore, to establish that it was the fire that the defendant started on his land without taking necessary precautions to prevent the same from spreading into the neighbouring lands, that spread into his garden and caused the destruction of the orange trees, to succeed in his case. Once it was established that it was the fire that the defendant started on his land that spread into the garden of the plaintiff the burden of proving that the defendant had taken all necessary precautions and that it was not on account of his negligence that the fire spread into the garden of the plaintiff, was heavily on the defendant. When the defendant set fire to his land without taking necessary precautions to prevent the same from spreading into the lands in the neighbourhood he was 'playing with fire' and should be deemed to have foreseen the possibility of the fire spreading into the lands adjoining his land and was liable for any damage caused to them. ● ——Negligence — Proof — Damage caused due to breach of canal — Rule of res ipsa loquitur — Applicability.

Per Sarkar J.:—In an action for damages for inundation of plaintiff's land due to breach of a canal in the management of the defendant, the rule of res ipsa loquitur would apply because canal banks are not breached if those in management take proper care and the breach itself would be prima facie proof of negligence unless the defendant can show that the breach was due to act of God or to act of a third party or any other thing. (1865) 3 H and C 596 and (1950) 1 All E R 392, Rel. on.

Per Hidayatullah, J.: — The rule in Rylands v. Fletcher (1868) 3 H L 330, shortly stated, is that any occupier of land who brings or keeps upon it anything likely to do damage if it escapes is bound at his peril to prevent its escape, and is liable for all the direct consequences of its escape, even if he has been guilty of no negligence. The rule in Rylands v. Fletcher was derivatively created from the rule of strict liability applicable to the acts of animals but, it is hardly applicable to a case where damage is caused to adjoining land due to a breach in a canal maintained by the Government.

The rule laid down in Scott v. London and St. Katharins Dock Co., (1865) 159 E R 665 that where the thing is shown to be under the management of the defendant or his servants, and the accident is such as in the ordinary course of things does not happen if those who have the management use proper care, it affords reasonable evidence, in the absence of explanation by the defendants, that the accident arose from want of care, has been regarded as the principle of res ipsa loquitur. But the principle if it be one, cannot always be safely applied where the facts before the Court are not the whole facts. The principle of res ipsa loquitur had its origin in the falling of a barrel of flour from a first floor widow on a passerby but it has been extended to situations quite different. It is a rule of evidence and not of liability. It is not sufficient to say res ipsa loquitur because the danger is that facts may not always tell the whole story and if there is something withheld how can the thing be said to speak for itself. ——Negligence—Action on tort of negligence — Burden of proof of negligence — Maxim "res ipsa loquitur" — Applicability of—Crashing of aircraft immediately after take off—Maxim applies.

In an action on the tort of negligence, the plaintiff must prove that the defendant is guilty of negligence. Although the burden of proof of negligence is on the plaintiff in some cases the mere happening of an accident affords prima facie evidence that the tort constituting the cause of action is the result of want of care on the part of the defendant. This is known as the maxim of "res ipsa loquitur". (1865) 3 H C 596, Foll. In cases where an aircraft crashes immediately after its take off, the maxim res ipsa loquitur applies. The maxim res ipsa loquitur is no more than a rule of evidence, whether the rule applies depends on the nature of each accident. Even on the same facts the Courts have and may differ on the question as to whether the maxim is applicable. When evidence is tendered as to the cause of accident, the maxim is not of much importance. In such cases the Court is required to consider the :entire evidence and record whether on consideration of the evidence as a whole negligence is established. In cases, where the rule of res ipsa loquitur applies, the defendant has to disprove negligence. In cases where the rule does not apply the plaintiff is to prove negligence affirmatively. A I R 1962 Cal 544 (551) (Pt D) (Pr 18).

——Negligence — Res ipsa loquitur— (Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101 to 103).

The maxim res ipsa loquitur when applied to an action for negligence is merely a rule of evidence affecting onus. It does not alter the general rule that the burden of proof of the alleged negligence rests upon the plaintiff. It means that the res or the facts and circumstances of the accident proved by the plaintiff are by themselves, without any direct proof of negligence, sufficient prima facie evidence from which an inference of negligenee may reasonably be drawn.

The inference may be rebutted by the defendant by proving some specific cause of the accident for which he was not responsible or by proving that he was, in fact, not negligent, or by giving a reasonable explanation and proving it, that the happening of the accident was as consistent with the absence of negligence as it was with the presence of negligence. When the defendant has done this, the burden is shifted back to the plaintiff. ——Negligence — Damage to premises by fire — Lessee's liability — Burden of proof of negligence is on lessor—Principle of res ipsa loquitur.

The lessee is liable for damage caused to the premises by fire intentionally or by negligence. The burden of proving negligence on the part of the lessee is on the lessor. No presumption of negligence can be drawn from the bare facts. The lessor has to show that the fire was due to something unusual which the lessor's servant did.

Even in applying the maxim res ipsa loquitur and the rule laid down in Rylands v. Fletcher, (1888 L.R 3 H L 330), regard must be had to all the circumstances of time, place and practice of mankind. The applicability of the maxim res ipsa loquitur to cases of fire is not excluded by any equitable principle. The maxim is merely a rule of evidence affecting onus. It does not alter the general rule that the burden of proof of the alleged negligence, rests upon the plaintiff. The inference of negligence may be rebutted by the defendant by proving some specific cause of the accident for which he was not responsible or by giving a reasonable explanation and proving it, that the happening of the accident was as consistent with the absence of negligence as it was with the presence of negligence. When the defendant has done this, the burden is shifted back to the plaintiff. A I R 1955 M B 214, Rel. on. 1962 M P C 60 : 1961 Jab L J 1516 : 1962 M P L J 187.

——Negligence — Evidence and proof—Suit against Court of Wards — (C. P. Court of Wards Act (24 of 1899), S. 19 (1) (c).)

The plaintiff in order to succeed in his suit for damages for negligence, must establish, firstly a duty to take care, secondly a breach of the duty and thirdly that such breach was the proximate cause of the loss or injury sustained by him. ILR (1947) Nag 955, Rel. on.

In a suit for recovery of damages on the allegation that during the period the Court of Wards was in charge of the plaintiff's estate, decrees were obtained against persons owing money to the estate but were negligently allowed to be barred by limitation, the manager, Court of Wards, would be the person primarily responsible for the loss, if any, under S. 19 (1) (c) of the Central Provinces Court of Wards Act, 1899. The best evidence of the loss, if any, would be furnished by the plaintiff's account books. It was, therefore, his duty to produce them. He should also lead evidence of an independent and reliable character to prove that the loss, if any, was caused by the wilful negligence of the Manager, Court of Wards. In the absence of such evidence, the Court is justified in holding that the plaintiff had failed to prove that any actual loss was caused to him. 1957 M P C 332 : 1957 M P L J 282 : 1957 Jab L J 559 : AIR 1957 Madh Pra 78 (79) (Prs 4, 6,7) (DB).

——Negligence — Proof of negligence and causation —Res ipsa loquitur when applies.

In a claim for damages founded on negligence, the general rule is that the plaintiff must establish a breach of duty and its causal connection with his injury. The exception to this rule is that if the facts proved or admitted amount to prima facie proof of negligence or its causal connection, the burden is shifted to the defendant to rebut these points. The defendant may be able to rebut the presumption, but rebut it he must, if he wishes to escape liability. The question of prima facie evidence or onus of proof is generally immaterial where there is evidence on both sides. But it becomes important where the defendant does not offer rebutting evidence or the evidence on either side is scanty or obscure as often happens in many cases of serious accidents. The Courts will take judicial notice of what happens in the ordinary course of things at all events to the extent of using their knowledge of the common affairs of life to complete or correct what is stated by witnesses. ——Negligence —"Res ipsa loquitur"—Applicability —Conditions essential.

In an action for negligence normally, the burden of proof of the alleged negligence is on the plaintiff in the first instance. It is for him to establish all facts which lead to the natural inference that the injury complained of was caused by the defendant's negligence. There are however cases where the facts established show that the injury could not have happened unless there was negligence on the part of the defendant. It is in such cases that the doctrine of "res ipsa loquitur" is invoked. Its principle is only a rule of evidence and shifts the onus of proof. The conditions that should be established before the principle can be invoked in any case are; firstly that the thing which caused the injury or damage should be shown to be under the management of the defendant or his servant; secondly, the accident that happened was of such a nature that in the ordinary course of things it would not have happened if the persons in management of the thing had exercised proper care or due diligence. (1963) Mys L J (Supp) 368.

——Negligence — Accidents on the road — Allegation of rash and negligent driving — Burden of proof — Rule applicable.

Where in a suit for recovery of damages from the defendants for causing injuries to a minor girl (plaintiff) while she was passing by a road on its left side along with her mother the allegation was that defendant 1 who was coming on a cycle from the opposite direction with defendant 2 sitting on the rod suddenly turned his cycle on the wrong side and collided with the plaintiff, with the result that the plaintiff was badly injured.

Held, that in a case like this, although the injury is direct and forceful and as such prima facie a case of trespass to the person, still the plaintiff has to prove negligence on the part of the defendants (that is all reasonable care which could avoid the collision was not taken by them) in order to succeed, for the principle that a man cannot recover damages if he has consented to run the risk of accidental harm is clearly applicable to case arising out of accidents on a road. ——Negligence — Fire — Onus of proof — Liability of lessee to lessor for damage caused by fire — Res ipsa loquitur — Doctrine of — Applicability—(T. P. Act (1882), S. 108 (e)) — (Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101-104).

Where the house leased out to the defendant was destroyed by fire, the onus of proving negligence on the part of the defendant is on the plaintiff-landlord. The doctrine of res ipsa loquitur does not apply to such a case and the normal rule of evidence must prevail. In the absence of any evidence that the fire was due to the defendant's negligence, no decree for damages can be granted to the plaintiff in tort. ——Negligence — Absence of negligence — Held that there was imposed an obligation upon treasury staff to honour District Board's cheque — To that end they were bound to know signiature of Chairman of Board—Payment on forged cheques — Onus of proving absence of negligence was cast upon treasury. ——Negligence — Rash and negligent driving—Proof — Res ipsa loquitur — Bus turning turtle — Fact speaks for itself — Best evidence against negligence would be of driver himself — Omission to examine him — Effect — Evidence Act (1872), S. 106. (1965) 67 Punj L R 1064 (Punj).

——Negligence — Res ipsa loquitur — Meaning and effect of — Motor accident — Skidding of motor vehicle — It is neutral factor.

The maxim res ipsa loquitur suggests that on the circumstances of a given case the res speaks and is eloquent because the facts stand unexplained, with the result that the natural and reasonable inference from the facts—not a conjectural inference—shows that the act is attributable to some person's negligent conduct. The effect of this maxim, however, depends on the cogency of the inferences to be drawn and must, therefore, vary in each case. Its effect appears to shift the burden or onus of proof on to the defendant who is expected to show as to how the accident may have occurred without his negligence.

A skid in itself does not excuse the motor accident and it may not suffice. by itself, to displace the prima facie inference of negligence arising from the vehicle being where it has no right to be; for a skid may be caused by bad, careless or fast driving. The skid is thus by itself a neutral factor and it may or may not be due to the driver's negligence. 64 Punj L R 448 : AIR 1962 Punj 540 (542) (Pt B) (Prs 8, 9).

——Negligence — Private carrier — Failure to keep vehicle in proper state of repair — Defective steering — Res ipsa loquitur — Applicability.

It is the duty of the owner of private carrier to take proper care as to the soundness of the mechanism and the road-worthiness of the vehicle and keep the vehicle in a proper state of repair, when conveying invitees. Where he fails to take such care and allows the vehicle to become defective as when the steering of a motor car becomes so worn out that the driver cannot control the car, that will be evidence of negligence on his part. (1920) 37 T L R 72, Rel. on.

Where a private carrier meets with an accident due to a defective tierod which connected the steering wheel with the wheels of the car, the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur which raises a presumption of fault against the owners fully applies and the burden of proving that the accident was inevitable, is upon the owners. The accident was not due to a latent defect which could be said not to be discoverable by reasonable care. ——Negligence — Evidence and proof — Res ipsa loquitur — Presumption of negligence.

There is no legal presumption of negligence even where the rule res ipsa loquitur applies and hence if the defendant produces a reasonable explanation, equally consistent with the negligence and no negligence, the burden of proving the affirmative, that the defendant was negligent and that his negligence caused the accident, still remains with the plaintiff. On the other hand the onus of disproving negligence lies on the defendant, at least in the sense that he must know either that the accident was due to a specific cause which does not connote his negligence, or that he had used all reasonable care in the matter. All that the rule means is that on the proof of certain set of facts, the Court may be justified in drawing an inference, unless the contrary is proved, that the accident was not likely to occur except through the negligence of the defendant. ——Negligence — Evidence and proof.

Before the liability can be fastened on the defendant there must be direct or circumstantial evidence establishing that the fall of the plaintiff's house was a consequence of the collapse of the defendant's wall.

Where there was no direct evidence and also there was absolutely nothing by way of observation or inference of the witnesses to justify the allegation that the fall of the plaintiff's house was a consequence of the collapse of the defendant's wall.

Held, that mere assertion of the plaintiff that his house was in an excellant condition, and could not have possibly come down except by the collapse of the temple wall on it is not sufficient proof. AIR 1953 Vind Pra 21 (23. 24) (Pt B) (Prs 9, 10, 11).

——Negligence — Burden of proof — (Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101 to 103).

In a suit for damages for torts where plaintiff alleges that the fall of his house was the consequence of collapse of the defendant's wall, it is for the plaintiff to prove his case and he cannot take advantage of the defendants inability to prove that his wall 'did not' fall on the plaintiff's house. AIR 1953 Vind Pra 21 (24) (Pt D) (Pr 11).

——Negligence — Tree planted by District Board on roadside — Injury caused by fall of tree — Liability of Board under common law — (Bihar Local Self-Government Act (3 of 1885), S. 79).

The Act does not impose any duty on the Distict Board either to maintain the trees properly or to lop off the branches in case they extend upon the property of others. The duty, therefore, if any can be said to arise under the common law only. Under that law it is the duty of the District Board to see that the tree should not be allowed to extend beyond the confines of the road so as to become a danger or nuisance to persons occupying the land in the neighbourhood. However, where the injury is in substance caused by the trees, not by the extension of their branches but being rooted out from the soil and thereafter having fallen on the premises of the plaintiffs, the Board cannot be held liable for the damage resulting from such a cause so long as it has no knowledge or means of knowledge of the trees having become dangerous due to some hidden action of nature on it or due to some disease. 1955 B L J R 492: ILR 34 Pat 661 : A I R 1955 Pat 432 (439) (Pt I) (Pr 19) (DB).

——Negligence—Owner or occupier of land — Duty of—Railway line running through residential locality —Duty of Railway to fence—Child trespassing upon railway line and getting injured by running train — Liability of railway — (Railways Act (1890). S. 13 (a) (c)).

An owner or occupier of land or premises owes no obligation or duty to a trespasser but he must not set up a trap of him or cause wilful injury to him. There is no difference in the case of a child trespasser as compared to an adult trespasser as the law draws no distinction in the duty of the owner or occupier of the premises towards either category of trespasser. (1913) 1 K B 398, Rel. on. Unlike S. 68 of the English Railway Clauses Consolidation Act (8 and 9 Vict., c. 20) 1845 the Indian statute does not impose any imperative obligation on the Railway to fence a line. but, S. 13 (a), Railways Act, gives power to the Central Government to require the Railway, among other matters, to provide fences and to maintain the same. There is no obligation apart from statute under the general law.

Held. on facts that the railway could not be held to be guilty of negligence merely because it had not fenced the track on both sides for the benefit of the adjoining house-holders. Even if it is accepted that there was a level foot-way crossing near where the accident occurred, no duty apart from the statute (which was not the case here), was placed upon the Railway administration to either keep a gate or stile there with a fence or to keep a watchman for the benefit of those using the same. ILR (1951) Punj 1147 : 60 Pun L R 221 : AIR 1958 Punj 246 (247 to 249) (Prs 4, 5, 6) (DB).

——Negligence — Railway — Level crossing—Railway's liability — Negligence of driver of engine— (Railways Act (1890), S. 7),

A lever-crossing is on the one hand a danger spot in view of the possible movement of trains, and on the other is an invitation to the passer-by. This is a public crossing and not merely one by private accommodation. Therefore it is the legal duty of the railway to assure reasonable safety. At a reasonable distance on either side, prominently written boards can be affixed, asking, the road-users to beware of trains. If the track on either side is visible from near the caution board or within a short distance from the crossing, this would be sufficient because a diligent road user could look round and see the train. Even if the car driver knows by frequent use of the road by him that there is a crossing, the roaders should be alerted at the proper moment by the boards or gates; it is not a case for remote knowledge, but one for immediate alertness.

On the other hand, if there is a bend on the track or there are trees or bush in between, or the road on either side of the crossing is very far below the level of the railway tract, or for any other similar reasons the track is not visible beyond a short distance, then even the caution boards are useless. In that case gates are indicated. Similarly boards may be affixed along the railway, say half to three-fourth of a mile in either direction calling upon the engine driver to whistle. A whistle by the driver can supplement, but cannot replace, gates or caution boards as a device to protect the users of a crossing.

All these aspects of maintaining a level crossing have been considered by the railway authorities in accordance with S. 7 of the Indian Railways Act and guiding principles have been laid down.

Held, on facts that the railway level crossing was unmanned and without any barrier, that there was an obstruction to view by branches of some trees and that there was negligence on the part of the railway authority in maintaining the same.

Held, however that the engine driver who was driving the engine at the time of the collision at the level crossing with the truck driven by the deceased which collision resulted in the death of the deceased was not negligent in the manner of driving either before or after catching sight of the truck.

Held, further, that apart from the truck drivers' rashness in driving without a proper licence, it was difficult to say that he was further negligent in the driving itself. AIR 1954 Vind Pra 17 (20, 21) (Pt C) (Prs 19 to 21, 26, 27).

Direct evidence is not necessary for establishing negligence. It may be inferred from the circumstances of the case. —Negligence — Accident — Whether one man is servant of another—Mode of determination—Owner of lorry held liable for damages to plaintiff's car.

Whenever it is necessary to discover whether or not one man is the servant of another the chief enquiry must be directed towards finding who has the power to control and it is also essential to know how and by whom a person is paid, by whom and in what circumstances he may be dismissed. It is in this connection that a distinction is drawn between a contract of service and contract for service. In deciding whether a man is the servant of another "the test is this—Whether the servant is transferred, or only the use and benefit of his work".

A general servant remains the servant of the master who pays him and there is a presumption against the transfer of that servant as distinct from his services, and the presumption is all against there being such a transfer. The burden of proof of such a transfer is a heavy one. It must be proved that there was such a transference of the servant as to pass the right or authority to control him in the manner of the execution of the act in question. It is a question of fact involving the whole circumstances of the case whether there has been such a transference of the right or authority to control. In deciding the question the following things have to be kept in mind; who is a paymaster, who can dismiss, how long the alternative service lasts, what machinery is employed. Appellant's goats and sheep seized by servants of Nawanagar State outside that State and taken to village within State — Out of 304 animals seized all but 39 animals perishing—Sale of surviving animals —Seizure of animal held illegal and refund of sale proceeds ordered — Shortly after order, Nawanagar State merging into Saurashtra State — Appellant filing suit against Saurashtra State for recovery of price of all animals, loss of profit and legal expenses.

Held, that the Nawanagar State was clearly liable to restore the animals and where restoration could not be made of all the animals seized, it must account for the animals which were not restored. It might be that those servants of the State who had custody of the animals might be negligent in not selling them away before they perished but in detaining the animals they were acting in the exercising of powers conferred upon them by Municipal law and the Nawanagar State clearly could not be held responsible for the loss of animals for it could not be said that it had profited by the loss of the animals. The Nawanagar State was therefore liable for the sale proceeds actually realised and the Saurashtra State's liability could not extend beyond that. ——Nuisance—Public and private—What amounts to —Neighbour setting up flour mill—His duty pointed out—Private nuisance.

Nuisances are of two kinds, public and private. A public nuisance is also known as common nuisance, and constitutes primarily a criminal offence, such as keeping a gambling house, keeping brothels or obstructing a highway. A public nuisance can also become actionable, when the act complained of constitutes some form of tort as well, such as the obstruction of a high way is a public nuisance, but if it causes any special or peculiar damage to an individual, a civil suit can also lie. On the other hand a private nuisance consists of the wrongful disturbance of an easement or any right to which a person is entitled. The basic doctrine of the law of private nuisance is described by a latin maxim, sic uteri tuo ut alienum non laedas, which means, so use your own property as not to injure your neighbours. The rule with regard to public nuisance is different; it is only actionable at the suit of a private individual on proof of special damage. A neighbour who sets up a flour mill should so use it as to cause no injury or damage to his neighbours. M B L J 1955 H C R 2115.

——Nuisance—Roots of defendant's tree penetrating plaintiff's adjacent wall — Act amounts to private nuisance — Right of plaintiff to claim damages and injunction, against defendant — Form of relief — Specific Relief Act (1877), S. 54.

Held, that the defendant's act amounted to a private nuisance, because by permitting a nim tree to stand and grow on his own land which he was lawfully entitled to do, he caused consequences which extended to the land of his neighbour, in that the roots of his tree encroached upon his neighbour's sub-soil and thus caused physical damage to his property. The plaintiff was, therefore, entitled to damages as well as to an injunction. 1962 M P C 111 : 1961 Jab L J 721 : 1961 M P L J 834.

——Nuisance—What amounts to—Test.

The standard of comfort differs according to the situation of the property and the class of people who inhabit it. But whatever the standard of comfort in a particular district may be, the addition of a fresh noise caused by the defendant's works may be so substantial as to create a legal nuisance. 61 Punj L R 197 : AIR 1959 Punj 217 (218 to 220) (Prs 3, 4, 6).

——Nuisance—What constitutes.

Every little discomfort or inconvenience cannot be brought on to the category of actionable nuisance. Consistent with the circumstances under which a person is living, he may have to put up with a certain amount of inevitable annoyance or inconvenience. But if such inconvenience or annoyance exceeds all reasonable limits, then the same would amount to actionable nuisance. In order to constitute an act of nuisance there must be inference with the use or enjoyment of land, or of some right over or in connection with it, causing damage to the plaintiff. 1904 A C 179, Rel on. ILR (1956) T C 1306 : AIR 1957 Trav-Co 281 (282) (Pr 2) (DB).

19 (A). General.

——Nuisance—Private nuisance—Running of electric flour mill in market place in hill station.

The defendant established an electric flour mill in a premises in the bazaar locality of Mussoorie, which was adjacent to the plaintiff's house. The running of the mill produced a very unpleasant noise, which caused great inconvenience to the plaintiff and the members of his family and it generated vibrations on account of which the walls, floors, doors, windows, etc., in the plaintiff's house shook and rattled. In the locality there was no other flour mill :

Held, that the running of the mill caused inconvenience and serious discomfort to the plaintiff and the residents of his house and its running amounted to a private nuisance which could not be permitted. The immunity from discomfort or inconvenience must, be dependant considerably on the place where a person resides. In the instant case, which comes from Mussoorie, it would not be unreasonable to accept the plaintiff's contention that he is entitled to such freedom from loud or uncomfortable noise as might enable him to live peacefully in his house. It is not essential in a case like this to prove either that the property has been damaged or that the health of the inhabitants of the plaintiff's house has been impaired. Such an obstruction without any averment of speciai damage could be removed by following the procedure prescribed under S. 91, Civil P. C. ——Nuisance — Construction of latrine by neighbour —Local standard of comfort must be taken into consideration — Latrine not very near the plaintiff's residence—Other neighbours not complaining—Held, that there was no actionable nuisance. (1964) 1 Ker L R 359.

——Nuisance—Private nuisance — Constant noise—Defence of reasonable use of property or acts being authorised by rules—When available.

The principles governing the nuisance caused by constant noise may be summarised as follows: (1) Constant noise, if abnormal or unusual can be an actionable nuisance, if it interferes with one's physical comforts. (2) The test of a nuisance causing personal discomfort is the actual local standard of comfort, and not an ideal or absolute standard. (3) Generally, unusual or abnormal noise on defendant's premises which disturbs sleep of the occupants of the plaintiff's house during night, or which is so loud during day time that due to it one cannot hear ordinary conversation in the plaintiff's house or which cannot allow the occupants of the plaintiff's house to carry on their ordinary work is deemed to be a noise which interferes with one's physical comforts. (4) Even in a noisy locality if there is substantial addition to the noise by introduction of some machine, instrument, or performances at defendant's premises, which materially affects the physical comforts of the occupants of the plaintiff's house then also the noise will amount to actionable nuisance. (5) If the noise amounts to an actionable nuisance, the defence that the defendant is making a reasonable use of his own property will be ineffectual. (6) If the defendant is found to be carrying on his business so as to cause a nuisance to his neighbours, he is not acting reasonably as regards them. And may be restrained by injunction although he may be conducting his business in a proper manner and according to rules framed in that behalf either by the Municipality or by the Government. (7) If an operation of the defendant's premises cannot by any care and skill be prevented from causing a private nuisance to the neighbours, it cannot be undertaken at all, except with the consent of those injured by it. 1958 M P C 7 : 1958 M P L J 114 : 1958 Jab L J 110 : AIR 1959 Madh Pra 240 (244) (Pt A) (Pr 16).

——Nuisance—Escape of water from land due to alteration in natural condition— Liability for—Limitation Act (1908), S. 26 — Applicability.

Two nalas in plaintiff's lands through which water flowed into the defendant's tank across agal portion were natural channels. As the water accumulated in the agal portion, the defendant with a view to transfer the evil of any injury to his lands constructed an embankment or a bundh, thereby diverting the flow of water of the channels in another direction. That obstructed the flow of water through those channels into the tank, and resulted in the diversion of accumulated water into plaintiff's plot.

Held, (i) that it was not at all open to the defendant to erect such embankment. (ii) that the right that the plaintiffs claimed was not one of easement but was based on the law of torts. That being so, the provisions of S. 26 of the Limitation Act, which relate to acquisition of rights to easements, have no application to the facts of the case. AIR 1963 Pat 455 (457, 458) (Pt A) (Prs 10, 13).

——Nuisance—Injury caused by fall of tree planted on roadside by District Board — Nature of wrong.

Where the injury by the fall of tree is suffered by the plaintiffs while they are on their own land adjoining to the land whereon the tree was planted by the District Board, then it is neither a case of trespass, nor a case of negligence as contemplated in its purely objective sense giving rise to injuries on the dangerous premises itself, nor is the case covered by the rule of Raylands v. Fletcher'. Therefore, the wrong on the facts alleged, if any, in this case can be one of nuisance alone. 1955 B L J R 492 : I L R 34 Pat 661: AIR 1955 Pat 432 (435) (Pt E) (Pr 10) (DB).

——Nuisance — Nuisance relating to highways — Rights of owners of land adjoining public street — Right of free access — Portion of street covered up by municipality by permanent structure—Remedies of adjoining owner — (Specific Relief Act (1877). S. 55)—(Municipalities—Bombay District Municipal Act (3 of 1901), (as applied to Saurashtra) Ss. 50 (2), 90) — (Highways).

The owner of an adjoining property has a right of access to the highway on all points on his boundary and the access is not to be restricted to any particular point. Therefore, if there is an obstruction to the access at any point he has a right to have the obstruction removed irrespective of the fact that he has an ingress and egress on the road from other places in his property. In the absence of anything in the Bombay District Municipal Act, 1901, (as adapted and applied to the State of Saurashtra) to empower the Municipality to cover up a portion of the street by putting up a permanent structure thereon, may be for carrying out a duty permitted by the Act, viz., the collection of octroi duty, the action of the Municipality cannot be justified. Such construction is an invasion of a valuable right of the owner of land adjoining the street. The invasion would be a continuous one and it can be remedied only by a mandatory injunction ordering the removal of the structure itself and not mere damages. 7 Sau L R 116 : AIR 1955 Sau 63 (65, 66, 67) (Prs 5, 12, 15, 16) (DB).

19 (B). Abatement.

——Nuisance — Branches of overhanging trees — 'Nizhal Vadai' — Right of affected party to abate the nuisance.

When the plaintiff's land is affected and becomes unproductive on account of the shade caused by the overhanging branches of the trees on the defendant's adjoining land—'Nizhal Vadai'—it is open to the plaintiff to abate the nuisance even without resorting to the Court. The mere fact that the offending trees have been in existence for a considerable number of years will not make any difference. For one thing no prescriptive right could be acquired to commit a nuisance and secondly what is stated initially to be a harmless nuisance can become intolerable by passage of years as the branches of a tree are ever growing and changing. Further the fact that the previous owner of the affected land did not take any steps to abate the nuisance cannot estop or prevent a subsequent buyer to seek the relief which he is entitled to. 1958 Mad W N 313 : (1958) 2 Mad L J 157 : AIR 1959 Mad 12 (13) (Pt A) (Prs 3, 4).

——Nuisance — Branches of tree planted on roadside invading private premises—Right of owner.

It is open to the owner of the premises in law to protect himself against an invasion by cutting the tree projecting on his land beyond the boundary of the road and by removing it from his premises; this he can do even though the fallen tree is doing no harm to him. 1955 B L J R 492 : I L R 34 Pat 661 : AIR 1955 Pat 432 (437) (Pt G) (Pr 15) (DB).

——Nuisance — Breach of duty by local authority—Failure to maintain and repair drainage — It is liable for damages as any other subject is liable, unless it can rely upon statute as providing a defence to such an action — Bihar and Orissa Municipal Act does not permit commission of such nuisance—(Municipalities —Bihar and Orissa Municipal Act (7 of 1922), Ss. 68, 384). I L R 38 Pat 516 : 1959 B L J R 53 : 1959 Pat L R 27 : AIR 1959 Pat 273 (274 to 277) (Pt A) (Pr 6) (DB).

—— Nuisance — Damage caused by fall of tree — Statutory authority to plant trees—Liability of statutory authority for injury caused — (Bihar Local Self-Government Act (3 of 1885), S. 79).

No action can lie against the District Board for the planting of trees by the side of the road unless the plaintiffs, whose house was damaged by the fall of such a tree, prove that in its endeavour to exercise the power the District Board did not use due care and diligence. Where the District Board in planting the trees does not commit any negligence nor exercise the power given to it oppressively, arbitrarily and unnecessarily, the District Board is not liable for doing what it did in the exercise of an absolute power given to it under the statute or for its necessary consequences. Case law referred 1955 B L J R 492 : I L R 34 Pat 661 : AIR 1955 Pat 432 (439) (Pt H) (Pr 18) (DB).

——Nuisance—Damage—Laying drainage on land of another is authorized by Bombay Municipal Boroughs Act (18 of 1925), S. 132. AIR 1953 Sau 97 (98) (Pt B) (Pr 5).

19 (D). Continuing nuisance.

——Nuisance—Nuisance caused by fall of tree — Injury done by fall is not continuing wrong — Suit to recover damages for injury caused—Limitation—(Bihar Local Self-Government Act (3 of 1885), S. 146)—(Limitation Act (1908), S. 23).

The question as to whether a nuisance is of a continuing character or not has in each case to be decided on its own facts. A nuisance in wrongfully causing or allowing the escape of a deleterious thing, which in this case was the tree, into the land of the plaintiffs is not a continuing wrong. The criterion of a continuous wrong is not whether the right or its corresponding obligation is a continuing one, but whether the wrong is a continuing one.

Hence, a suit for damages caused by the fall of the tree if brought beyond three months from the date on which the tree fell is barred by time under S. 146, Bihar Local Self-Government Act, 1885. 1955 B L J R 492: I L R 34 Pat 661: AIR 1955 Pat 432 (436) (Pt F) (Prs 13, 14) (DB).

——Nuisance—Continuing nuisance — Injunction — Residential locality—Working of noisy power loom wearing factory—Form of relief—Factory restrained from working from 10 P. M. to 6 A. M.—Owner also afforded chance to abate nuisance — Specific Relief Act (1877), S. 54).

The plaintiff a householder brought a suit against the proprietors of a power loom wearing factory situated in a residential locality to restrain them from operating their factory as it was a source of nuisance to the plaintiff and the members of his family whose rest and repose were seriously interfered with. It was found that the factory was divided only by a party wall from the house of the plaintiff. The lower Courts held that the working of the factory amounted to nuisance and considering that the noise was intolerable in the nights granted an injunction to the effect that the factory should cease working between 9 P. M. to 7 A. M.

Held, that the finding of the lower Court that nuisance had been caused must be affirmed. (But the hours of restriction were curtailed to 8 hours from 10 P. M. to 6 A. M.) Further, the terms of the decree afforded a chance to the factory owner of abating nuisance by mechanical contrivance if possible. 65 Pun L R 80 : I L R (1963) 1 Punj 248.

See Constitution of India, Part III (Gen). A I R 1960 All 632.

——Nuisance—Private nuisance—Constant noise—Injunction — Grant of — (Specific Relief Act (1877), S. 54).

The inconvenience, annoyance, and substantial physical discomfort caused by the constant noise cannot be adequately estimated in money. A man is entitled to the comfortable enjoyment of his dwelling house and to carry on ordinary conversation in that house without substantial interruption from any abnormal noise. If his neighbour makes such a noise as to interfere with the ordinary use and enjoyment of his dwelling house so as to cause serious disturbance to the ordinary conversation amongst the occupiers of the dwelling house, the owner or the occupier is entitled to be protected from it by means of an injunction. 1958 M P C 7 : 1958 M P L J 114 : 1958 Jab L J 110 : A I R 1959 Madh Pra 240 (244) (Pt C) (Pr 18).

Therefore, he claimed general damages on account of the inconvenience caused to him for the tort committed by the defendants. Plaintiff claimed Rs. 25 as nominal damages.

Held, that plaintiff claimed general damages on account of the inconvenience, as such no ascertained loss or specific damages having been proved, he was still entitled to general damages for a tort. It would be sufficient for him to prove that he had such a right and that there was an obstruction by the defendants. 1961 M P L J (Notes) 165.

21 (A). In cases of breach of contract.

——Cause of action — Breach of contract procured by third party — Liability in tort.

Where a third person is found to have brought about a breach of contract, it is only the person that procures a breach of contract that commits a tort and no tortious liability could be fastened on a person who is alleged to have committed a breach of contract. The latter's liability will be ex contractu and he does not incur any tortious liability. AIR 1959 Andh Pra 551 (554) (Pt B) (Pr 10) (DB).

——Right of action — Procuring breach of contract of service — Actionability — Public policy — (Contract Act (1872), S. 23).

In order to succeed in an action for procuring breach of a service contract there ought to be some evidence, to predicate active association of the defendant with the breach of contract by the servant. Any active step taken facilitating a breach would be enough. No action lies for dissuading one (even if the finding be that the defendant was responsible for such act) from performing a contract which must be regarded as contrary to public policy, for example, a contract to serve on Rs. 2 p. m. for 112 months which is nothing short of a contract of serfdom. ILR (1957) Madh Pra 645 : 1958 M P C 485 : 1958 M P L J 657 : 1958 Jab L J 724 : AIR 1958 Madh Pra 367 (367, 368) (Prs 4, 5).

——Right of action — Procuring breach of contract —Liability for damages — Assessment of damages.

A defendant who procures a breach of contract or breach of contractual or business relations by illegal means or with malicious intent is liable in law for the consequences of his act. He cannot escape the liability on the ground that the act induced is one within the right of the immediate actor and therefore is not wrongful in so far as he is concerned. (1938) 2 M L J 769 : AIR 1938 Mad 958 and AIR 1935 Rang 73 (2), Distinguished.

There can be no doubt that on the facts found the plaintiff is entitled to general damages on the ground of defamation. But as regards the interference with his contractual relationship he must prove either that damage has resulted or that it is likely to result from the defendant's procuring the breach. It is not easy to assess general damages. It is really arbitrary and not amenable to any legal standard of measurement. It depends on various factors, the nature of the accusation, the language used, the social position of the parties etc.

But it is wrong to fix a consolidated sum as damages general as well as special. 1961 (2) Cri L J 247 : 38 Mys L J 559 : ILR (1960) Mys 645 : AIR 1961 Mys 178 (180, 181) (Prs 4, 6).

22. Seduction.

——Seduction of wife — Presumption that wife was performing service — Husband's right to damages.

Plaintiff's case was that the defendant induced his wife to leave him and then the defendant married her by Pat form.

Held, that it could be presumed in such cases that a wife was performing service for her husband and by the conduct of the defendant in inducing her to leave the husband, the husband had been deprived of such services. The plaintiff's estimate of the damages on this account at Rs. 200 for a period of nearly twenty months could not be considered to be at all exaggerated. Damage for loss of society and for mental worry could reasonably account for the rest of the damages awarded by the lower appellate Court. The sum of Rs. 500 was not at all excessive. 1961 M P L J (Notes) 137.

——Seduction — Action for damages — Seduced person, if can file.

An action for damages brought by the seduced person herself on the ground of seduction cannot be maintained for the reason that the person seduced cannot found on seduction, because seduction implies consent. (1951) 1 Mad L J 1 : 1951 Mad W N 102 (2) : 64 Mad L W 189 : AIR 1951 Mad 466 (467) (Pt A) (Pr 5).

Per Wali Ullah J. — (Obiter dicta). The general rule embodied in the maxim, cujus est solum, ejus set usque ad coelum et ad inferos (whose is the soil, his it is, even to the skies and to the depths below) has been considerably curtailed and qualified in recent times. This has been principally due to the development of aeronautics and consequently of aeronautical law during the past few years. The ownership of the surface of the soil does not necessarily carry with it either the possession or ownership of the column of the air space ad infinitum. The upward limit of the general rule embodied in the above maxim must, therefore, be understood to be rigorously limited at the present day : Case law referred. Municipal Board Kanauj v. —Trespass—Erection of a fencing, wall or building on somebody else's land, whether owner of land is a private individual or a public body is an act of encroachment and dispossession by itself and may give rise to a cause of action. See Muncipalities — Assam Municipal Act (1 of 1923), S. 318. 1958 Cri L J 1125 : AIR 1958 Assam 93 (DB).

—Trespass — Unlawful attachment—Effect of.

Mere unlawful attachment of a decree did not certainly amount to trespass according to law. It merely prohibited the judgment-debtors from making payment to the rival claimant. 62 C W N 389 : 99 Cal L J 185 : AIR 1957 Cal 617 (624) (Pt D) (Pr 24) (DB).

—Trespass—Attachment amounting to trespass.

Where the attachment is thoroughly improper and not bona fide in the sense that it was not made with any care or caution, though there may be no proof of malice, the attachment clearly falls within the meaning of trespass which has been defined as a wrongful act done in disturbance of possession of property of another or against his will. ILR (1952) Mys 176 : AIR 1952 Mys 90 (92, 93) (Pt C) (Pr 11) (DB).

—Trespass — What constitutes — Actionable wrong —Damages—Exemplary damages.

To constitute a trespass the act must in general be unlawful at the time when it is committed, and an act may be a trespass although it is committed by mistake or without malice. The commission of a negligent act may amount to a trespass though a person who has not been negligent cannot be a trespasser in respect of any involuntary or inevitable accident. Trespass is an actionable wrong and a mere trespass is as a rule actionable only and not criminally though even bare trespass may be a criminal offence under certain special Act. In an action of trespass the plaintiff if he proves the trespass is entitled to recover damages even though he has not suffered actual loss; though, if the trespass is accompanied by aggravating circumstancer, the plaintiff is entitled to recover exemplary damages. ILR (1952) Mys 176 : AIR 1952 Mys 90 (92, 93) (Pt D) (Pr 11) (DB).

—Trespass on goods.

Trespass on goods is an unlawful disturbance of the possession of the goods by seizure or removal by a direct act causing damage to goods, and the remedies available to a plaintiff against whom such trespass is committed is independent of his claims for other wrongs in respect of the property which are described as conversion or detention. Detenue is the form of action which lies when one person wrongfully detains the goods of another. The gist of the action is the unlawful failure to deliver them up when demanded. ILR (1952) Mys 176 : AIR 1952 Mys 90 (92, 93) (Pt E) (Pr 11) (DB).

—Trespass—Distress—Cattle on land of another—Right of distress—Damages—Occupier is entitled to seize any cattle which are unlawful on his land and detain them until compensation for damage done is paid — Distress is not limited to cattle — It can be exercised in respect of inanimate objects—Distress is not unlawful because compensation demanded is excessive — The wrongdoer should estimate the damage and lay it before Court. AIR 1955 N U C (Nag) 97.

—Trespass—Licensee—Right of entry.

Licensee entering premises of consumer for removing materials which belongs to consumer inspite of his objection—Both the licensee and the servant through whom entry was made commit trespass for which they were liable in damages. AIR 1950 Nag 246 (DB).

—Trespass—Projection of cornice of another's land —Effect of.

Even a projection of a cornice on another man's land amounts to trespass and the defendant cannot justify that trespass simply by saying that it has been done for ornamenting his building. If he wants to ornament his building in any way, he should do it by restricting himself on his own land. AIR 1927 Mad 357, Rel. on. ILR (1960) 10 Raj 1.

——Trespass upon person — Police Officer handcuffing an under-trial in hospital and chaining him to the window—If liable in tort for damages—Madras District Police Act (24 of 1959), S. 53 — Scope of protection under.

If an act is done by a Police Officer maliciously it ceases to be an act done or intended to be done under the provisions of the District Police Act. The moment an act is shown to be malicious it ceases to be protected by S. 53 of the Act and the three months' period of limitation does not apply. Where a Police Officer without any justification and contrary to the specific departmental rules and instructions, handcuffs an under-trial undergoing treatment in hospital and chains him to a nearby window as if he is a dangerous animal it cannot be said that his conduct is bona fide and he will be liable for damages in tort. In such cases it is not necessary for the victim of the tortious act to attribute and prove an intention or motive on the part of the Police Officer. If the Officer has exceeded and abused his authority the act will be malicious and mala fide unless it can plausibly be contended that the circumstances justified the use of the power. (1965) 2 M L J 530 : 78 Mad L W 316 : (1965) M L J (Cr) 890 : ILR (1966) 1 Mad 393 : AIR 1965 Mad 438 (439, 440) (Prs 4, 7) (DB).

——Trespass—Damages—Liability for—Tenant subleasing property without consent of landlord —Joint decree for damages against tenant and sub-tenant—Validity—Measure of damages.

Where a tenant in a house sub-let it to other two sub-lessees at different times without the consent of the landlord, it was held that a joint decree for damages could not be passed against them all as the tenant and his sub-lessees could not be said to have committed a joint act of trespass and as one of the sub-lessees was in possession of only a portion of the house the decree for damages could be passed against him only to the extent of the portion occupied by him, AIR 1934 Pat 394, Foll. 22 Cut L T 387 : ILR (1956) Cut 587 : AIR 1957 Orissa 246 (247) (Pr 5).

——Trespass — Damages — Suit for possession on ground of dispossession before vesting of estate in state of Bihar — Relief of damages on the ground of trespass—Amendment of plaint, necessity of—Cause of action for damages arose on date of vesting — If plaintiff had an opportunity to amend the plaint but did not do so he must be deemed to have waived his claim for damages. See Civil P. C. (1908), O. 6, R. 17. 1965 B L J R 119.

——Trespass — Deprivation of chattel — Remedies open to plaintiff—Measure of damages.

In the case of trespass on chattel, when the chattel has been taken away by the trespasser the following remedies are open to a plaintiff — (i) He may treat the trespass by the defendant as if he has been totally deprived of the chattel. (ii) He may claim damages for wrongful detention of the chattel and also redelivery of the same. In the first case, the cause of action is the act of taking away the chattel and the plaintiff is prima facie entitled to the value of the chattel by way of damages and it is irrelevant what happened to the chattel after the date of the trespass. The plaintiff's right to claim damages arises and is complete as soon as trespass has been committed : ILR 17 Cal 486 (P C), Rel. on. Thus where the plaintiff has claimed damages for trespass which took place when his cattle were wrongfully attached and taken away by the defendant the defendant incurred the liability to recompense the plaintiff to the extent of the value of the chattel on the date he took them away. If subsequently the cattle died a natural death it would not exonerate the defendant from his liability to pay damages to the extent of the value of the cattle. 1965 Raj L W 56 : I L R (1965) 15 Raj 159 : A I R 1965 Raj 121 (124) (Pt C) (Prs 10, 11, 12, 14).

——Trespass—Allottee of evacuee (property) can sue trespasser for recovery of damages for use and occupation. See Administration of Evacuee Property Act (1950), S. 2 (a). AIR 1965 Punj 119.

——Trespass on chattel in possession of bailee — Bailor's right to sue stranger for damages.

In the case of trespass, ordinarily the person who has possession of the property has a right to bring an action, but a person who has an immediate right of possession may also sue in certain circumstances.

Where there is simple bailment of a chattel, the bailee holds merely as an agent for the bailor. The one has actual possession but the other has a right of possession. In such a case the baillor has a right to sue a stranger for damages for trespass in respect of the chattel in spite of the fact that he was not in immediate possession thereof. English case-law referred. 1965 Raj L W 56 : ILR (1965) 15 Raj 159 : AIR 1965 Raj 121 (122, 123) (Pt A) (Prs 5, 7).

AIR 1957 Mad 190 (191) (Pt C) (Pr 2).

——Vicarious liability — Principle of—How far applicable to State—State taking over management of plaintiff's estate under Bihar Act 21 of 1949—Loss caused to plaintiff due to wilful default or gross neligence of estate manager—State held liable.

For applying the rule of vicarious liability in relation to the State, a distinction must be made between acts of State, or acts which are done by the State in exercise of what are known as its police powers, and other acts which do not fall within that category. In regard to acts of State it may be conceded that any wrong done to the persons or property of a private individual does not normally afford a case of action for compensation against the State. But in regard to another class of Governmental acts which, for instance, involve detention by the State of land, goods or chattles belonging to the private individual, as also acts of mercantile or commercial nature, undertaken as measures of social welfare or social control, the State cannot claim absolute immunity from the application of the principle of vicarious liability of the master for the wrongful acts of its servants. AIR 1962 SC 933 and AIR 1954 Pat 529 and AIR 1952 Cal 242, Rel. on. ——Master and Servant — Negligence of servant — Vicarious liability.

A master who is vicariously liable for the wrongful act of his servant cannot be held so liable unless the wrongful act has been done in the course of his employment. It is not necessary that every wrongful act for which the master is held liable should be proved to have been expressly authorised by the master. ——Master and Servant—Damages—(Fatal Accidents Act (1855), S. 1)—Motor Vehicles Act (1939), S. 96 (2)—Liability of Insurance Company).

The person driving defendant No. 3 had no driving licence at all and the way the vehicle was zigzagging in its movement on the road clearly indicated that it was being driven by person who did not either know how to drive or was drunk or both. The truck was at the time employed for the purpose of the business of the owners defendants 1 and 2. The driver was present in the truck at the time of the accident and he allowed defendant No. 3, take charge of the steering wheel.

Held, that defendants 1 and 2 would be liable for damages to the party who suffered on account of the servant's negligence.

Held, further that the Insurance Company could not be held liable for payment of damages under the provisions of S. 96 (2). Motor Vehicles Act. AIR 1955 Assam 157 (161) (Pt B) (Prs 12, 13) (DB).

——Master and servant—Lending of servant—Liability for damages by servant.

Where the question is, when A's servant is sent by A, who may be called the general employer, to do a certain work for B, who may be designated "the hirer", and the servant commits a tort and causes damage to a third party in the course of execution or performance of that work, who, A (the general employer) or B (the hirer) would be liable to the injured third party for the damage done the enquiry should be as to which one of them had the right to control the doing of the work in the course of execution whereof, the tort in question was committed. The answer would, of course, depend on the facts of each particular case. Same would be the result of the application of the other test namely, whether the servant had been transferred or only his services or the use and benefit thereof. The control being obviously in the temporary employer, where the servant and not merely his services are lent, the hirer or the temporary master should be regarded as the relevant master. Such transference of control, ordinarly, implies transfer of the servant, as distinguished from mere transfer of his services, in which latter case the general employer, retaining the relevant control in his hands, would remain liable. The resultant position would be the same and in no way different if we act upon the distinction between cases of skilled and unskilled labour. 62 Cal W N 696 : I L R (1959) 2 Cal 722 : AIR 1958 Cal 597 (599, 605, 606) (Prs 16, 37, 39, 40, 43) (DB).

See Fatal Accidents Act (1855), S. 1-A. AIR 1963 Him Pra 37.

——Master and Servant — Implied authority to bind master.

The relation of master and servant does not in itself confer on the servant an implied authority to bind his master. As a general rule the master is not liable for the contracts entered into by this servant without express authority. An authority to bind the master may, however, be implied from the circumstances of the particular case.

Where in a suit to recover purchase money the case of the plaintiff was that A who was in the service of B purchased a sari in the name of B and as he was the authorised agent, B was bound to pay the amount and it was shown that there were other servants who used to make purchases and B had never challenged their acts.

Held, that the mere fact that other servants used to make the purchases would not be sufficient to fasten B with liability for the act of A. Held, further, that the fact that the plaintiff believed that A was the authorised servant of B would not bind B unless it was shown that B had, by his conduct or action, held him out to be an authorised person. ILR (1955) Hyd 475 : AIR 1956 Hyd 15 (16) (Prs 7, 8).

——Master and Servant — Vicarious liability — Negligent driving of motor bus by conductor when driver was seated by side — Responsibility of driver and master.

In a suit for damages for the injuries sustained by the plaintiff when he was travelling in the defendant's bus, it was proved that the conductor was permitted by the driver to drive the bus for a distance of 12 miles and that the driver was seated by the side of the conductor, when the accident occurred on account of the negligence on the part of the conductor who was actually driving :

Held, that negligence must be attributed to driver who was the person who was lawfully authorised to drive, his negligence arising in allowing the conductor to drive in a negligent manner. The driver had the further duty of controlling the driving by the conductor and to see that he did not negligently dirve; and if in the circumstances an accident happened due to the negligence of actual driving of the bus, the driver cannot escape liability and consequently the master, who employed the driver would also equally be liable, since what has been done must be deemed to be in the course of the employment of the driver who had directed the conductor to drive. 1956 Mad W N 596 : I L R (1957) Mad 513 : 69 M L W 600 : (1956) 2 M L J 230: AIR 1956 Mad 641 (641, 642) (Prs 1, 7, 8).

——Master and servant—Vicarious liability—Master when liable for act of his servant — Liability whether dependent upon benefit to master—Banker and Customer—False assurance by bank accountant to third party about joint operation of overdraft account of customer and fraudulent representation about his status — Third party induced to part with his money on account of such representation and assurance — Liability of bank for act of accountant.

In order to fix up the liability of a master, the plaintiff has only to show that the agent was working within the scope of his authority. It is not necessary to show that the impugned act was also for the benefit of the master.

Held, on facts (i) that the action of the Defendant Bank or its employees, in allowing B partner of (third party) A to withdraw the money and goods from his account on his own signature alone, in disregard of the instructions, if any, given by him previously about joint operation by himself and A (third party) was perfectly justified and did not amount to any wrongful act. There could be, therefore, no vicarious liability arising out of that act. (ii) The Bank would not also be liable on account of the assurance which C (the Bank accountant) had given to A, about the joint operation of B's account in the Bank, because he was only in charge of maintaining the overdraft account and not anything beyond that. Such an assurance could not be said to be within the scope of business or agency or authority or duties of C as an employee and accountant of the Bank. The Bank, therefore, would not be liable for any consequences following from that assurance. ILR 41 Pat 213 : AIR 1961 Pat 488 (491 to 494, 496) (Prs 6, 7, 9, 11) (DB).

——Master and Servant — Vicarious liability — Servant's act within scope of service but unauthorised—Liabiltiy of master.

It is well established that the master is bound by the acts of the servant even if the act was unauthorised or prohibited provided the act was within the scope of the service or employment. The principle is that when a servant does any act which he is authorised by his employment to do under certain circumstances and conditions and does it in a manner which is unauthorised and improper even then the employer is liable for the wrongful act of his servant. On this principle it follows that even if a driver was authorised to drive the vehicle only upto 9 p. m. the master is liable for his wrongful act if he drove it at 11 p. m. ——Master and Servant—Master's liability for acts of servant.

Master is responsible not merely for what he authorises his servant to do, but also for the way in which he does it. If the unauthorised and wrongful act of the servant is not so connected with the authorised act as to be a mode of doing it, but is an independent act, the master is not responsible for, in such a case, the servant is not acting in the course of his employment, but has gone outside of it. ——Master and Servant — Master's liability for acts of servant — Tortious acts of servant—Liability of master.

It is settled law that a master is liable for the tortious acts of his servants committed while acting in the course of the employment if it is proved (1) that the relationship of master and servant did exist at the time of the act complained of and (2) that the act was committed in the course of the employment of the servants. ——Master and Servant — Vicarious liability—Government servant — Liability of Government for act committed by servant in performance of duty imposed by law

A master is ordinarily held liable for the acts of his servant because the presumption is that the servant acts under the master's direction and guidance and for his benefit. It is true that in certain cases the servant may go against the master's directions, and yet the law may hold the master liable because the master is supposed to control him. But where the servant acts in performance of the duties imposed upon him by law the master has no right to control him nor to give him any instructions. He is obeying the law and not the master and naturally the master should not be held liable for anything which the servant does while carrying out the aforesaid duties. ——Vicarious liability—Illegal seizure—Illegal acts of Government servants — Ratification by State — Effect.

Held, that as the State prosecuted the plaintiff's manager for the alleged violation or contravention of the Defence of India Rules, on which the illegal seizure was founded, and, in point of fact, in the course of the said criminal proceedings (which must be taken to be part of one continuous course of conduct on the part of the State) supported the detention of the seized stock of rice and resisted its return to the plaintiff and even its sale or disposal at the plaintiff's instance, that was sufficient ratification by the State to make it liable for compensation for the above illegal seizure. Further the State eventually appropriated the sale proceeds of the seized stock of rice which it sold or disposed of after getting possession from the Court at its own instance as its own property. On his finding also the State would be liable for compensation to the plaintiff. A I R 1959 Cal 597 (598) (Pt A) (Prs 7, 8) (DB).

——Vicarious liability —Illegal seizure—Ratification —Express authority—Necessity.

Obiter. — Ratification in relation to the State's liability for the illegal or unlawful acts of the officers, is to be understood in its loose or popular sense or dictionary meaning of approval or confirmation of the act and adoption of all its benefits and liabilities (obligations), that is, all its consequences and not in its strict legal sense, if that means that there can be no ratification except by a person or authority, competent and/or having the power to do the act, to be ratified, validly, as, otherwise, by ratification the illegal act itself would become valid, being rendered, by such ratification, the legal act of such a competent person or authority and the liability or claim for damages for the same would disappear. By the ratification, in its said legal sense, the tort would disappear and, along with it, the claim or liability for damages. It would then be useless, and unmeaning too,—to say that the State would be liable for the tortious acts of its officers and servants if it ratified the same and that proposition which is now a well-established and firmly settled or accepted proposition would become a meaningless platitude. There exists no material distinction between "express authority" and "ratification", as, for the above purpose and in the relevant contest, ratification will be equivalent to antecedent authority and will relate back for the inception of the particular act or transaction in question and will have a complete retrospective or retroactive effect or efficacy, having the same effect as original authority. AIR 1959 Cal 597 (598, 599) (Pt B) (Prs 9, 11) (DB).

——Vicarious liability—Crown Servants.

The master is liable where the servant, acting in a matter which is within the scope of his authority, that is, within the course of his employment, commits a wrong by exceeding the authority vested in him. A suit would lie against Government for tort committed by its servants in the course of their employment in a business or commercial undertaking owned by the State. The immunity, if any, which is afforded in respect of acts done in exercise of powers or duties under a statute is confined to acts done in exercise of governmental powers. If the acts complained of are acts in connection with a private undertaking or an undertaking not in exercise of sovereign powers, then there is no immunity.

Where on the plaintiff's failure on demand to disclose his name and address he was arrested by the railway servant, the railway servant concerned was acting in the discharge of duties which were incidental to the conduct of a commercial undertaking. The fact that S. 132 of the Indian Railways Act empowers a railway servant, under certain circumstances, to arrest, without warrant or other written authority, a passenger, does not afford immunity to the owner of the railway undertaking from the consequences of a tortious act on the part of its servant, simply because the relevant statute gives that servant authority to act in a particular way. Case law discussed. 56 Cal W N 248 : A I R 1952 Cal 142 (145, 146) (Pt B) (Prs 8, 9).

——Liability — Liability of Crown for acts of its servants — Extent of — Government of India Act (1935), S. 176.

As regards the liability of the Crown for acts of its officers and servants a distinction must be made between acts done by the Crown in pursuance of ventures which a private individual might undertake equally well, and acts done in exercise of Governmental powers which could not be lawfully exercised save by the sovereign authority or persons to whom the sovereign authority might delegate those powers. Acts of the former class are mercantile operations or operations of like kind. Acts of the second class fall under two categories. One class are acts of State properly so-called, such as making a treaty commandeering private property for war purposes, or quelling civil disturbances by force. Such acts are never justifiable in Courts of law, and since the Crown itself is not answerable for such acts in its Courts, there is no principle upon which it could be made liable for the acts of its officers or subordinates The immunity is absolute. The other class of acts are those which are done under the sanction of some municipal law or statute and in exercise of powers thereby conferred. This class can be subdivided further into two classes : (i) those consisting in detention by the Crown of land, goods or chattels belonging to the subject and (ii) those done by officers of the Crown in the discharge of their official duties. With regard to acts of the first sub-class, an action would lie in the Courts in India, and it would seem that even in England, a Petition of Right would lie. With regard to acts of sub-class (ii) however, no action would lie except in cases where it can be proved that the impugned act had been expressly authorised by the Crown or that the Crown had profited by its performance. 51 C W N 537 : ILR (1947) 2 Cal 141 (DB).

——Vicarious liability — Negligence of servant — Master's liability — Servant in Government Military Farm —Negligence by—Liability of Government.

A suit lies against the Union of India for torts committed by its servants in connection with a private undertaking or an undertaking not in exercise of sovereign powers A I R 1954 Pat 529, Ref.; A I R 1932 Cal 834, Rel. on.

Held (i) that the farm run by the Government was not an undertaking which could be referred only to its sovereign powers. It was an undertaking which any private patron could take to and was indeed in the nature of a business or commercial concern. It was immaterial whether or not the customers belonged exclusively to military organisation. (ii) That it was not an act of a Government servant which was performed in exercise of any statutory powers. The case was governed by the ordinary law of the liability of a master for the tort committed by his servant. (iii) That the accident was caused through driver's negligence. In the circumstances the Union of India would be liable as the injury sustained by the plaintiff was caused by its servant's negligence in the course of his employment. 1957 M P C 393 : 1957 Jab L J 765 : 1957 M P L J 585 : ILR (1957) Madh Pra 43 : A I R 1957 Madh Pra 159 (160, 161) (Pt A) (Prs 4, 5, 6, 11) (DB).

——Vicarious liability—Liability of State for acts of its servants—State claiming immunity from liability on ground that act was done in performance of sovereign function — Pleading and proof—Absence of—Effect.

In a suit for damages against the State for personal injuries suffered by the plaintiff due to rash and negligent driving of a motor vehicle belonging to the Civil Supply Department of the State, if the State claims immunity from the liability for the tort committed by its servant on the ground that the accident happened during the exercise of sovereign function of the State it is for the State to allege and prove the facts which would justify the view that the function that its servant was performing was a sovereign function. The question as to whether the driver was performing a sovereign function is not a pure question of law but a mixed question of law and fact. In the absence of pleading and proof it was not open to the State to raise the plea at the stage of arguments nor was the Court justified in giving a finding that the accident happened during the exercise of a sovereign function by a servant of the State. 38 Mys L J 323 : ILR (1960) Mys 130 : AIR 1960 Mys 222 (224) (Pt A) (Prs 10, 12, 14, 15) (DB).

Where the Additional District Magistrate who passed the order of requisition and acquisition of plaintiff's goods under R. 75.A of the Defence of India Rules did not commit any irregularity and his act was not tortious there can be no question of making him personally liable for the compensation payable in respect of the property. Even if his act was wrongful or tortious the State would still be liable when it ratified the act of servant by refusing to pay compensation and by profiting out of the act by retaining the amount realised by the sale. See Public Safety — Rajasthan Public Safety Ordinance (1948), S. 44. AIR 1961 Raj 64 (DB).

——Vicarious liability—Liability of Government for acts of its servant — Position in England and India compared—(Constitution of India, Art. 300.)

In England, no action in torts to lie against the Crown, in common law, firstly on the maxim that 'the king can do no wrong' secondly, it was thought that the King could not be impleaded in his own Courts. The procedure by way of petition of right was, however available to the subject and in appropriate cases, the treasury used to pay compensation ex gratia. This immunity has, however, been brought to an end to a large extent by the Crown Proceedings Act, 1947, which came into force on 1st January, 1948. In India, the position is not yet settled by legislation and, therefore, the Courts have to depend upon case-law as it has developed from time to time. 1957 Raj L W 404 : ILR (1957) 7 Raj 773 : AIR 1957 Raj 305 (307) (Pt A) (Pr 9) (DB).

——Vicarious liability—Liability of Government for acts of servant—Death caused by rash and negligent driving by Government employee — Liability of Government for damages — (Constitution of India, Art. 300)

Held, that in the circumstances of the case the State of Rajasthan must be held to be responsible for the rash and negligent act of defendant 1 just as any other ordinary employer would have been. The car was being brought from a private workshop after repairs just as a car of any private owner would have been brought back. The driver was not taking the car to quell any riot or disturbance and there was no question of his being employed in exercise of sovereign powers.

The State is in no better position in so far as it supplies cars and keeps drivers for its employees in its civil service. When Government employs persons to drive vehicles on public roads for purposes for which ordinary persons also do then in our opinion, the Ssate may be held vicariously responsible for the acts of its employees just as any private employer. ——Vicarious liability — Liability of Union of India for mistake or wrong done to public servant by another officer—(Master and Servant)—(Contract Act (1872), S. 211).

Where action is taken against a public servant by his superior officer during the course of statutory duties and the superior officer commits mistake in taking such action, the Union of India cannot be responsible vicariously for the acts of its employees because the action in question is not taken against the public servant concerned by the will or order of Union of India nor is that action ratified by it. Hence the Union of India is not responsible to pay damages in torts to the public servant in its employ on account of the mistake or wrong committed by another officer in its employ. ——Vicarious liability — Acts of Government servant—Immunity of State — Exception — Illegal confiscation and release of grain on orders of State — Damage to grain due to negligence — Liability of State — Presumption of negligence—(Constitution of India, Art. 295 (2))—(Evidence Act (1872), S. 114).

Where it is proved that the impugned act had been expressly authorised by the State or that the State has been profited by its performance, the State will not be left immune from an action for the liability arising from them. Such a case, therefore, constitutes an exception to the general rule of immunity applicable in favour of the State. AIR 1954 Pat 513, Rel. on.

Held, that the entire process of detention of the grams, their confiscation and release was expressly authorised by the Saurashtra Government and no discretion was left to its officers. As soon as it was discovered that its orders were unjustified, the Saurashtra Government should have returned the grams or accounted for them. (2) That the State could not be allowed to throw the loss on the plaintiff firm, unless it was shown that the loss could not be avoided in spite of taking reasonable care in storing them, which an ordinary prudent man was expected to bestow under similar circumstances. (3) That when food grains become unfit for human consumption during their storage in a godown, a presumption of negligence arises, unless it is shown that measures were taken to preserve them. This presumption is not displaced by merely proving that they were stored like other goods. Mere proof that other goods were also stored in the Collector's godowns without any information about their nature and the length of their storage is not sufficient to rebut the presumption. (4) That this was therefore a case in which the State had benefited by the confiscation of the grams, but that benefit was lost to it through the negligence of its servants. This loss must be borne by the State and could not be thrown on the firm. A I R 1956 Sau 62, Distinguished. (5) that the liability of the Saurashtra Government to compensate the plaintiff firm for the destruction of the grams by negligently delaying its delivery was not covered by Art. 295 (1) (b) but by Art. 295 (2) and consequently it continued to be the liability of the Saurashtra Government after the Constitution and must be discharged by it. See Constitution of India, Art. 226. AIR 1956 S C 246.

——Vicarious liability:— Principal and agent — Liability of principal for tortious act of agent.

The principal is not liable for the tortious acts of his agent unless the act which was parent of wrong itself fell within the scope of his employment as an agent. It might be that an opportunity to commit a wrong is provided to an agent in the course of his employment but that fact alone is not enough to bring the wrong itself within the scope of his employment. An opportunity to rob a patient might be provided to a doctor in the course of a surgical operation, but from that it cannot be said that the wrong committed by him was within the scope of his employment as a doctor. 26. Vis major.

——Vis Major — Act of God — What amounts to — Loss of goods entrusted to common carrier by accidental fire—Not an act of God.

An act of God will be an extraordinary occurrence due to natural causes, which is not the result of any human intervention which could not be avoided by any amount of foresight and care, e.g., a fire caused by lightning. But an accidental fire though it might not have resulted from any act of or omission of the common carrier, cannot be said to be an act of God.

——Malicious attachment—Abuse of process of Court —Malicious procuring of attachment berore judgment—Requirements.

A suit lies for abuse of the ordinary civil process. As a general rule the law allows a person to employ its process to enforce his rights and does not subject him to any liability on the ground that he has brought the suit maliciously and without reasonable or probable cause, on allegations of fact which may ultimately be proved to be false. Nevertheless there are certain civil proceedings involving interference with the liberty or property of a person or which affect or are likely to affect his reputation in case of which the law recognises the cause of action where it is alleged that such proceedings were motivated by malice and were undertaken without reasonable and probable cause.

The essential requirements of such action are that malice and absence of reasonable and probable cause must be shown. It differs, however, from malicious prosecution in that the gist of it seems to be special damage. It must be shown by the plaintiff that the defendant wrongfully and maliciously procured an order of attachment before judgment and the process of the Court was applied in pursuance of the order. He must show that the order was obtained irregularly. As a general rule he must get the order set aside and then proceed by way of a suit to establish that there was an abuse of process of Civil law. 56 Bom L R 984 : AIR 1955 Bom 67 (68) (Pt A) (Pr 2).

——Malicious attachment — Abuse of process of Court—Malicious procuring of attachment before judgment — Absence of reasonable and probable cause.

From its very nature the plaintiff has to prove the negative and, in general even slight evidence on his part may be enough to discharge the onus which lies on him. Of course, even the proof of the most express malice cannot amount to proof of absence of reasonable and probable cause. But if the plaintiff says that there was no ground for even some of the allegations made against him, that would be sufficient to discharge the onus. In such a case it would not make any difference that there was some reason to think that the plaintiff was in financial difficulties. If the plaintiff succeeds in showing that the defendant made even some of those allegations recklessly and without reasonable and probable cause and maliciously that would be indicating that the defendant was actuated by spite again sufficient for the plaintiff to discharge the onus which lies on him on this aspect of the case. 56 Bom L R 984 : AIR 1955 Bom 67 (69) (Pt B) (Pr 3).

——Malicious attachment—Abuse of process of Court —Malicious procuring of attachment before judgment—Malice.

Malice necessary to be established is not really malice in law such as may be assumed from certain acts and which is known as malice in law, but malice in fact, malus animus indicating that the defendant was actuated by spite against the plaintiff or had indirect or improper motives. At the same time the Court is entitled to take into account circumstances on which it may properly arrive at a conclusion that there is in law absence of reasonable or probable cause, if those circumstances by themselves are indicative of malice. 56 Bom L R 984 : AIR 1955 Bom 67 (69) (Pt C) (Pr 4).

——Malicious attachment—Abuse of process of Court —Malicious procuring of attachment before judgment—Cause of action for.

Service of a summons, notice, order or warrant issued by a Court on a party is by itself a process of the Court and it is quite usual and correct to refer to the handing over of the summons, notice, order or warrant as service of the process of the Court. A mere procuring of an order of attachment in a suit does not of itself afford a cause of action for damages for wrongful attachment and further a mere showing by a bailiff of the Court of the order of attachment before judgment to the party whose goods were sought to be attached is not sufficient to complete the plaintiff's cause of action in a suit of a like nature.

The test to be applied in a case of the nature under consideration is, not to ascertain whether the order of attachment was fully executed but to ascertain whether the process of the Court was in fact applied. The crucial question that must arise, therefore, is—Was anything done by the bailiff to apply the process of the Court? Was any act done by him in furtherance of the order of the Court? The matter may also be approached by asking: Was there at any time any restraint on the goods of the plaintiff in execution of the order of Court? The length of time during which the plaintiff was restrained from dealing with in his shop or carrying on the business of the shop does not matter. AIR 1925 Bom 357, Expl. and Foll. 56 Bom L R 984 : A I R 1955 Bom 67 (71) (Pt D) (Prs 5, 8).

——Wrongful attachment—Damages—Remoteness—Malicious process — Fraud — Voluntary payment — —Wrongful detention—Damages—Right to—(Equity —Conduct of plaintiff).

Held, on facts that it was difficult to discover in the agreement any contract of indemnity which was essential to support the plaintiffs' claim under that head. The attachment in the certificate proceedings was unlawful as the decree attached, in view of the Court's decision which was final and binding between all parties concerned, was, at the relevant time, the property not of the certificate debtor but of the third party Keshardeo Chamaria; nor could it be said, on the facts of the case, that the execution was applied for without: reasonable and probable cause. In the circumstances the damages which might have been occasioned to the plaintiffs or which the plaintiffs might have suffered by reason of the payment which they made or chose to make on 28th May 1934, were too remote to fix the Secretary of State with any liability therefor. Further on the facts of this case, the payment of Rs. 1,60,000 must be treated as voluntary payment and no damages could be claimed in respect thereof. No question of detention of the money by the Secretary of State could at all arise and, no damages could be claimed against the Secretary of State for any wrongful receipt or detention or detention of the money. 61 Cal W N 389 : 99 Cri L J 185 : A I R 1957 Cal 617 (620, 621, 623) (Pt C) (Prs 11, 15, 16, 23) (DB).

——Wrongful attachment — Abuse of process — Suit for damages—Basis of claim — Trespass and abuse of process.

In a suit for damages for wrongful attachment of immovable property the claim can fall under one of two heads, namely (a) trespass and (b) abuse of civil process. When the property of a person not a party to the suit is wrongly attached the action is really one founded on trespass. But there is another aspect of the matter; when the act of attachment complained of is done under judicial sanction, though at the instance of a party, the remedy is an action for abuse of civil process. There are substantial points of distinction between an action for abuse of civil process and an action for trespass to property. In the former, which resembles an action for malicious prosecution, the plaintiff has to prove absence ot reasonable and probable cause.

But in an action for trespass the plaintiff has only to prove the trespass and it is for the defendant to prove a good cause or excuse. In an action for abuse of process the plaintiff has further to prove malice on the part of the defendant; but in an action for trespass this is not necessary. 1956 Mad W N 916: (1957) 1 M L J 118 : 69 Mad L W 1017 : A I R 1957 Mad 156 (157, 158) (Prs 2 to 6) (DB).

——Wrongful attachment — Suit for damages—Onus of proof.

The onus of proving that the attached property belongs to a plaintiff who is claiming damages for wrongful attachment lies on him. But the amount of evidence which a Court would consider sufficient to discharge that burden would obviously depend upon the circumstances of each case. I L R (1952) Mys 176: AIR 1952 Mys 90 (92) (Pt A) (Prs 4, 5) (DB).

——Wronful attachment—Damages—Proof of malice not necessary.

In a case of trespass on chattel, defendant cannot urge that the plaintiff must prove that the former was actuated by malice. Even honest but mistaken belief of the defendant is not excusable. It is for the defendant to take due care and caution in making the attachment and if he is instrumental in attaching property of a third person, he is answerable in tort for trespass: A I R 1951 Raj 26 and A I R 1952 Raj 164, Disting; ILR 17 Cal 436 (PC) and 1962 Raj L W 342, Rel. on. ——Wrongful attachment of property — Cause of action for suit — Mere procuring of order of attachment not enough to sustain suit — Employment of coercive process is however sufficient — What is coercive process depends on facts and circumstances of each case.

Although mere procuring of an order of attachment, albeit malicious, would not be enough to sustain an action for damages for an abuse of process, yet once the process has been issued and served on the party concerned, the employment of the coercive process is sufficient to found an action for damages. The answer to the question whether a coercive process has been effectually employed or not is bound to depend upon the facts and circumstances of a particular case. 30 Mad L J 180; AIR 1917 Mad 145, Disting.: A I R 1922 Mad 206, Rel. on.; A I R 1955 Bom 67 and A I R 1925 Bom 357, Expl. and not Foll. ——Wrongful attachment — Malicious abuse of civil process — Suit for damages for wrongful attachment before judgment — Malice, proof of, is not enough— Absence of reasonable or probable cause should be shown.

Held, on a consideration of evidence that there was reasonable and probable cause for the application for attachment; before judgment; that the plaintiff had not led satisfactory evidence to prove that the defendant had no justification for taking proceedings under O. 38, R. 5, Civil P. C.; and that the application for attachment was made for sufficient reasons and with due regard to the requirements of law. ——Wrongful attachment — Attachment of property of stranger or wrongful attachment of judgment-debtor's property — Action for damages — Proof of malice not necessary — Ordinary damages can be allowed on failure to prove special damages:

A judgment-creditor is responsible in damages to any person who is not a party to the proceedings and whose property he wrongfully causes to be attached in execution of his decree without proof of malice. The gist of the matter in an action of tort for damages for attachment is the wrongfulness of the attachment or that such attachment amounts to a trespass on the rights of the plaintiff and where that condition is satisfied, an action for damages must be held to lie and the plaintiff need not prove malice.

The gist of the action in such a case is not the special damage but the unlawful attachment and the plaintiff cannot be deprived of ordinary damages for the actionable wrong, even if he fails to prove the special damage claimed: AIR 1925 Nag 390; AIR 1928 All 177; A I R 1938 All 508 and 1 L R 17 Cal 436, Rel. on. 1962 Raj L W 342.

——Wrongful attachment—Abuse of legal process — Suit for damages — Cause of action—What plaintiff must allege and prove—Civil P. C. (1908), S. 95.

Normally in order that the plaintiff may have a cause of action in a suit for damages for abuse of legal process, it is essential that he should allege and prove that the proceedings taken by him in order to show that the process had been got issued without reasonable and probable cause had terminated in his favour. The allegation that the warrant of attachment had been got issued out of malice and without reasonable and probable cause is wide enough and would take under its cover and include the further ground that it had been got issued with a view to compel a compromise. Accordingly, the latter cannot be held to be an additional cause of action and the suit is liable to be dismissed as not being maintainable if the proceeding relating to attachment has not terminated. 1950 Raj L W 74: A I R 1951 Raj 26 (28, 29) (Prs 4, 6) (DB).

● ——Wrongful detention—Action for — Measure of damages — Damages in addition to value of goods detained.

It is well settled that in an action for wrongful detention the plaintiff is entitled besides the redelivery of the chattel or payment of its value in the alternative, also to damages for such wrongful detention. There is however no definite criterion laid down by the decided cases as to what the measure of such damages should be. The unlawful keeping back of what belongs to another person is of itself a ground for real damages and not for nominal damages at all. The quantum of damages may be big or small but it does not make any difference to the principle. The principle of assessing the damages is the same and that is that where by the wrongful act of one man something belonging to another is either itself so injured as not to be capable of being used or is taken away so that it cannot be used at all, that of itself is a ground for damages. A who was a charcoal dealer owed certain amount of money to B. In payment of the debt A wrote a delivery order upon his commission agent X, asking him to deliver certain number of bags of coal to B. X was asked not to charge any commission. In the delivery order, the fact that the coal was to be delivered to B in payment of the debt was mentioned. The bags of coal were mentioned as B's property. When B took the delivery order to X, X refused to deliver the goods on the ground that the goods were pledged to him. B filed a suit against A and X. It was found that the story of X as to pledge was false and the document produced in support of the alleged pledge was false. Still the Court passed a decree against A only for the return of the price. Suit against X was dismissed on the ground that there was no contract between B and X. In appeal by B.

Held, that the claim against X was not on the basis of a contract but was in tort. There was a transfer of ownership of goods, even though no cash was paid as the price. There had been a completed sale. The document asking X to deliver the goods was a document of title to goods within the meaning of S. 2 (4), Sale of Goods Act. Such a document represented the goods themselves and failing to implement the direction in the delivery order X made himself liable in tort in detinue. Held further, that X, the tort-feasor was liable to restore the goods or if he had converted them the value of the goods on the relevant date. ——False imprisonment — Proof—Acquittal of plaintiff in criminal case — Effect of—Value as evidence in the civil suit.

Held, that the mere acquittal of the plaintiff on the ground on which he was acquitted was no proof in the civil suit of the fact that the defendant had made a false statement which led to the arrest of the plaintiff. In the absence of proof in the civil suit that less than thousand bricks were used by the plaintiff and therefore the statement was false the defendant could not be held liable. 1958 Cri L J 1278 : AIR 1958 All 758 (765) (Pt F) (Pr 33) (DB).

——False imprisonment — Action for damages — Burden of proof.

False imprisonment means the total restraint of a person's liberty without lawful justification. The word 'false' in that phrase signifies the unlawful character of the restraint. False imprisonment is a tort and in an action for damages for this tort, the plaintiff should prove (a) his imprisonment and (b) that it was caused by the defendant or his servants acting in the course of their employment. On proof of these facts, his ease is complete and it is then for the defendant to prove a lawful justification and not for the plaintiff to prove its absence. AIR 1959 Assam 28 (49) (Pt A) (Pr 62) (DB).

——False imprisonment — Assessment of damages — Interference with exercise of discretion of trial Court.

The assessment of damages more or less is a matter of judicial discretion to be exercised by the Court on a review of all the relevant circumstances bearing on the point; the status of the plaintiff, the damage or discomfort or inconvenience caused and the contumacious or malicious conduct of the defendant. If therefore the Court in assessing the amount of damages had lost sight of any of the relevant considerations, the Court in appeal would be perfectly justified in interfering with the exercise of that discretion. AIR 1959 Assam 28 (39, 54) (Pt F) (Prs 27, 75) (DB).

——False imprisonment—Power of Police to re-arrest after discharge of bond — Re-arrest by Police — Liability for false imprisonment — If arrest by Sub-Inspector is under orders of Superintendent they are jointly liable. See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 502. 1955 Cri L J 410 : AIR 1955 Punj 51 (DB).

——False imprisonment — Damages — Causation — Arrest by police — Causation is broken by intervention of act of judicial officer.

The chain of causation for damages for false imprisonment by police is broken when the act of a judicial officer intervenes. Damages for detention subsequent thereon cannot be recovered in an action for false imprisonment, although they often may be recovered in an action for malicious prosecution.

The liability of the defendants therefore must only be confined to the illegal arrest of the plaintiff which would extend from the time of his arrest to the time that he was placed before the Judicial Officer. Any expenses which the plaintiff had to undergo for the purpose of applying to the Judicial Officer (Magistrate) for his release are the direct consequence of the act of the defendants and they are liable to the plaintiff for that. 56 Punj L R 331 : 1955 Cri L J 410 : AIR 1955 Punj 51 (53, 54) (Pt C) (Prs 15, 17, 18) (DB).

——Wrongful confinement — What is — Damages — Suit for — Burden of proof — What plaintiff has to prove.

In order to amount to 'wrongful confinement' or 'false imprisonment' what is essential is that there must be total restraint for howsoever short a time on the liberty of person without lawful justification, and actual imprisonment in a jail is not necessary.

In a suit for damages for wrongful confinement, loss of reputation and for physical and mental suffering as well, it is for the plaintiff to prove that he was wrongfully detained or falsely imprisoned and that such detention or imprisonment was caused by the defendant. Once these facts have been proved, the case of the plaintiff is prima facie complete, and then it is for the defendant to prove that there was lawful justification for such detention.

If A gets a police officer to arrest B or put him under wrongful confinement and the police officer acts more or less as a ministerial agent of A, the latter cannot escape his liability in an action for false imprisonment. SECTION 2

——Ss. 2 (1) (h), 3 and 5— Combined effect —Trade mark registered at Madras — Rectification proceedings — Jurisdiction of Andhra Pradesh High Court.

Under the Trade and Merchandise Marks Act, 1958, rectification proceedings can be taken only in the High Court having jurisdiction, that is to say, if a trader has registered his trade mark in Bombay, then rectification proceedings will take place only in the Office at Bombay or in the High Court at Bombay, as the case may be.

In the instant case, the trade mark was got registered in the Office of the Trade Marks Registry at Madras. Therefore the Andhra Pradesh High Court has no jurisdiction to entertain the petition for rectification, cancellation, etc. (1965) 2 An W R 128 : AIR 1966 Andh Pra 102 (103, 104) (Pr 5).

——S. 2 (1) (v) (i)—'Trade marks'—Right of property in trade mark is acquired merely by using it upon or in connection with goods :irrespective of length such user and the extent of trade — Priority in adoption and use of mark is superior to priority in registration. (1964) 56 Bom L R 612 : AIR 1965 Bom 35 (46, 47, 48) (Pt B) (Prs 27, 28).

——Ss. 8, 11, 12 and 21 — Trade Mark — Infringement — Mark consisting of visual designs and words or expressions — If infringed by use of expressions not identical and phonetically similar and dissimilar —Test — "Ambal" if infringed by "Andal" in relation to snuff — Visual test and sound test — Value and weight of — Principles to be applied — Honest concurrent user — Proof — Nature of evidence to be adduced — Trade and Merchandise Marks Rules, R. 54 — Scope and effect of — Duty of applicant — Findings of Registrar of Trade Marks — If conclusive and binding on Court in appeal.

Where the controversy arising from an action for infringement in the form of an appeal against the registration of a trade mark is essentially between a pre-existing trade mark consisting of an expression which has acquired significance by close association with the goods of the proprietor of the mark and visual design which incorporates another expression as a part thereof, both the two expressions not being identical, but phonetically both similar and dissimilar, it being found as a fact that there is no deceptive resemblance between the two labels and that from the point of view of the visual test the mark sought to be registered does not offend any canon of trade mark registration by any affinity of line or forms or the totality of semblance, the party seeking registration cannot plead that the dissimilarities should be given weight particularly because the supposed offending expression is not sought to be registered by itself, but as some part of a visusal design of the proprietor opposing registration. It is also no valid defence that the goods distinguished by the two marks have circulated side by side, in identical places of business, without causing confusion or deception, with reference to the customers in the absence of adequate evidence being adduced by the party seeking registration in substantiation of such a defence.

The test of phonetic similarity is one which has to be applied on broad principles. A trade mark is undoubtedly a visual device; but it is well-established that the ascertainment of an essential feature is not to be by colour test alone. Since words can form part, or indeed the whole, of a mark it is impossible to exclude consideration of the sound or significance of those words. Evidence of honest concurrent user must be clear cogent and specific. Where affidavits are filed under R. 54 of the Trade and Merchandise Marks Rules, they must be filed under such circumstances as will fix the other side with a fair notice of this evidence. Otherwise they would not be evidence and cannot be considered by the Court on the point of honest concurrent user.

The decision of the Registrar under S. 8 of the Trade and Merchandise Marks Act should no doubt be given due respect but the Registrar does not occupy a better position than the Subordinate Civil Courts, and there is no presumption that the conclusions of the Registrar are necessarily right. The duty is that of the Court and the Court alone and the Court cannot shirk that duty by treating the conclusions of the Registrar as sacrosanct. (1964) 2 M L J 206.

❶ — S. 9—Trade mark—Registration of — Requisites for — 'Words having no direct reference' — Words 'Pharmaceutical Laboratories' have direct reference to character of goods — But length of user of such words is material factor for trade mark being registered under proviso to sub-s. —S. 9—Common user of mark in trade — Evidence and proof — Affidavits of traders filed to prove such common user—Goods not proved to be reputed under mark in question — Held affidavits not reliable and mark distinctive of goods of trader seeking registration. ILR (1965) 1 Mad 426 (DB).

—S. 9 (1) (e) — Distinctive mark — Geographical name, whether can be registered.

A geographical name adopted as a distinctive mark and without its conveying any idea of a geographical origin or association would come within clause (e) of S. 9 (1) and may be registrable if the Registrar is satisfied of its distinctiveness. For example, a food article named "Everest dish" or a hair cream called 'Himalayan snow' is certainly distinctive and there can be no valid objection to its registrability. A. S. SECTION 11

—S. 11 (a)—Prohibition against registration of trade marks — Use likely to cause deception or confusion in public mind.

For the purpose of S. 11 (a), it is necessary that the mark should have attained such reputation among the members of the public as would lead them to associate the mark only with the products of the petitioner corporation and of no one else.

Held, on facts that in spite of the fact that the sales by the respondent company of its products under the mark 'Monarch' were not very much larger than the imports and sales in this country of the products of the petitioner corporation, it could not be held that by allowing the mark 'Monarch' to be registered as applied for by the respondent company, there would be any likelihood of deception or confusion in the minds of the public. Accordingly, the petitioner corporation could not resist the registration of the mark 'Monarch' on the applications of the respondent company under Cl. ——Ss. 32, 9 and 11— Mark unregistrable under S. 9 due to its not being 'distinctive' not disentitled to protection.

A mark which is unregistrable under S. 9 (1) (e) on account of not being distinctive is not necessarily disentitled to protection in a Court under Cl. (e) of S. 11. The validity of the registration of such a trade mark cannot therefore be challenged under S. 32 (b). (1918) 35 R P C 185, Rel. on. ILR (1963) 2 Punj 62 : AIR 1964 Punj 77 (79, 80) (Pt B) (Pr 9).

——S. 109—Decision of Registrar — Interference by High Courts—Grounds for.

Before the High Court interferes with the decision of the Registrar, as to the similarity or dissimilarity of the two marks or the two words, it ought to be satisfied that the Registrar in arriving at his decision has acted upon some wrong principle, e. g., has not approached the problem in the right way, or has taken into consideration matters which he ought not to have taken into consideration or has omitted to take into consideration matters which were proper for consideration. Unless there are some such grounds as those for interfering with the decision of the Registrar, that decision ought not to be disturbed. ——S. 111 (1) — Stay of suit—Interlocutory application for stay whether sufficient.

Section 111 seeks to prevent parallel enquiries in the same matter and as such if the defendant even before the filing of the written statement and before the trial pleads in any petition or affidavit that the registration of the plaintiff's trade mark is invalid he would be entitled to ask for a stay of the suit if the other conditions specified in the section are satisfied. The word 'pleads' is not necessarily confined to averments made in plaints and written statements and can be and is given an extended meaning. The words 'The Court trying the suit' do not mean 'actually trying' 'that is at the trial itself. The words 'trying Court' cannot be in the context of the purpose the legislature seeks to enforce in this section, the Court before which the suit is pending, the Court charged with the duty of the trying the action. A suit can, therefore, be stayed on an interlocutory application. 69 Cal W N 683 : A I R 1966 Cal 247 (248, 249) (Pt A) (Prs 4, 5).

(Trade Marks Act (5 of 1940), S. 6.)

1. Scope.
2. Sub-section (1).
3. Distinctiveness—Sub-section (2).
4. Proviso to sub-section (3).

1. Scope.

——S. 6—Scope—Trade Mark—Registration—Essentials—Distinctive trade mark.

The qualifications that a trade mark must possess are mentioned in S. 6, which absolutely prohibits registration if there is an absence of any of the essential particulars. The section does not enjoin registration merely because it consists of one of the particulars and the Registrar's discretion to refuse registration granted by S. 14 is not taken away by S. 6. Further a trade mark is eligible for registration if it consists of any one of the particulars and, is not required to consist of more than one of the particulars. If the subject-matter of registration is a trade mark and contains one invented word, it is eligible for registration even if the trade mark does not contain any other particular, or it was not adapted to distinguish the applicant's goods from others. A trade mark is required to be distinctive only if it is eligible for registration under paragraph (e) but not if it is eligible for registration under any other paragraph. If the subject-matter consists of any of the particulars mentioned in paragraphs (a) to (d) but does not amount to a trade mark, there is no question of registering anything and there would be no occasion for considering the provisions of S. 6 at all. The proviso to sub-s. (3) deals with old trade marks, e. g., trade marks continuously used from a date prior to 25-2-1957 upto the date of the application for registration. A I R 1957 All 683 (689 to 691) (Pt A) (Pr 8).

——Ss. 6, 8, 9 and 10—Applicability and scope.

Sections 8, 9 and 10 which forbid registration of certain trade marks necessarily apply to trade marks which otherwise would have been registrable. They impose disqualifications which can exist side by side with the qualification mentioned in S. 6. A trade may be qualified for registration under S. 6 and yet be disqualified under Ss. 8, 9 and 10. If a trade mark does not possess the necessary qualification and is, therefore, not registrable, there would be no occasion for considering the provisions of these sections. Section 8 is directed to some positive objection to registration and not to mere lack of qualification. The words "contrary to any law" in paragraph (c) of S. 8 mean that the trade mark must be contrary to some law other than that contained in Ss. 6, 8, 9, etc. of the Act. If a trade mark is not registrable under any of the provisions of the Act itself, there would be no need of enacting S. 8 (c). A I R 1957 All 683 (691) (Pt B) (Pr 10).

——S. 6—Trade name—When can be said to lose its character by becoming publici juris.

A name originally a good trade name may lose its character and become publici juris, i. e., where the first person using the name does not claim the right to prevent others from using it, and allows other persons to use it without complaint. The name then comes to denote the article and nothing more; the name becomes publici juris, and any one who it at liberty to make the article can call it by the name by which it is usually known. No name, however can become publici juris in this way so long as the person originally entitled to the use of the name asserts his rights in that respect. Moreover, it is for those who assert that a trade name has become publici juris to prove it. (1896) 2 Ch 54, Rel. on.

Held, that the medicine known as 'Amritdhara' had not become publici juris before its registration as a trade mark and therefore was not disentitled to protection in a Court of Justice. AIR 1957 All 683 (699, 700) (Pt L) (Prs 35, 37).

——S. 6—Object and scope of.

The provisions of S. 6 are intended to protect all common words of the language from the monopoly that would result from registration as a trade mark. ILR (1960) 1 Cal 719 : AIR 1959 Cal 636 (639) (Pt C) (Pr 13) (DB).

2. Sub-section (1).

——S. 6—'Invented word' — 'Amritdhara'.

The word 'Amritdhara' is not an invented word. It is a mere combination of two words in common use in Hindi. The word 'amritdhara' has not only a meaning but also a meaning with reference to the medicine to which it is applied ; it suggests a liquid medicine to be taken internally and having the power of curing a number of diseases as nectar is supposed to do. The word 'Amritdhara' cannot be claimed to be invented simply because it was never used for a medicine previously; this is not the test of an invented word. An invented word is a word that never existed previously and not a word that existed but was not applied to a particular article previously. AIR 1957 All 683 (694, 695) (Pt E) (Pr 18).

——S. 6 (1) (d) — Applicability — Use of common word as trade mark—Test.

A trade mark registrable under S. 6 (d) can be an ordinary or common word having some significance but it must not have any significance in relation to the goods to which it is applied. It is the significance of the designation in connection with the goods upon which it is used, not its abstract significance, which is determinative. AIR 1957 All 683 (695) (Pt F) (Pr 19).

——S. 6 (1) (c) and (d)—Relative scope and distinction.

The difference between paragraphs (c) and (d) of S. 6 (1) is that if a trade mark consists of an invented word which necessarily means that the word has no meaning in relation to the goods, the question of its having direct reference to the character or quality of the goods cannot possibly arise, whereas if it consists of a common word i. e., an uninvented word, it must be such a word as has no direct reference to the character or quality of the goods. AIR 1957 All 683 (695) (Pt G) (Pr 21).

——S. 6 (1) (c) — 'Patentex' — Word is neither an invented nor a coined word — As such it cannot be registered as a trade mark. 63 Bom L R 650 : AIR 1962 Bom 88 (90) (Pt A) (Prs 3, 4).

——S. 6 (1) (e) — Word — Patentex though in long user is not registrable as a mark distinctive in its character.

In spite of the 'long user' by the petitioner of the word 'patentex' in connection with his goods it is not registrable as a trade mark distinctive in its character under sub-s. (1) (e). The word is indistinguishable from and has the same meaning as the word 'patented' Neither the word patent nor the word patented could ever be adapted in relation to goods of any person in order to distinguish them from those of others within the meaning of Cl. (e) of sub-s. (1) of S. 6, and neither of them could be registered as a trade mark in relation to any goods. Consequently the word 'patentex' too is inherently inadaptable in relation to any goods as the word 'patented' and cannot be registered as a trade mark. 63 Bom L R 650 : AIR 1962 Bom 88 (90) (Pt B) (Pr 5).

——S. 6 (1) (d) — Manufacture of fountain pens by petitioners—Petitioners applying for registration of word 'Sulekha' as trade mark — Meaning of word 'Sulekka' — It is not descriptive of goods manufactured.

The Registrar of Trade Marks is not justified in attempting to discover the meaning of the word 'Sulekha' by splitting it into 'Su' and 'lekha' and then finding out the meanings thereof from several dictionaries and then coming to the conclusion only on the basis of three of the several dictionaries that the word 'Sulekha' meant 'good writing.' 63 Bom L R 642 : AIR 1962 Bom 82 (85, 86) (Pt A) (Prs 10, 11).

——S. 6 (1) (d)—Word 'Sulekha' registered as trade mark of fountain pens by Registrar — Successor Registrar cancelling registration — Successor cannot reopen question of fact—Use of dictionaries in fixing meaning of word suggested as trade mark—Such use is not warranted. See Trade Marks Act (1940), S. 46 (4). : AIR 1962 Bom 82.

——S. 6 (1) (c)—"Invented word"—"Vapo Rub".

The word "Vapo Rub" is not an invented word. The word "Vapo Rub" suggests the combination of two ordinary English words "Vapour" and "Rub" with a slight distortion of the word "Vapour". It is no doubt true that by the dropping of "U" and "R" the word "Vapo" ceases to be an ordinary English word and some element of novelty is introduced into it, which gives it the appearance of a coined word, but still it does not attain the status of an invented word which is a word not to be found in the existing vocabulary. The word "Karsote" is however an invented word. ILR (1960) 2 Cal 174 : AIR 1959 Cal 654 (656) (Pt A) (Prs 15, 16) (DB).

——Ss. 6 (1) (e), 70—Distinctive mark—"Vapo Rub".

Held, that taking into consideration affidavits of the respondent company, the Mark 'Vapo Rub' had been continuously in user in India from a date prior to 25th February, 1937 and up to the date of the application of the respondent company for registration and even later than that:and this mark had acquired sufficient distinctiveness in fact, to entitle the mark to registration. ILR (1960) 2 Cal 174 : AIR 1959 Cal 654 (656, 657, 658) (Pt B) (Prs 17 to 19, 26, 37, 38) (DB).

——S. 6 (1)—Distinctive mark—"B. I. Phlogiston" — Nature of, Ordinarily when one of the particulars mentioned in (a), (b), (c) or (d) is shown to be present, the presumption is that the mark is distinctive. The mark "B. I. Phlogiston" is distinctive and satisfies the requirement of S. 6 (1). ILR (1960) 1 Cal 719 : AIR 1959 Cal 636 (640) (Pt E) (Pr 20) (DB).

——S. 6 (1)—Scope and applicability.

Sub-section (1) of S. 6 is couched in the negative form. Its effect is that in order to be eligible for registration a mark must contain at least one of the particulars so specified. In other words, the absence of any one of the particulars will disqualify the mark for registration though the presence of any one of them will not, ipso facto make the mark eligible for registration. Sections 8, 9, 10 and 14 (1) lay down certain other matters which may be taken into consideration in directing registration of a trade mark. 59 Cal W N 320 : ILR (1956) 2 Cal 738 : AIR 1955 Cal 519 (520, 521) (Pt A) (Pr 7) (DB).

——S. 6 (1) (b) — Mark, whether has reference to character or quality of goods—Considerations.

In considering :whether a mark has reference to the character or quality of the goods, the mark must be looked at, not in its grammatical significance, but as it would represent itself to the public at large. Such a question is a practical question to be decided by the common understanding of the term among those who used it or have occasion to use it in the course of their daily lives and not by what may be recondite meaning to be found in dictionaries. 59 Cal W N 320 : ILR (1956) 2 Cal 738 : AIR 1955 Cal 519 (521) (Pt B) (Pr 8) (DB).

——S. 6 (1) (d) — Mark must not:have direct reference to character and quality — Distinctiveness — Mark 'Rasoi' for hydrogenated cooking oil — Whether can be registered — Word of common use — Eligibility for registration.

Section 6 (1) (d) requires that mark must not have direct reference to the character or quality of the goods. A mere suggsstive reference is not direct reference.

Reference to cases is not of much help in finding out whether or not a particular word has direct reference to the character and quality of goods unless the decision lays down a principle of construction.

The word 'Rasoi' for hydrogenated cooking oil has direct reference to the character and quality of the goods and is not eligible for registration.

The requirement of distinctiveness attaches to each one of the clauses in S. 6 (1) including S. 6 (1) (d). Distinctiveness must be proved to exist in respect of the Cls. (a) to (e) of S. 6 (1).

Thus even if the word 'Rasoi' when used as a trade mark for the hydrogenated cooking oil, cannot be said to have such direct reference to the quality or character of the goods, the mark must still be proved to be distinctive in order to be eligible for registration. 59 Cal W N 320 : ILR (1956) 2 Cal 738 : AIR 1955 Cal 519 (521 to 523) (Pt C) (Prs. 10, 16, 17, 19, 21).

——S. 6 (1) — Scope and applicability — For eligibility for registration mark must contain at least one of particulars specified in S. 6 (1) — Absence of any one of particulars will disqualify mark for registration though presence of any one of them will not, ipso facto, make mark eligible. ——S. 6 (1) (c)—Invented word — Combination of two words is not invented word — 'Speedmaster' is not invented word. 40 Mys L J 646 : AIR 1963 Mys 122 (124) (Pt A) (Pr 3) (DB).

——S. 6 (1) (d)—Word "Speedmaster" has no direct reference to character of goods namely ordinary watches, clocks and time pieces.

Under S. 6 (1) (d) what is objectionable to the eligibility of a word being registered as a trade-mark is its direct reference to the character or quality of the goods. A mere suggestive significance in connection with the goods would not render it inappropriate for use as a trade-mark. For finding out whether a particular word has any direct reference to the character or quality of the goods what has to be looked into is not the strict grammatical sense of the word, but as to what it would represent to the public at large. (1928) 45 R P C 421 and AIR 1955 Cal 519, Rel. on.

The essential feature of any ordinary clock, time piece or watch, is to include the time. There being no mention of time, in the expression "Speedmaster," it cannot be said that the expression has any direct reference to the character of the goods. 40 Mys L J 641:AIR 1963 Mys 122 (125, 126) (Pt B) (Pr 5) (DB).

3. Distinctiveness—Sub-section (2).

——S. 6—Distintiveness—Onus of proof.

When the distinctitive mark is an ordinary plain word, heavy onus lies upon the applicant to prove that it has acquired distinctiveness. AIR 1957 All 683 (696) (Pt H) (Pr 24).

——S. 6 (2)—Distinctiveness—Test.

In deciding whether a distinctive trade-mark was adapted to distinguish the goods the tribunal may take into consideration whether it was inherently so adapted to distinguish or whether in fact by reason of the user or by any other circumstances it was in fact so adapted. Inherently adapted means that it has an innate quality of distinctiveness: 49 Cal W N 425, Rel. on. AIR 1957 All 683(697, 699)(Pt J)(Prs 29, 33).

——Ss. 6 (2) and (3) and 8 — Distinctiveness.

Sub-section (3) of S. 6. as indeed sub-s. (2), deals with distinctiveness and S. 8 (a) also deals with something which is likely to deceive or cause confusion and therefore is not distinctive. Where the mark was registered it must be taken that the provisions of S. 6 (2) and (3), were complied with. ILR (1955) Punj 1023 : AIR 1956 Punj 4 (5) (Pt B) (Pr 9).

——S. 6 — Distinctiveness — Evidence — Witness stating — 'Landra' machines better than others and he purchased it because it was 'Landra'— That it had connection with village name or with manufacturers not shown — Evidence held was not of much assistance. AIR 1955 N U C (Punj) 737.

4. Proviso to sub-s. (3).

●——S. 6 (1) (d) and (3), Proviso — Trade mark — Registration of — Requisites for — 'Words having no direct reference' — Words 'Pharmaceutical Laboratories' have direct reference to character of goods —But length of user of such words is material factor for trade mark being registered under Proviso to sub-s. (3). Kaviraj Pandit Durga Dutta Sharma v. Navaratna Pharmaceutical Laboratories. (1965) 2 S C A 52 : 1965 Ker L J 690 : (1965) 1 S C R 737: (1964) 2 S C W R 479 : AIR 1965 S C 980 (985, 986) (Pt A) (Prs 14 to 16).

The use of the words 'as aforesaid' in the words of the Proviso to sub-s. (3) of S. 6 'shall not refuse registration by reason only of the fact that the trade mark is not adapted to distinguish as aforesaid' takes one back first to sub-s. (3) and then on to sub-s. (2) and necessarily also the provision in S. 6 (1) (d) where marks which are incapable of acquiring distinctiveness are dealt with. Hence, even on the terms of the Proviso however construed it is not possible to escape the conclusion that a mark which is not 'adapted to distinguish' by the application of the tests laid down in S. 6 (1) could still qualify for registration by proof of acquired distinctiveness. A construction which would lead to old marks and new marks being placed on the same footing and being subjected to the same tests for registrability cannot be accepted.

A mark might have been used even prior to February 25, 1937; but it might not qualify for registration under the Proviso to S. 6 (3) by not having acquired that degree of factual distinctiveness which the Registrar considers is sufficient to enable it to qualify for registration. It is, therefore, possible to conceive of cases where even if the Proviso to S. 6 (3) were construed in the manner indicated above, there would still be scope for the rejection by the Registrar of a trade mark in use prior to the specified date. Kaviraj Pandit Durga Dutt v. Navaratna Pharmaceutical Laboratories. (1965) 2 S C A 52 : 1965 Ker L J 690 : (1965) 1 S C R 737 : (1964) 2 S C W R 479 : AIR 1965 S C 980 (987, 988) (Pt B) (Prs 20, 21, 23).

The proviso to S. 6 (3) dispenses with the proof of a trade mark being adapted to distinguish or having in fact been adopted to distinguish by user when it has been used continuously from before 25th February, 1937, and regardless of whether it was adapted to distinguish or not the mere fact that it has come to distinguish may be taken as sufficient by the Registrar. AIR 1957 All 683 (699) (Pt K) (Pr 34).

——S. 6 (3), Proviso — Application for registration made on 11-3-59 — Applicant admitting that goods in connection with which the word for which registration is claimed was not marketed in India during second world war — Held he was not entitled to registration of the word as proviso to sub-section requiring user from before 25-2-1937 to date of application was not complied with — Exclusion of period covered by war was not warranted by the proviso. 63 Bom L R 650 : AIR 1962 Bom 88 (91) (Pt C) (Pr 6).

——S. 6 — Word in common use — When can be registered as trade mark — Such word when used in combination with other words can be registered if combination is new or original — Words 'Navaratna' and 'Navaratna Pharmaceutical Loboratories' — If can be registered as trade mark.

Held, that the word 'Navaratna' a descriptive word in Ayurvedic medicines had not by the long user by the plaintiff firm on its medicinal preparations, acquired such a secondary distinctive meaning as to justify its being registered as firm's trade mark under S. 6 of the Act. But the combination of the three words 'Navaratna Pharmaceutical Laboratories' had acquired sufficient distinctiveness to justify their registration as the firm's trade mark, 1961 Ker L J 177 : (1961) 1 Ker L R 299 : 1961 Ker L T 1048 : ILR (1961) 2 Ker 435 : AIR 1962 Ker 156 (159 to 162) (Pt B) (Prs 7, 9, 12) (DB).

(Trade Marks Act (5 of 1940), S. 8.)

1. Scope.
2. Comparison of provisions of Ss. 8 and 10.
3. "Likely to deceive or to cause confusion."
4. "Or otherwise."
5. "Contrary to any law."
6. Burden of proof.

1. Scope.

●——S. 8 (a)—Duty of Registrar under S. 8 (a).

The question which the Registrar has to decide under S. 8 (a) is, whether having regard to the reputation acquired by use of a mark or a name, the mark at the date of the application for registration if used in a normal and fair manner in connection with any of the goods covered by the proposed registration, will not be reasonably likely to cause deception and confusion amongst a substantial number of persons. What he decides is a question of fact but having decided it in favour of the applicant, he has a discretion to register it or not to do so. But the discretion is judicial and for exercising it against the applicant there must be some positive objection to registration, usually arising out of an illegality inherent in the mark as applied for at the date of application for registration. (1940) 58 R P C 91 and (1951) 68 R P C 197, Rel. on. London Rubber Co, Ltd. v. Durex Products Incorporated. (1963) 2 S C W R 9: (1964) 1 S C A 503: (1964) 2 S C R 211: AIR 1963 S C 1882 (1886) (Pt C) (Pr 8).

●——S. 8 (a) — Trade mark — Reputation among general public should attach to trade mark and not to maker of goods.

In order that a trade mark may acquire reputation among the general public what is necessary is that the reputation should attach to the trade mark; it should appear that the public associated that trade mark with certain goods. The reputation is the reputation of the trade mark and not that of the maker of the goods bearing that trade mark. A trade mark may acquire a reputation in connection with the goods in respect of which it is used though a buyer may not know who the manufacturer of the goods is. Corn Products Refining Co. v. Shangrilla Food Products Ltd, 62 Bom L R 162 : (1960) 1 S C A 536: (1960) 1 S C R 968 : 1960 Mad L J (Cr) 418 : 1960 S C J 509 : AIR 1960 S C 142 (145) (Pt A) (Pr 11).

●——S. 8 — Passing off action and registration of trade mark — Different considerations — (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 11).

The onus in a passing off action rests on the plaintiff to prove whether there is likelihood of the defendants' goods being passed off as the goods of the plaintiffs. The considerations relevant in a passing off action are somewhat different than they are on an application made by registration of a mark under the Trade Marks Act and that being so the decision of a Court in a passing off action cannot be considered as relevant on the questions that the Registrar has to decide under the provisions of S. 8. The National Sewing Thread Co., Ltd. v. James Chadwick and Bros., Ltd. 1953 S C A 610 : 56 Bom L R 21 : (1953) S C J 509 : (1953) 2 M L J 215 : 1953 S C R 1028 : AIR 1953 S C 357 (363) (Pt L) (Pr 24).

——S. 8 — Scope — Section 8 is directed to some positive objection to registration and not to mere lack of qualification — Words "contrary to any law" in S. 8 (c) mean that the trade mark must be contrary to some law other than that contained in Ss. 6, 8 and 9 etc. of the Act. See Trade Marks Act (1940), S. 6. AIR 1957 All 683.

——S. 8 (a)—Discretion of Registrar — Interference in appeal — S. 76.

The matter of registration of trade mark is essentially left to the discretion of the Registrar. Particularly when the Registrar comes to the conclusion that under the provisions of S. 8 (a) and by reason of the mark of the applicant being likely to deceive or to cause confusion he was disentitled to protection in a Court of Justice, the High Court in appeal would certainly be very reluctant to interefere with the exercise of such discretion. 62 Bom L R 841 : AIR 1961 Bom 119 (120) (Pt A) (Pr 5).

——Ss. 8, 10 (2) — Opposition to application for registration—Points to be considered.

Where a proprietor applies for registration of his trade-mark and there is opposition by another proprietor of a similar trade mark, relying on S. 8 and the Registrar considers the application for registration both under S. 8 and S. 10 (2), the questions for consideration would be : (1) whether the mark of the applicant contains any matter, the use of which would, by reason of its being likely to deceive or to cause confusion, disentitle it to protection in a Court of law; and (2) whether, notwithstanding the opposition's case that the applicant's mark so nearly resembles his own as to be likely to deceive or cause confusion, the applicant has established honest concurrent user to entitle him to obtain registration under the provisions of sub-s. (2) of S. 10. 37 Mys L J 801 : ILR (1959) Mys 668 : A I R 1960 Mys 142 (144, 145) (Pt B) (Prs 7, 8) (DB).

——Ss. 8, 10 — Considerations in registering trademarks are somewhat different from those in passing off actions. AIR 1955 N U C (Mys) 5952 (DB).

——Ss. 8, 16, 76—Exercise of discretion by Registrar should not be lightly interfered with. A I R 1955 N U C (Mys) 5952 (DB).

——Ss. 8 (a), 24, 46 and 47 — Application for rectification of register—Necessary particulars not given —Competency of application.

Under S. 24 a trade mark which has been registered for seven years or more is valid in all respects and is not open to attack under S. 46 of the Act except on the ground of fraud or unless it offends against the provisions of S. 8. If an application for rectification of register contains no particulars of fraud or as to how the registration causes confusion or interference, the application is incompetent. I L R (1955) Punj 1023 : AIR 1956 Punj 4 (5) (Pt A) (Prs 6, 7, 10).

2. Comparison of provisions of Ss. 8 and 10.

●——Ss. 8 (a) and 10 (1)—Comparison of provisions of Ss. 8 (a) and 10 (1).

From a comparison of the provisions of S. 8 (a) and S. 10 (1) of the Trade Marks Act, 1940, it is clear that the object of both these provisions is to prohibit from registration marks which are likely to deceive or cause confusion. Deception or confusion may result from the fact that the marks are identical or similar or for some other reason. While sub-cl (a) of S. 8 is wide enough to cover deception or confusion resulting from any circumstance whatsoever sub-s. (1) of S. 10 is limited to deception or confusion arising out of similarity in or resemblance between two marks. In other words the enactment of this provision would show that where there is identity or similarity in two marks in respect of the same goods, or goods of the same description registration at the instance of another proprietor would be prohibited where a mark is already on the register as being the property of another proprietor. London Rubber Co., Ltd. v. Durex Products Incorporated. (1963) 2 S C W R 9 : (1964) 1 S C A 503 : (1964) 2 S C R 211 : A I R 1963 S C 1882 (1885, 1886) (Pt A) (Pr 7).

● ——Ss. 8 (a) and 10 (2) — Construction of S. 10 (2) — It is to be construed independently of sub-s. (1) — Section 8 (a) does not override effect of S. 10 (2). See Trade Marks Act (1940), S. 10 (2). A I R 1963 S C 1882.

——Ss. 8 and 10 — Operation of S. 8 compared with that of S. 10.

Looking at the scheme of Ss. 8 and 10, it seems to be clear that S. 10 has undoubtedly a restricted operation. It deals with a case where the trade mark sought to be registered is identical with the trade mark of another proprietor where there is a close resemblance between those two trade marks. So that under S. 10 what the Registrar has got to do is to compare the trade mark of the person applying for registration with the trade mark already registered by him, and if he finds that there is an identity between the two or there is a close resemblance such as to be likely to deceive or cause confusion, then he must refuse registration. Section 8 is wider in its operation. In the first place, if there is a trade mark which is likely to deceive or cause canfusion, it must be refused notwithstanding the fact that there is no identity with another trade mark nor is there any close resemblance with another trade mark. The Registrar has to come to a conclusion independently of any comparison with any registered trade mark. Further, whereas S, 10 contemplates an opposition by a proprietor of a registered trade mark, opposition under S. 8 may come even from a person who is selling goods under a trade mark which is not registered. What the Registrar has to decide is merely whether looking to all the circumstances of the case, a particular trade mark is likely to deceive or to cause confusion. ('51) 53 Bom L R 556 : ILR (1952) Bom 344 : A I R 1951 Bom 147 (152) (Pt D) (Pr 10) (DB).

——Ss. 8 and 10 (1)—Scope.

The scope of S. 8 is wider than that of S. 10 (1) since it takes into account the possibility of deception and confusion independently of similarity to any mark already registered. 36 Mys L J 139 : I L R (1957) Mys 254 : A I R 1958 Mys 134 (135) (Pt B) (Prs 4, 5) (DB).

3. "Likely to deceive or to cause confusion."

●——Ss. 8 (a) and 10 (1)—Deception or confusion—Provisions of S. 10 (1) overlap those of S. 8 (a).

Deception may result from the fact that there is some misrepresentation therein or because of its resemblance to a mark, whether registered or unregistered, or to a trade name in which a person other than the applicant had rights. Where the deception or confusion arises because of resemblance with a mark which is registered, objection to registration may come under S. 10 (1) as well. The language of S. 8 (a) is wide and though upon giving full effect to that language the provisions of S. 10 (1) would, in some respects, overlap those of S. 8 (a), there can be no justification for not giving full effect to the language used by the Legislature. ●——Ss. 8 (a), 14, 10 (1), 10 (2)—Trade name likely to "deceive and cause confusion" — Tests indicated—Overall similarity has to be considered—Trade names "Lakshmandhara" and "Amritdhara" in respect of medicinal preparation for alleviation of various ailments — Word "Lakshamandhara" held was likely to deceive and confuse persons of the class who generally purchased such preparation — "Lakshmandhara" widely advertised and sold for a long time in particular State—Proprietors of "Amritdhara" standing by and allowing "Lakshmandhara" to grow in business—Held that there was "acquiescence," to bring case within expression "special circumstances" in S. 10 (2) — Registration of "Lakshamandhara" in that particular State granted. ●——S. 8 (a)—Likely to deceive or cause confusion—Tests for determining indicated — Similarity of marks—Trade connection, between different goods—Trade marks 'Gluvita' used with reference to biscuits and 'Glucovita' used with reference to glucose, held were likely to cause deception or confusion. ●——S. 8 — 'Likely to deceive or to cause confusion'.

Under S. 8 an application made to register a trade-mark which is likely to deceive or to cause confusion has to be refused notwithstanding the fact that the mark might have no identity or close resemblance with any other trade-mark. The Registrar has to come to a conclusion on this point independently of making any comparison of the mark with any other registered trade-mark. The real question to decide in such cases is to see as to how a purchaser, who must be looked upon as an average man of ordinary intelligence, would react to a particular trade-mark, what association he would form by looking at the trade mark, and in what respect he would connect the trade-mark with the goods which he would be purchasing.

Held, that camouflaging an Eagle into a vulture by calling it such was likely to cause confusion especially when it did not represent a vulture or look like a vulture of any form or shape. ——S. 8 — "Likely to deceive" or to cause confusion —Trade mark 'Amritdhara' whether of that nature.

Whether a trade mark is likely to deceive or to cause confusion or otherwise be disentitled to protection in a Court of justice is a question of fact. Confusion that is sought to be prevented by S. 8 is confusion arising from the mode of using the trade mark or from its similarity with another trade mark or from any other particular trade mark being known in the market by a particular name. Confusion may arise from the use of a trade mark for a particular stuff on account of its identity with another trade mark for quite a different stuff. The trade mark Amritdhara is not likely to deceive by making people think that it contains nectar or has the efficacy of nectar and that it is likely to be confused with Amrit Sukhjiwan Dhara. The trade mark, in order to be disqualified must however be likely to deceive and Amritdhara is not of that nature. AIR 1957 All 683 (692, 693) (Pt D) (Prs 15, 16).

——S. 8—Causing of confusion — Applicant's desire to register certain mark — This should not be taken into consideration of question whether previous trade-mark was such which should not have been registered. AIR 1955 N U C (All) 3584.

——Ss. 8, 20—Trade-mark leading to deception and confusion — Person using trade-mark for five years but not registering it, has no right against person infringing it — He cannot object to its registration by the other on ground that it would lead to deception and confusion. AIR 1955 N U C (All) 3584.

——S. 8 (a)—Contraceptives not prepared under any patented process — Use of word patentex in connection with them amounts to a deception on the consumers — Hence petitioner would be disentitled to claim registration of the word as a trade-mark even if the case is governed by S. 6 (3). 63 Bom L R 650 : AIR 1962 Bom 88 (91) (Pt D) (Pr 7).

——Ss. 8 (a) and 10 — Scope—Registration of trade mark—Likelihood of confusion—Matters to be considered.

In the matter of registration of trade-mark the identity of design is not necessarily to be found so as to hold that the use of the applicant's mark would deceive or cause confusion. What one has to decide is whether a particular trade-mark was likely to deceive or cause confusion. What is important is to find out what is the distinguishing or essential feature of the trade mark already registered and what is the main feature or the main idea underlying that trade mark, and if it is found that the trade mark whose registration is sought contains the same distinguishing or essential feature or conveys the same idea, then ordinarily the trade mark should not be registered. The burden of proving that the particular mark which a person seeks to register is not likely to deceive or cause confusion is upon the applicant. It is for him to satisfy the Registrar or the Court that his trade-mark does not fall within the prohibition of S. 8 or 10 and therefore the same should be registered. 62 Bom L R 841 : AIR 1961 Bom 119 (120) (Pt B) (Pr 6) (DB).

——S. 8 (a)—Use of trade mark causing confusion—Evidence.

It would be difficult for any manufacturer of Bidis to get evidence of consumers of bidis so as to prove that he was confused whilst purchasing bidis. In any case where the sale of bidi with the mark claimed by the petitioner was not large, it would be further difficult to get evidence of confusion. Such evidence is not absolutely necessary to be produced whilst opposing the application for registration. The non-existence of such direct evidence does not prove at all that the Petitioner's mark which very nearly resembles the mark of the opponents is not likely to deceive or cause confusion. 62 Bom L R 841 : AIR 1961 Bom 119 (121) (Pt C) (Pr 10).

——Ss. 8 and 10—Trade-mark likely to cause deception — Prohibition on registration—Power of Registrar to impose conditions—S. 15.

Section 8 has to be read with S. 10 as otherwise impossible consequences will follow. When Ss. 8 and 10 are read together the conclusion that emanates is that the law prevents registration of a trade-mark which is likely to deceive or cause confusion but in the case of identity or similarity of trade marks which is also or may also be a ground for confusion or deception, the trade-mark could be registered under certain conditions as the Registrar may think fit to impose. S. 10 is an exception to the general prohibition against registration where the mark is likely to deceive or cause confusion; and whether conditions and limitations could or could not be imposed under S. 8, sub-s. (2) of S. 10 and S. 15 (4) give power to the Registrar to impose conditions and limitations. 64 Cal W N 110 : AIR 1959 Cal 56 (57 to 59) (Pt A) (Prs 9, 13) (DB).

——S. 8—Applicability — Findings as regards likelihood of deception or confusion—Effect.

The findings as regards the likelihood of deception or confusion also bring into operation the provisions of S. 8 under which, therefore an application for registration must fail. ILR (1960) 1 Cal 719 : AIR 1959 Cal 636 (640) (Pt F) (Pr 21) (DB).

——S. 8 (a) — Plea of deception or confusion—Evidence of rebuttal by applicant—Admissibility.

It is beyond dispute that the question of deception or confusion can be and has to be considered with reference to the opponent's use of his mark in relation to his goods during the prior period, for, the confusion or deception can arise only because it is such user that causes the mind of the consumer public to associate the opponent's mark with the goods. If evidence regarding such user by the opponent of his mark in respect of his goods is relevant it cannot be said that similar evidence in regard to the applicant's user cannot be availed of in rebuttal. 36 Mys L J 852 : ILR (1958) Mys 200 : AIR 1959 Mys 85 (86) (Pt B) (Pr 4) (DB).

——Ss. 8 and 6 (2) and (3) — Distinctiveness — Sub-s. (3) of S. 6, as indeed sub-s. (2), deals with distinctiveness and S. 8 (a) also deals with something which is likely to deceive or cause confusion and therefore is not distinctive. See Trade Marks Act (5 of 1940), S. 6 (2). AIR 1956 Punj 4.

■ ——S. 8 (a) — Application for registration of trade mark—Burden of proof.

The provisions of S. 8, like the provisions of S. 10 of the Trade Marks Act, 1940, are enabling provisions in the sense that it is not obligatory upon a proprietor of a mark to apply for its registration so as to be able to use it. But when a proprietor of a mark, in order to obtain the benefit of the provisions of the Trade Marks Act, such as a legally protected right to use it, applies for registration of his mark he must satisfy the Registrar that it does not offend against the provisions of S. 8 of the Act. The burden is on him to do so. London Rubber Co., Ltd. v. Durex Products Incorporated, (1963) 2 S C W R 9 : (1964) 1 S C A 503: (1964) 2 S C R 211: AIR 1963 S C 1882 (1886) (Pt B) (Pr 8).

1. Scope.

——S. 10—Scope, stated—Ss. 8, 9 and 10 impose disqualifications which can exist side by side with the qualification mentioned in S. 6 — A trade may be qualified for registration under S. 6 and yet be disqualified under Ss. 8, 9 and 10. See Trade Marks Act (1940), S. 6. AIR 1957 All 683.

——S. 10—Register of trade marks—Rectification of —Guiding considerations.

The object of maintaining a trade mark register is that the public should know whose goods they are buying and with whom particular goods are associated. It is therefore, essential that the register should not contain trade marks which are identical or which so closely resemble each other that an unwary purchaser may be likely to be deceived by thinking that he is buying the goods of a particular person or a particular firm or a particular industry, whereas he is buying the goods of another person or firm or industry. In trade mark cases and especially when the Court has to compare two different words the matter in the ultimate analysis must depend upon first impression. The nature and kind of customer who would be likely to buy those goods and the surrounding circumstances and the likely result if each of those trade marks is used in a normal way as a trade mark for the goods of the respective owners of the marks, must all be considered. In a case falling under the section the evidence of long user by the person accused of infringement or the failure of the complainant to prove actual deception is irrelevant. It is not for a witness or a large number of witnesses to tell the Court whether there is likelihood of deception. The Court cannot abdicate its own function which is to decide on looking at the two trade marks and on considering them phonetically whether they resemble each other and whether there is likelihood of deception. If the resemblance between the two marks is clear and obvious, then it is the duty of the Court to remove from the register a mark which is likely to cause deception. 59 Bom L R 548 : I L R (1959) Bom 702 : AIR 1958 Bom 56 (58 to 62) (Pt A) (Prs 3, 5, 6, 8, 13) (DB).

——S. 10 (1) — Scope of—Non-existence of another trade mark on date of application — Another trade mark registered before application is allowed—Effect. There is a prohibition against registration of the trade mark, although there was no such trade mark in existence at date of application. See Trade Marks Act (1940), S. 16 (1). A I R 1958 Bom 56 (DB).

——S. 10 (1) and (2)—Relative Scope.

Sub-section (2) cannot be confined only to the cases of competition between a registered trade mark and an unregistered trade-mark but on the plain reading of the language it must also include cases of competition between even unregistered trade marks none of which is on the register, so long as the fact of honest concurrent use or other special circumstances are present. It is true that sub-s. (1) commences with the words "save as provided in sub s. (2)." But that only means that the provisions of sub-s. (1) are to be read as modified by the provisions contained in sub-s. (2) and not that the provisions of sub-s. (2) should not be read independently but only as a proviso to sub-s. (1). Sub-section (2) deals with all cases of honest concurrent use or of other special circumstances in which registration of trade marks by different proprietors although they are identical or merely resembling each other could be granted by the Registrar subject to conditions and limitations as he thinks fit. In sub-s. (1) the prohibition is against registering a trade mark which competes with another registered trade-mark. Sub-section (2) imposes no such limitation.

Per Bachawat, J.: Sub-section (2) of S. 10 permits registration of an identical or resembling trade-mark though that mark does not offend against the provisions of sub-s. (1) and though the other mark is not on the register. The reasons are as follows : (1) There is no warrant for cutting the general words of sub-s. (2) and for limiting its protection to a mark which offends against the provisions in sub-s. (1); (2) The subject-matter of S. 10 is identical or resembling mark in respect of the same goods or description of goods. Sub-section (2) applies where there are such identical or not one of the marks is on the register; (3) Sub s. (3) on the face of it applies to a case where neither of the marks is on the register. Sub-section (2) clearly shows that S. 10 is not limited in its application to a case where one of the marks is already on the register; and, (4) Logically speaking the reasons for affording protection under sub-s. (2) are much stronger in a case where neither of the marks is on the register. 64 Cal W N 110 : AIR 1959 Cal 56 (58, 61) (Pt B) (Prs 12, 35) (DB).

——S. 10 (1) — Applicability — "Already on register or already registered" in S. 10 (1)—Interpretation of. See Trade Marks Act (1940), S. 16 (1). AIR 1959 Cal 56 (DB).

——S. 10 — Prohibition of registration of similar marks—Matters to be considered.

Where the two marks are not identical and there are obvious differences between the two, the important matter for consideration under S. 10 (1), is whether one so nearly resembles the other as to be likely to deceive or cause confusion. It is well established is that it is not superficial differences or differences in detail that matter but that the question has to be determined bearing in mind the essential features of the two marks. In doing so, it is not the visual impression created when the two marks are seen side by side that should constitute the criterion but whether the essential features of the mark in question leave such an impression that they are likely to cause confusion or deception in relation to the customer's recollection of the essential features of the other mark. ——S. 10—"Likely to deceive or cause confusion" — Distinguishing or essential feature of trade mark — How to find it.

In deciding whether a particular trade mark is likely to deceive or cause confusion, it is not sufficient merely to compare it with the trade mark which is already registered and whose proprietor is offering opposition to the registration of the former trade mark. What is important is to find out what is the distinguishing or essential feature of the trade mark already registered and what is the main feature or the main idea underlying that trade mark, and if it is found that the trade mark whose registration is sought contains the same distinguishing or essential feature or conveys the same idea, then ordinarily the registrar is right if he comes to the conclusion that the trade mark should not be registered. The real question is as to how a purchaser, who must be looked upon as an average man of ordinary intelligence, would re.act to a particular trade mark what association he would form by looking at the trade mark, and in what respect he would connect the trade mark with the goods which he would be purchasing. ('51) 53 Bom L R 556 : ILR (1952) Bom 344 : A I R 1951 Bom 147 (152, 154) (Pt G) (Prs 10, 14) (DB).

——S. 10 (1) — Resemblance likely to deceive or cause confusion — Test—Absence of evidence of actual cases—Effect.

Whether or not there is any resemblance and whether or not the resemblance is such as likely to deceive or cause confusion are questions which have to be decided by the Registrar on the Court on the basis of their own understanding of the matter. The possession clearly is that the Registrar in the first place and then when the matter goes to the Court, the Court has to decide for itself quite apart from evidence of cases of actual confusion or the opinions of experts as to the likelihood of confusion, as to the inherent probability of the confusion. In making a decision on this question, the Registrar and the Court has to take into consideration all the surrounding circumstances—the extent of the resemblance, visual or phonetic, the nature of the market of the goods, the character, education and general mental equipment of the persons who are likely to purchase these goods and all other matters which are relevant. The absence of any evidence as regards any actual case of confusion or deception is, therefore, of no value whatsoever. 1899 A C 83 and (1900) R P C 628, Rel. on. ILR (1960) 1 Cal 719 : AIR 1959 Cal 636 (637, 638) (Pt A) (Prs 3, 4) (DB).

Where the opponents have a registered trade mark in respect of articles of perfumery such as soaps, perfumery, cosmetics, heir lotions, and essential oils in class 3 and the applicant's goods namely agarbatties in respect of which he seeks registration of his trade mark also come under the same description, the marks being closely similar in the sense that they are likely to deceive or cause confusion, the terms of S. 10 (1) apply and make it imperative that registration should be refused. 36 Mys L J 852 : ILR (1958) Mys 200 : AIR 1959 Mys 85 (87) (Pt D) (Pr 7) (DB).

4. Sub-section (2).

——Ss. 10 (2) and 8 (a) — Construction of S. 10 (2) —It is to be construed independently of sub-s. (1) —S. 8 (a) does not override effect of S. 10 (2).

When considered by itself S. 10 (2), permits simultaneous registration of identical or similar marks at the instance of several proprietors, quite irrespective of the question whether an identical or similar mark is already on the register. Its language is wide enough to embrace a mark which is already on the register as well as a mark which is not on the register at all. The mere fact that sub-s. (1) is made subject to the provisions of sub-s. (2) cannot justify the narrowing of the scope of the language used by the Legislature in sub-s. (2). The provisions of sub-s. (2) of S. 10 are by way of an exception to the prohibitory provisions of the Trade Marks Act. Those provisions are contained in S. 8 (a) and S. 10 (1). The condition for the applicability of sub-s. (1) of S. 10 is undoubtedly the existence of an identical or similar mark on the register. Further, the provision in S. 8 does not override the statutory effect of S. 10 (2) of honest concurrent use and an objection under S. 8 (a) may be disposed of it there is evidence that the trade mark has been honestly used without confusion resulting. ——S. 10 (2)—'Honest concurrent use' — Question of volume is relevant and is question of fact — Commercial use of mark is to be considered and not its value in money.

The question of volume of use is always a relevant question in considering 'honest concurrent use' under S. 10 (2) of the Act. It depends on the facts of each case. No hard and fast rule can be laid down regarding the volume of use for the purposes of sub-s. (2) of S. 10. Ordinarily it would be sufficient if it is shown that there was a commercial use of the mark. Trade mark is a kind of property and is entitled to protection under the law, irrespective of its value in money so long as it has some business or commercial value. AIR 1959 Cal 56, Affirmed. ——S. 10 (2) — 'Other special circumstances' — These must be connected with the use of the mark.

A special circumstances must be connected with the use of the mark. The words 'or of other special circumstances' include any circumstances peculiar to the application in relation to the subject-matter of the application and this include use by an applicant of his mark before the conflicting mark was registered or used. Hence, the socio-economic consideration of the use of the articles is not a relevant circumstances. 1957 R P C 289, Rel. on. Held, that when the applicant had been openly advertising his medicine through the same medium and increasing its sale no element of dishonesty could be attributed to him. ——S. 10 (2)—Other special circumstance—Estoppel against objector — (Evidence Act (1872), S. 115).

In order to invoke estoppel against the objector to the registration of a trade mark, there must be elements in the evidence of long concurrent user by the applicant though not honest, within the knowledge of the objector; that the circumstances were such as to lead to the reasonable inference that the objector waived his right to object to that used. 1958 All L J 474 : ILR (1958) 2 All 721 : AIR 1958 All 823 (829) (Pt E) (Pr 30) (DB).

——Ss. 10 (2) and 15 (4)—Registrar's power to allow amendment of trade mark.

The words 'conditions and limitations' in Ss. 10 (2) and 15 (4) of the Act have no reference to the power of amendment of the trade mark. The words 'conditions and limitations' have reference to such things like mode of user of the trade mark or as to the area of its user. The only power the Registrar has of allowing amendment of a trade mark proposed for registration if before or at the time of acceptance of the mark for advertisement for purposes of registration; and also after acceptance, provided the applicant makes application for or asks for such amendment. ILR (1960) 2 Cal 174 : AIR 1959 Cal 654 (658) (Pt D) (Prs 40, 41) (DB).

——S. 10 (2)— Concurrent use of trade mark proved to be dishonest — Registration on basis of 'other special circumstances'—Permissibility.

Where the concurrent use of a trade mark has been proved to be dishonest, it is open to the Registrar to permit registration on the basis of other special circumstances. The intention of the legislature clearly was that in two classes of cases registration would be permitted when there is identity or resemblance likely to deceive or cause confusion — the first class to consist of cases of honest concurrent use and the second class to consist of cases where there are special circumstances not being cases of dishonest concurrent use. The whole idea behind the law of registration of trade marks is to prevent fraudulent use of the marks of one proprietor by another proprietor. ILR (1960) 1 Cal 719 : AIR 1959 Cal 636 (640) (Pt D) (Pr 18) (DB).

——S. 10 (2) — Concurrent use—Question of fact.

Concurrent use concerns the volume of use which is a question of fact. There is no express statutory emphasis that the use should be large and substantial. 64 Cal W N 110 : AIR 1959 Cal 56 (59) (Pt D) (Prs 15, 19) (DB).

——S. 10 (2)—Concurrent use—Finding of Registrar —Interference in appeal.

In S. 10 (2) it is the "opinion of the Registrar" which is expressly said to judge if the case of honest concurrent use makes it proper to permit registration. Of course the opinion of the Registrar can be revised in an appeal under S. 76 but the statute has made his opinion the first standard on the question. Unless that standard is obviously not discharged, the High Court should hesitate on a disputed question of fact, namely the concurrent use, to take a contrary view on the ground merely that a different view is possible. 64 Cal W N 110: AIR 1959 Cal 56 (59) (Pt E) (Pr 17) (DB).

——S. 10 (2)—"Other special circumstances."

The words "other special circumstances" are designedly left vague by the statute. It is difficult to exhaust or categorise such special circumstances in which competing trade-marks could be permitted to be registered with limitations and conditions. The word "other special circumstances" even construed ejusdem generis with "honest concurrent use" can include a variety of special circumstances relating to the use of a trade-mark. To state a few, the name for which registration is sought being the name of the applicant-company itself, long user of the name and the resultant hardship to the applicant if registration is denied, the socio-economic consideration of the user and that the registration sought is for goods which are very different from the goods of the opposer are special circumstances. 64 Cal W N 110 : AIR 1959 Cal 56 (60) (Pt G) (Pr 22) (DB).

——Ss. 10 (2) and 17— Scope—Registration of trade mark in joint names of two persons—Validity.

A obtained a registration of a trade mark in his name on a false representation that he was the sole proprietor of the trade mark though in fact his father was the sole proprietor. Subsequently A's brother B who had been using the same trade mark which his father was using applied under S. 46 (2) for cancellation of the entry in A's name. The Judge who entertained the application came to the conclusion that the registration was invalid as being obtained by fraud but ordered a joint registration in the names of A and B.

Held, that the order directing joint registration was not justified and must be set aside. Section 10 (2) of the Act refers to concurrent user which is honest that is independent concurrent user that is user which cannot be traced to the same source. Before a joint registration is ordered under S. 17 there should be applications from at least two persons and the Registrar should have an opportunity of forming an opinion by reason of special circumstances existing in the case. 1956 Mad W N 751 : I L R (1957) Mad 206 : 69 Mad L W 739 : (1956) 2 Mad L J 469 : AIR 1957 Mad 76 (78) (Pt B) (Pr 4) (DB).

——Ss. 10 (2), 17 (2), 46 (2) — Entry made without sufficient cause—Order to be made.

Held, that on the conclusion that the registration had been procured by fraud in that it was obtained on material misstatements in the application for registration of the trade mark this became a case where the entry had been made in the register without sufficient cause and become liable to be cancelled or varied as the tribunal thought fit under S. 46 (2). This was not a fit case, however, for cancellation but only for variation of the entry in the register, this was a case which would fall under S. 10 (2). In the special circumstances of the case it was unnecessary to cancel the entry made in the Trade Marks Register and the proper thing to do was to vary it by registering both the petitioner and the respondent as joint proprietors of the trade mark and that the proprietary rights in the trade mark would naturally date from the dates of their respective settlement deeds. This joint registration would also be in conformity with the spirit if not the letter of S. 17 (2) as the petitioner and the respondent did not being governed by the Aliyasanthana law constitute members of a joint family coparcenary and the two factories did not constitute joint family assets. A I R 1956 Mad 184 (188) (Pt E) (Prs 25, 26).

——S. 10 (2)—Action for infringement—Plea of concurrent and honest user—Procedure—Stay of suit.

What is commonly described as a plea of honest and concurrent user in an action for infringement really connotes that the defendant contends that on the strength of honest and concurrent user he is entitled to get his mark also registered under the provisions of law. It is only upon the registration that the plea becomes a complete and absolute plea and not before. When therefore an unregistered proprietor raises a plea of honest and concurrent user in a suit for infringement at the instance of a registered proprietor the proper thing for the defendant to do to prove the bona fides of his claim is to make an application for registration on the strength of honest and concurrent user and simultaneously ask the Court to stay further proceedings in the suit. In such an event the proper course for the Court to take would also be to stay further proceedings so that the defendant may substantiate his defence because to refuse to stay and to proceed with the suit would be to deprive the defendant of a substantial and strong defence. Another reason why the suit should be stayed pending the completion or disposal of the application for registration is that the extent and ambit of the injunction which the Court may grant will also depend to a considerable extent upon the 'conditions and limitations' if any which the Registrar might impose while granting the registration in terms of sub-s. (2) of S. 10. 37 Mys L J 801 : ILR (1959) Mys 668 : A I R 1960 Mys 142 (144) (Pt A) (Pr 5) (DB).

——Ss. 10 (2) and 8 — Opposition to application for registration — Points to be considered by Registrar stated — Nature of similarity — Total impression on minds of customers has to be considered and not careful scrutiny of details. See Trade Marks Act (1940), S. 8. AIR 1960 Mys 142 (DB).

——S. 10 (2) — Concurrent user— Length of time to be considered.

The user that is relevant for the purpose of S. 10 (2) is concurrent user and not merely contemporaneous user. The concurrence of the user has to be examined from the point of view of the length of time during which the mark has been used by the applicant as well as the extent of his trade or quantity of the turnover. 37 Mys L J 801: ILR (1959) Mys 668: AIR 1960 Mys 142 (145) (Pt C) (Pr 9) (DB).

——S. 10 (2)—Honest and concurrent user — Discretion of Registrar.

The very basis for the application of sub-s. (2) of S. 10 is honest user. Both the question of the similarity between the marks and the question of honesty are matters for adjudication by the Registrar. Even if finding on adjudication of these matters of fact is in favour of the view that the applicant before him is honest in user although the marks may have been similar it is still a matter of discretion with him whether or not to allow registration under that provision. That discretion, no doubt, has to be exercised judicially. The basis for such exercise has been stated to be that the fact that one merchant or trader has obtained registration for his mark ought not to be permitted if possible to destroy or prejudicially affect the trade of other persons who have conducted themselves honestly. If there is no such honesty at all it is not possible to contend that the Registrar has not exercised his discretion judicially in refusing registration. 37 Mys L J 801 : ILR (1959) Mys 668 : A I R 1960 Mys 142 (145, 146) (Pt D) (Pr 15) (DB).

——S. 10 (2)—Concurrent use of trade mark—Use of only prominent feature —Not sufficient.

The honest concurrent use relied upon by the applicant under S. 10 (2) must refer to the trade mark sought to be registered. It is not enough if one feature of it even though it may be a prominent feature has been used. 36 Mys L J 852 : ILR (1958) Mys 200 : AIR 1959 Mys 85 (86) (Pt A) (Pr 3) (DB).

5. Burden of proof.

●——S. 10 (2) — Concurrent use —Reasonable probability of confusion —Burden of proof.

The question of discharging the burden of establishing that there was no reasonable probability of confusion cannot arise in a case of honest concurrent use. However that burden may be taken as discharged by the eloquent fact that throughout there has not been a single instance of confusion.

Held, that there was no likelihood of confusion or deception in this case because the respondent's goods were confined to contraceptives for use by women which could only be used with medical assistance while the appellant's contraceptives were essentially for men. London Rubber Co., Ltd. v. Durex Products Incorporated. (1963) 2 S C W R 9 : (1964) 1 S C A 503 : (1964) 2 S C R 211 : AIR 1963 S C 1882 (1890) (Pt I) (Pr 23).

——Ss. 10 and 8—Burden of proof —It is for the applicant to statisfy the Registrar that his trade mark does not fall within prohibition of S. 8 or S. 10 and therefore it should be registered. See Trade Marks Act (5 of 1940), S. 8. AIR 1951 Bom 147 (DB).

——S. 10—Onus—Onus of proving that a mark is not likely to deceive or cause confusion is on the applicant and if it is not clear that deception may not result the registration should be refused. ILR (1960) 2 Cal 174 : A I R 1959 Cal 654 (659) (Pt F) (Pr 46) (DB).

——S. 10 (1)—Whether resemblance is not likely to deceive or cause confusion — Onus of proof — 'B. I. Phlogiston' resembles 'Antiphlogistine' — (Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101 to 104).

The burden of proving that the resemblance in the marks is not likely to deceive or to cause confusion is on the applicant and where there is doubt whether there is such likelihood or not he will not be entitled to registration.

Held, that the word 'B. I. Phlogiston' resembled the registered trade mark 'Antiphlogistine' so much as to be likely to deceive and cause confusion and therefore the applicant was not entitled to registration of that word. ILR (1960) 1 Cal 719 : AIR 1959 Cal 636 (639) (Pt B) (Pr 11) (DB).

——S. 10 — Burden of Proof is on applicant. See Trade Marks Act (1940), S. 8. AIR 1955 N U C (Hyd) 2361 (DB).

——S. 11 — Registrar's duty to consider registration of combination mark as a whole.

Section 11 gives an indication that it is the whole mark which is proposed for registration that is to be registered. The Deputy Registrar had no power to cut out the words 'Vapour Rub' from the appellant's trade mark and direct registration of the amended mark 'Karsote'. The Deputy Registrar had no power to dissect the mark and then conclude that some component parts were distinctive and some were not distinctive, and on that ground direct registration of a part of the mark and refuse registration of the other parts. He must consider the combination mark as a whole. ILR (1960) 2 Cal 174 : AIR 1959 Cal 654 (659) (Pt E) (Pr 43) (DB).

●——S. 13—Imposition of disclaimer under—Power when arises.

The power of the tribunal to require a disclaimer under the section is conditioned and made dependent upon the existence of one of two things which are set out in cls. (a) and (b) and which have been called the jurisdictional facts. It is only on the establishment of one of the two jurisdictional facts that the Registrar's jurisdiction regarding imposition of a disclaimer arises. Registrar of Trade Marks v. Ashok Chandra Rakhit, Ltd., 1955 Mad W N 935 : 1955 S C J 562 : (1955) 2 M L J (S C) 76 : 1955 Andh W R (S C) 330 : 1955 S C A 1043 : (1955) 2 S C R 252 : AIR 1955 S C 558 (561, 562) (Pt A) (Pr 6).

● ——S. 13 — Power to impose disclaimer — Nature and exercise of.

The exercise of the power of imposing disclaimer conferred on the Registrar by S. 13 always remains a matter of discretion to be exercised, not capriciously or arbitrarily but, according to sound principles laid down for the exercise of all judicial discretion. Registrar of Trade Marks v. Ashok Chandra Rakhit, Ltd., 1955 Mad W N 935 : 1955 S C J 562 : (1955) 2 M L J (S C) 76 : 1955 Andh W R (S C) 330 : 1955 S C A 1043 : (1955) 2 S C R 252 : AIR 1955 S C 558 (561, 562) (Pt B) (Pr 6).

The avowed purpose of the section in requiring a disclaimer is not to confer any direct benefit on the rival traders or the general public but to define the rights of the proprietor under the registration, so as to minimise, even if it cannot wholly eliminate, the possibility of extravagant and unauthorised claims being made on the score of registration of the trademarks. ● ——S. 13, Proviso—Scope of — Rights under other Acts are preserved.

The proviso to S. 13 preserves intact any right which the proprietor may otherwise under any other law have in relation to the mark or any part thereof. The disclaimer is only for the purposes of the Act. It does not affect the rights of the Proprietor except such as arise out of registration. Registrar of Trade Marks v. ● ——S. 13 (2) (n) — Imposition of disclaimer — Exercise of discretion by Registrar—Interference by High Court—Principles.

S. 13 confides a discretionary power of imposing disclaimer in the 'tribunal' which, by virtue of S. 2 (n) means the Registrar or, in proper proceedings, the High Court. It is however to be remembered that it is the Registrar to whom in the first instance is committed the discretionary power. If that authority has exercised his discretion in good faith and not in violation of any law such exercise of discretion should not be interfered with by the High Court merely on the ground that, in the opinion of the High Court, it could have been exercised differently or even that the High Court would have exercised it differently, had the matter been brought before it in the first instance. The proper approach in such a case is for the High Court to consider, whether the Registrar had really gone so wrong as to make it necessary to interfere with his discretion. Registrar of Trade Marks v. Ashok Chandra Rakhit, Ltd., 1955 Mad W N 935 : 1955 S C J 562 : 1955 Andh W R (SC) 330 : (1955) 2 M L J (SC) 76 : 1955 S C A 1043 : (1955) 2 S C R 252 : AIR 1955 S C 558 (562, 566) (Pt G) (Prs 7, 16).

● ——Ss. 14, 8 (a), 10 (1), 10 (2) — Trade name likely to 'deceive and cause confusion' — Tests — Overall similarity has to be considered — Trade names 'Lakshmandhara' and 'Amritdhara' in respect of medicinal preparation for alleviation of various ailments—Word 'Lakshmandhara' held was likely to deceive and confuse persons of the class who generally purchased such preparation — 'Lakshmandhara' widely advertised and sold for a long time in particular state — Proprietors of 'Amritdhara' standing by and allowing 'Lakshmandhara' to grow in business—Held, that there was 'acquiescence' to bring case within expression 'special circumstances' in S. 10 (2) —Registration of 'Lakshmandhara' in that particular state granted. AIR 1958 All 823, Reversed. Amritdhara Pharmacy v. ——Ss. 14 (3), 48 (1) — Amendment of application after advertisement—Power of Registrar.

It is not possible to give to the expression "to amend his application" in S. 14 (3) very wide connotation. The proper construction of S. 14 (3) is to equate the discretion exercised by the Registrar and S. 48 (1) with the discretion conferred upon him under S. 14 (3). Just as the Registrar cannot allow an amendment of a trade mark after registration which would substantially affect its identity, similarly the Registrar has no power to allow an amendment of a trade mark after the original trade mark has been advertised in a manner affecting the identity of the trade mark. When an application for amendment is made after acceptance, it is for the Registrar to apply his mind and consider whether the application is such as would result in substantially affecting the identity of the trade mark. If he comes to that conclusion, then the amended application must be advertised. If, on the other hand, he comes to the conclusion that the amendment will not substantially affect the identity of the trade mark, then it is discretionary with him whether he should or should not order advertisement. 59 Bom L R 539 :

ILR (1957) Bom 564 : AIR 1958 Bom 47 (49, 50) (Pt A) (Prs 5, 7) (DB).

——S. 14 (3)—Amendment—Identity of trade marks—Factors involved — Judgment of Registrar — Interference by Court—Grounds.

The question of identity of trade marks depends upon various factors — How the particular object appears in one trade mark and how it appears in the other, what part of the object is emphasised in one and what part in the other, what impression one object will give to the purchaser and what impression the other object will give to the purchaser—and therefore merely because the same bird appears in both the trade marks, they will not be necessarily identical. The Registrar of Trade Marks is a much better judge in these matters than the Court can ever be. But the decision of the Registrar must be given after considering the relevant and material provisions of the law and after applying his mind to what the law directs him to apply his mind to. If his judgment is given without these considerations, then if the Court interferes, it is not interfering with his discretion but it is interfering because the Registrar has failed to exercise properly the jurisdiction. 59 Bom L R 539 : I L R (1957) Bom 564 : A I R 1958 Bom 47 (50, 51) (Pt B) (Prs 7, 8, 10) (DB).

——S. 14 — Registration of trade mark — Discretion of Registrar.

In the case of trade marks public interest is also concerned, and if by reason of the abandoning by the opponent of his right in a particular area for an unduly long time the trade mark has come to be associated in that area with the goods of the petitioner, it will not be right to refuse registration to the petitioner in that area. The minority of the opponent will not be of assistance when as a fact his father, who had abandoned the right was alive during a period of five years after such abandonment. A I R 1956 Bom 641 (644) (Pt D) (Pr 9).

——S. 14—Registration of trade mark is not absolute right.

There is no absolute right in anyone to obtain the registration of a trade mark. The effect of Ss. 8, 10 and 14 is this that if S. 8 or S, 10 is applicable, then the Registrar has no descretion at all; he must refuse registration. But though the case may not fall within the ambit of S. 8 or S. 10 he has discretion under S. 14 even so not to register the trade mark. 57 Bom L R 1006 : I L R (1955) Bom 976 : A I R 1956 Bom 76 (77) (Pt A) (Pr 4) (DB).

The four months' period prescribed by R. 30 read with S. 15 (2) for filing the notice of opposition to the registration or a trade mark should be counted from the date of despatch of the Trade Marks Journal containing the advertisement to the subscribers and not from the date when it is got printed or few copies or cuttings distributed among the subordinate offices of the Trade Marks Registry or among the applicants for registration. The reason is that the object of advertisement will be served only when the journal is distributed among the subscribers or otherwise made available to the public. SECTION 16

——S. 16 (1)—Applies to applications accepted with amendments, conditions and modifications. A I R 1955 N U C (All) 3584.

——Ss. 16 (1), 10 (1) and 46—Relative scope — Non-existence of another trade mark on date of application—Another trade mark registered before application is allowed—Effect.

Section 16 (1) is a procedural section, and must be read subject to S. 10 (1) which is a substantive section. Section 10 (1) provides that no trade mark shall be registered which is identical with a trade mark belonging to a different proprietor and already on the register in respect of the same goods or description of goods, or which so nearly resembles such trade mark as to be likely to deceive or cause confusion. Therefore, when on the date of the registration there is a trade mark on the register, closely resembling the trade mark of the applicant for registration, then there is a prohibition against the registration of his trade mark, although there was no such trade mark in existence at the date of his application. 59 Bom L R 548 : I L R (1957) Bom 702 : A I R 1958 Bom 56 (61) (Pt D) (Pr 12) (DB).

——S. 16 — Power of Registrar—Decision on points not in issue—Competency.

It certainly is the Registrar's duty to register a trade mark and to see whether a trade mark is registrable or not. But that does not mean that the Registrar should use the power of coming to a decision either on facts which do not exist or on facts which he invests or on facts on which no opportunity is given to the applicant to bring further evidence to satisfy him. Such a course would be procedurally hard and unfair. A I R 1959 Cal 116 (116, 117) (Prs 6, 8) (DB).

——S. 16 (1) — Applicability — Doctrine of relation back—S. 10 (1) — "Already on register or already registered"—Meaning of.

Obiter : It may be that the doctrine of "relation back" under S. 16 (1) does not apply to the expression "already on register or already registered" in S. 10 (1) not only because S. 16 appears in Chap. III relating to "procedure for and duration of registration" so that the statute there provided that the date of registration shall be deemed to be date of the application for registration but also because the expression "already on the register or already registered" in S. 10 (1) might mean the date actually on which the trade-mark is put on the register and not the notional date as provided in S. 16 (1) even though such notional date is for the purposes of the Act. 64 Cal W N 110 : AIR 1959 Cal 56 (59) (Pt C) (Pr 14) (DB).

——S. 17 — Exercise of discretion by Registrar — Equitable principle and its application in exercise of discretion under S. 14.

The Registrar has, under S. 14, wide discretion subject to the only limitation that it must not be arbitrarily of capriciously exercised. In deciding what are the principles upon which that discretion should be exercised, it is not right totally to exclude equitable principles. It is open to the Registrar to take into consideration the agreement arrived at between the parties. And, if he is satisfied that in ignoring a solemn agreement and in attempting to act contrary to its clear provisions the applicant's case is not founded in truth, then the Registrar has the discretion to compel the applicant to adhere to his solemn covenant and not to give him a relief which will constitute a breach of that covenant. For, no Court of conscience will permit a relief to be granted which is in its very nature unconscionable. (1890) 15 A C 252, Rel. on. And as considerations of equity cannot be discarded or ignored when the Registrar exercises his discretion under S. 14, then it is clear that if a party comes to Court with a false case the Court may refuse to grant him relief. Whether the falsity in any particular case is such as to disentitle him to relief will depend upon the facts and circumstances of each case. 57 Bom L R 1006 : ILR (1955) Bom 976 : A I R 1956 Bom 76 (78, 79) (Pt B) (Prs 6, 8, 9) (DB).

——Ss. 20, 21 (1) and 73 — Passing of action related to use of plaintiff's trade mark — Action, if affected by S. 73.

The passing off actions which are not affected by the provisions of the Trade Marks Act are those actions which are unrelated to the use of the aggrieved person's trade mark. If they are related to it those suits will necessarily require the determination of the question whether there had been an infringement of the trade mark and therefore would be affected by the provisions of S. 73.

No passing of action is likely to succeed when it is based on the use of the plainfiff's trade mark, unless it be shown that the mark used by the defendant is identical or similar to the plnintiff's trade mark and that it had been used in such a manner as to lead persons to consider that that mark was being used as trade mark, meaning thereby that the goods were the goods of the persons who had a right in the trade mark or in a manner as to indicate that the goods were of the other person. 1955 All L J 555 : A I R 1955 All 404 (406, 407) (Prs 8 to 11) (DB).

——S. 20 — Passing off — Question of resemblance and likelihood of deception—Dissimilarity in object represented—Relevancy of.

The question of resemblance between two trademarks and the likelihood of deception are to be considered by reference not only to the whole mark but also to the distinguishing or essential feature if any of a trade mark. There may be cases where dissimilarity in the object represented may be the deciding factor. If, for instance, a particular class of goods are sold by several dealers, all under different kinds of 'Eagle' Trade marks, e.g,, then the purchaser is expected to know the difference between one trade mark and another, knowing as he does that more than one person sells goods under the same appellation. But when only a single proprietor sells a particular class of goods under the 'Eagle' brand and his goods are known as Eagle or Eagley, then the position is different; any attempt to sell goods under a trade mark which fixes in the mind of the purchaser the association of an eagle would not be justified. 53 Bom L R 556 : I L R (1952) Bom 344 : AIR 1951 Bom 147 (DB).

The acquisition of an exclusive right to a mark or name in connection with a particular article of commerce cannot entitle the owner of that right to prohibit the use by others of such mark or name in connection with goods of a totally different character. The mark 'Bata' not having been associated in the public mind with lunghis or handkerchiefs, these goods being of a totally different character from those of the Bata Shoe Co.'s goods, a traders' user of the said mark or name in respect of lunghis or handkerchiefs of his manufacture cannot constitute any passing off of his goods as those of the Bata Shoe Co., (1887) 12 A C 453 and (1885) 30 Ch D 454, Rel. on., (1898) 16 R P C 12, Dissented from. 61 Cal W N 122 : 98 Cal L J 173 : AIR 1957 Cal 120 (121, 122) (Prs 9, 17) (DB).

——S. 20 — Passing off — Law before Trade Marks Act, 1940 was common law of England according to which trade mark was acquired by prior user.

The law applicable in this country before the Trade Marks Act 1940 was the common law of England. Under the common law of England, title to a trade mark was acquired by prior user of the mark. User of a mark means, not what the person who uses the mark has in his own mind about it, but what the public would understand when the trade mark is impressed upon the goods, or upon some wrapper or case containing the goods, in such a way that the public would necessarily understand the words to be, and alone to be the trade mark of the person who uses them. ——S. 20—Passing off action—Infringement of trade mark—Assessment of decree of resemblance between two trade marks — Prominent features of trade mark alone to be taken into account.

In a suit for injunction to restrain the defendant from passing off his goods as those of the plaintiff, the average purchaser to be taken into account for deciding the question of resemblance between two trade marks is one who has imperfect recollection of these trade marks. In this respect the prominent features of the trade mark alone can be taken into account in assessing the degree of resemblance between two trade marks. It is for the Court to assess the value of the contention that the public are likely to be misled by the two trade marks. ——S. 20—Passing off action — Trade mark not registered—Expression 'registered' wrongfully used in trade mark—Suit for injunction for infringing trade mark—Maintainability of — Suit can be maintained if user is due to honest mistake.

A wrongful user of the expression 'registered' in a trade mark when the mark has not been actually registered does not disentitle the plaintiff from maintaining his suit for injunction in a passing off action, where the user of the word 'registered' by the plaintiff in his trade mark is the result of an honest mistake. In such a case the plaintiff should not be visited with any penalty for such user of the word 'registered' in his trade mark. ——S. 20 — Passing off action — Unregistered trade mark—Infringement of—Suit for injunction — Relief in—Plaintiff is entitled to injunction but not to delivery of offending labels, blocks or goods.

In a passing off action based upon an unregistered trade mark the plaintiff, even though entitled to an injunction by reason of the defendant's trade mark having been deliberately introduced with the intention of passing off as the goods of the plaintiff, is still not entitled to an order for delivery of the offending labels or blocks or goods. Relief in such a case to which the plaintiff is entitled is an injunction restraining the defendant, his servants and agents from using his trade mark in respect of his goods, but it cannot be an absolute injunction. ——S. 20—Passing off action—Deception of buyer, if should be established.

Where in the plaint it was unequivocally stated that the user by the defendants with the label closely resembling the label of the plaintiffs has the effect of passing off the defendants goods as the goods manufactured by the plaintiffs, it is not necessary that there should be actual evidence that the similarity had deceived the buyers. Sometimes when a plaintiff comes to Court expeditiously before any perceptible loss has been sustained it will not be possible to adduce evidence of actual deception. Then it would be for the Court to find out if an ordinary buyer would or would not be taken in by the close similarity between the trade marks adopted by the two contesting parties. 1959 Mad W N 270 : 72 Mad L W 214 : (1959) 2 Mad L J 434 : AIR 1959 Mad 357 (358) (Pt A) (Pr 4) (DB).

Where the case of the plaintiffs was that they were using a particular label with the device of a chair for a considerably long period and that only recently the defendants had begun to use a label which very closely resembles their own and it is the defendants who plead that they had been using exactly similar labels from a long time, it is incumbent on them to prove their case. There is one circumstance which is clinching namely that if the defendants had been using a similar label for a long time and they found that the plaintiffs were using a label closely resembling theirs, they would have taken proceedings to prevent the plaintiffs from using the label and the very fact that they never made any such complaint certainly inclines one to accept the version of the plaintiffs. 1959 Mad W N 270 : 72 Mad L W 214 : (1959) 2 Mad L J 434 : AIR 1959 Mad 357 (358) (Pt B) (Pr 6) (DB).

In a passing off action the Court gave permanent injunction to the plaintiff. The decree ran: '1. That S. M. ——S. 20 (1) and (2)—Suit for infringement of registered trade mark and passing off action—Distinction.

The only difference in the action based on a registered mark and a passing off action under S. 20, sub-cl. (2), is that the former action is for infringement of a statutory right and depends on the validity of registration and is subject to other restrictions laid down in the Act, and the only question that requires to be decided in such circumstances is whether the defendant's mark is identical or shows a deceptive resemblance to the plaintiff's trade mark. In such an action the Court need not enquire whether the infringement is likely to deceive or confuse customers of the goods. On the other hand in a passing off action the only question to be decided is whether the mark used by the defendants on their goods is likely to deceive the customers into buying defendants' goods as if they were the plaintiff's goods and this is based on the principle that nobody is entitled to represent his goods as the goods of somebody else. ILR (1955) Punj 1292 : 57 Punj L R 463 : A I R 1956 Punj 17 (18) (Pt A) (Pr 5) (DB).

——S. 20 (2) — Passing off action — Trade mark — Infringement of.

In a passing off action it is for the Judge to decide whether having regard to the appearance of the marks and of the goods, the class of people to whom the goods are to be sold are likely to be deceived or not. ILR (1955) Punj 1292 : 57 Punj L R 463 : AIR 1956 Punj 17 (18) (Pt B) (Pr 6) (DB).

——S. 20 (2)—Passing off action—Damages—Failure to produce account books — Presumption—Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 106 and 114, illus. (g).

In a passing off action the plaintiffs are entitled to recoup the loss that they incurred as a direct and natural consequence of the defendants' wrongful action. Where in a passing of action the defendants refused to produce their books of account showing the quantities of goods manufactured or sold by them during the period of infringement and the profits earned thereon the Court would be justified in raising every presumption against them. It is their duty to produce their account books as the matter in entirely within their special and exclusive knowledge. ILR (1955) Punj 1292 : 57 Punj L R 463 : AIR 1956 Punj 17 (18) (Pt C) (Pr 6) (DB).

——Ss. 20 (2) and 73 — Passing off action—Jurisdiction of Court.

Where the plaint alleges that the defendant is passing off his publication as the publication of the defendant and is thereby deceiving the subscribers and advertisers of the plaintiff's paper, the pith and substance of the plaint is appropriate in a passing off action under S. 20 (2) and the suit is not hit by S. 73. A I R 1951 Simla 176 (177) (Pt A) (Pr 11).

——S. 20 — Infringement action and passing off action.

The main question in a passing off case is whether the defendant is passing off his goods as the goods of the plaintiff whereas in an infringement action the plaintiff has to prove that he has a proprietary right in the trade mark and having proved that he has to prove that the defendant is using either the identical mark or similar mark. A I R 1951 Simla 176 (177) (Pt B) (Pr 9).

● ——S. 21—Action for infringement of trade mark —Burden of proof — Identification of essential features of trade marks.

When once the use by the defendant of the mark which is claimed to infringe the plaintiff's mark is shown to be in the course of trade', the question whether there has been an infringement is to be decided by comparison of the marks. Where the two marks are identical no further questions arise; for then the infringement is made out. When the two marks are not identical, the plaintiff would have to establish that the mark used by the defendant so nearly resembles the plaintiff's registered trade mark as is likely to deceive or cause confusion and in relation to goods in respect of which it is registered. Where the question arises in an action for infringement the onus would be on the plaintiff to establish that the trade mark used by the defendant in the course of trade in the goods in the respect of which his mark is registered, is deceptively similar. This has necessarily to be a ascertained by a comparison of the two marks—the degree of resemblance which is necessary to exist to cause deception not being capable of definition by laying down objective standards. The persons who would be deceived are, of course, the purchasers of the goods and it is the likelihood of their being deceived that is the subject of consideration. The resemblance may be phonetic visual or in the basic idea represented by the plaintiff's mark. The purpose of the comparison is for determining whether the essential features of the plaintiff's trade mark are to be found in that used by the defendant. The identification of the essential features of the mark is in essence a question of fact and depends on the judgment of the Court based on the evidence led before it as regards the usage of the trade. It should, however, be borne in mind that the object of the enquiry in ultimate analysis is whether the mark used by the defendant as a whole is deceptively similar to that of the registered mark of the plaintiff. ——S. 21—Infringement of trade mark—Temporary injunction—Deceptive resemblance—Test.

In a suit for an infringement of a trade mark and the grant of a temporary injunction restraining the defendant from continuing to make use of a label, the issue of deceptive resemblance is not to be determined by a comparison of the emblems in dispute. It is to be determined on consideration of two quesions, namely, (i) who are the persons whom the resemblance must be likely to deceive or confuse and (ii) what rules of comparison are to be adopted in judging whether such resemblance exists ? The correct method of resolving the issue of deceptive resemblance is to independently study the design bear in mind the registered trade mark, try and ascertain whether that design would create in the mind of an ordinary citizen the impression, that what he was buying is an article bearing the registered trade mark. Once the Court is satisfied that the label put forward by the defendant is a colourable imitation or is substantially similar so as to give an impression that the wrapper on the defendants' article is the same or similar to that of the plaintiff's and consequently an ordinary member of the public using the article in the usual course is likely to mistake the one for the other, then there is sufficient justification for restraining the defendants from continuing to make use of that label. ——S. 21—Applicability—Section applies even when there is likelihood of deception.

Held, that the words 'Navaratna Kalpa Pharmacy' used by the defendant was likely to deceive the public that they were purchasing the goods, bearing the plaintiff's registered trade name, viz., Navaratna Pharmaceutical Laboratories and therefore the Court was justified in granting an injunction against the use of the words "Navaratna Kalpa Pharmacy." ——S. 21—Infringement—Temporary injunction.

The plaintiff in the suit, Lever Brothers, (India) Ltd., were the manufacturers of detergents. and one of their commodities was the well known Sunlight Soap. The defendant put on the market a soap which was called the Swan-White Soap.

Held, that there was a likelihood of confusion in the mind of a purchaser particularly unlettered and ignorant villager, who wanted to purchase a particular soap, being indifferent as to what the lettering on the label was. He was likely to think that the Swan-White Soap was the same as the Sunlight Soap, and he was not likely to find that it was not of the same type. In this case there was a likelihood of injury to the plaintiff-company by reason of the sale of this imitation article, and therefore it was necessary to prevent the mischief. Of course, there are various ways of doing justice between the plaintiff and defendant in an action for infringement of a registered trade mark. In most cases action is taken to prevent manufacture where there is a reasonable possibility of the suit succeeding. This was a case which called for the stoppage of the defendant's label. The order granting temporary injunction against the defendant was therefore proper. 1957 M P C 554 : 1957 M P L J 676 : 1957 Jab L J 903 : I L R (1957) Madh Pra 160 : A I R 1958 Madh Pra 348 (349, 350) (Pt A) (Prs 6, 7, 8).

——S. 21—Trade Mark—Infringement — What constitutes—Trade and Merchandise Marks Act (1958), S. 29.

There will be an infringement of trade mark if there is a probability of deception or confusion in the mind of a customer by reason of either visual or phonetic similarity between the two words one of which has been registered as a trade mark. 48 R P T C 31; 1959 R P D T M C 283; 1961 R P C 219; 1961 R P C 255; AIR 1958 Bom 56 and AIR 1960 S C 142, Rel. on.

Section 21 of the Trade Marks Act also indicates what amounts to an infringement. Thus if the two marks are so nearly resembling each other as to be likely to deceive or cause confusion in the course of trade in relation to any goods in respect of which it has been registered by the plaintiff, then the defendant's mark will be deemed to have infringed the plaintiff's.

The operation of protection given by the Trade Marks Act is confined to the goods in respect of which the Trade Mark has been registered. Section 21 of the Trade Marks Act gives an exclusive use of the right in respect of a trade mark only in relation to the goods in respect of which it has been registered. The fact that a proprietor has registered his trade mark in respect of goods in class 30 of the Sch. IV of the Rules would not entitle him to use the mark with respect to any of the goods specified in the class or with respect to all goods specified in the class. The classification of the goods under R. 13 read with Sch. IV is only for the purpose of regarding the application i. e., for the purpose of registration and S. 21 cannot be read as giving an exclusive right to a registered proprietor to use the mark not only in respect of the goods in relation to which it has been registered but also in respect of other goods found in the same category or classification: 7 R P C 183, Rel. on.

A trade mark registered for biscuits falling under class 30 of Sch. IV cannot be used in respect of confectionary also falling under the same class. 1963 Mad W N 567 : (1963) 2 Mad L J 311 : A I R 1963 Mad 460 (463) (Pt B) (Prs 11, 12, 17) (DB).

——Ss. 21 (1) and 35 (1) — Suit for infringement of trade mark by heirs of registered proprietor—Maintainability before order under S. 35—Order by itself —If give cause of action.

There is nothing in S. 21 or S. 35 which would support the argument that it is only the order of the Registrar under S. 35 which confers a right on the heirs of the original registered proprietor to bring an action for infringement of the trade mark. Such an action is therefore, maintainable even before an order was passed under S. 35. If, subsequently, the plaintiffs file into Court an order under S. 35 (1) recognising their title, the plaint need not be amended because the order of the Registrar under S. 35 by itself does not give a cause of action. All that it gives is a recognition of the title which already inheres in the legal representative of the deceased proprietor. 72 Mad L W 620 : I L R (1960) Mad 51 : (1960) 1 Mad L J 270 : AIR 1960 Mad 80 (80, 81) (Prs 3, 4) (DB).

——S. 21—Trade Mark—Infringement — Passing off —Suit for — Injunction — Grant of — Intention to deceive—Necessity for—What has to be made out—Test to apply.

In order to justify the issue of an injunction in action for infringement of a trade-mark or a trade-name, it is not at all necessary that there should be an intention to deceive. A man has a right of property in the goodwill of his business which he has either built up, or acquired, and if another interferes with it by 'passing off' his own goods among the public as the former's then that person has a remedy. He can go to Court and obtain an injunction restraining the latter from such act even if that latter's action be entirely innocent and done in ignorance of any interference with the former's rights. The proper test to apply in such cases is not whether a person, after careful and intelligent examination or study of the marks on the goods, and after seeing them together, is not likely to be misled but whether by the general impression produced, or 'the main idea left on the mind' by looking at the article there is a probability of the similarity causing deception. Each case must depend upon the degree or amount of resemblance. 55 Mys H C R 334 : 30 Mys L J 42 : AIR 1951 Mys 29 (DB).

In the context of S. 23 and S. 24, it is clear that the validity of a registered trade mark cannot be canvassed in a suit for injunction resulting from an alleged infringement of trade mark. The person aggrieved must adopt, in such a case, the special procedure provided in S. 46 read with S. 72 of the Act for modification or cancellation of the registered trade mark. ——Ss. 24, 9, 23, 46 (2), 47, 48, 59—Scope — "Legal proceeding" — Meaning of — Proceeding under S. 46 (2).

A proceeding under S. 46 (2) of the Trade Marks Act is not a legal proceeding within the meaning of S. 24 of that Act : A I R 1956 Punj 4, Dissented from. Proceedings for the registration of a trade mark are always taken before the Registrar; they are departmental proceedings and not legal proceedings. Proceedings under S. 46 for the cancellation or rectification of the registration are of the same nature as proceedings for registration and should be deemed to be departmental proceedings even if they are taken before a High Court. The purpose of S. 24 is to furnish conclusive evidence of the validity of a trade mark in certain circumstances; it provides a rule of evidence to be applied in a legal proceeding. The justification that exists for applying such a rule in a legal proceeding does not exist in a proceeding under S. 46. There is no time limit imposed by the Act upon an aggrieved person's right to make an application under S. 46; he can make it even after the expiry of seven years from the date of the original registration.

Section 23 lays down that in all legal proceedings relating to a registered trade mark the fact that a person is registered as its proprietor shall be prima facie evidence of its validity, but after seven years it becomes conclusive evidence (except in case of fraud or infringement of provisions of S. 8). A proceeding for cancellation or varying taken before the Central Government under S. 59, could hardly be said to be a legal proceeding; a proceeding under Ss. 46, 47 and 48 being of a similar nature should also be not said to be a legal proceeding. A word which is the commonly used and accepted name of any single chemical element or compound cannot be registered as a trade mark. It is laid down in S. 9 of the Act (an exact copy of S. 15 (3) of the English Act, 1938) that if it is still registered, the registration "shall, notwithstanding anything in S. 24, be deemed for the purposes of S. 46, to be an entry made in the register without sufficient cause", etc. A I R 1957 All 683 (701, 702) (Pt M) (Prs 38 to 41, 43, 45).

——S. 24—"Obtaining registration by fraud"—What amounts to.

Held, that the statements made by the defendants to the Registrar that he started business in 1901, that he had been using the trade mark "Amritdhara" since then and had spent about 12 lacs on advertisement are not proved to be false. Even if the defendants made some exaggerated or even false statements and thereby induced the Registrar to register the trade mark, it would not amount to their obtaining the registration by fraud within the meaning of S. 24. Obtaining a favourable order by giving false evidence has never been held to amount to obtaining it by fraud. Fraud is conduct involving dishonest or grave moral culpability. It is conduct which vitiates every transaction known to the law. A I R 1957 All 683 (702, 703) (Pt N) (Pr 46).

——S. 24—Fraud—Registration of trade mark affords protection to owner—Non-user by person registering it, may lead to removal of trade mark from register—Party leading Registrar to believe that entire trade-mark as sought to be registered would be used though having as a matter of fact no intention to use it—This is no fraud on Register. ——S. 24—'Fraud'—What amounts to.

It is not permissible for a person under S. 24 to contend that registration was obtained by fraud unless he had alleged actual dishonesty or fraud. Though it seems impossible to construct a definition which would meet every case which might be brought under the Trade Marks Act there is little danger in saying that whenever fraud is alleged therein two elements are at least essential, viz., first deceit or intention to deceive or, in some cases a mere secrecy; and, secondly, either actual injury or possible injury or an intention to expose some person either to actual injury or to a risk of possible injury by means of deceit or secrecy. A practically conclusive test as to the fraud practised in trade marks cases would be, did the author of the deceit derive any advantage from it which he could not have had if the truth had been known? If so, it is hardly possible that the advantage should not have had an equivalent in loss or risk, loss to someone else; and if so, there was fraud. In practice people hardly ever intentionally deceive each other in matters of business for a purpose which is not fraudulent. A I R 1956 Mad 184 (187, 188) (Pt C) (Prs 21, 24).

——S. 25—Plea of prior user—Evidence.

In a suit for injunction for infringing a registered trade-mark (a label) if the defendant's label was in current use before the registration of the plaintiff's label the provisions of S. 25, Trade Marks Act, will save prima facie the defendant from the grant of a temporary injunction. For this purpose, however, there has to be evidence. A mere declaration in respect of a label before a justice of the peace is not sufficient to discharge the burden laid by that section upon the defendant.

Where neither side cared to lead evidence and relied upon affidavits, Held, that in the circumstances of the case, they were a poor substitute for the kind of proof needed to apply S. 25. A I R 1946 P C 109, Relied on. 1958 Jab L J 873 : 1959 M P L J 832 : A I R 1959 Madh Pra 21 (22) (Prs 3, 5) (DB).

—S. 30—Registration of distinctive label — Disclaimer of a part of it—When necessary.

It is true that where a distinctive label is registered as a whole, such registration cannot possibly give any exclusive statutory right to the proprietor of the trade mark to the use of any particular word or name contained therein apart from the mark as a whole. The truth is that the label does not consist of each particular part of it, but consists of the combination of them all. Case-law referred. This circumstance, however, does not necessarily mean that in such a case disclaimer will always be unnecessary. It is significant that the section itself contemplates that there may be a disclaimer in respect of parts contained in a trade mark registered as a whole although the registration of the mark as a whole does not confer any statutory right with respect to that part. Registrar of Trade Marks v. Ashok Chandra Rakhit, Ltd, 1955 Mad W N 935 : 1955 S C J 562 : 1955 Andh W R (SC) 330 : (1955) 2 M L J (SC) 76 : 1955 S C A 1043 : (1955) 2 S C R 252 : AIR 1955 S C 558 (565) (Pt F) (Pr 14).

—S. 35 (1)—Suit for infringement of trade mark by heirs of registered proprietor — Suit is maintainable even before order was passed under S. 35 — Such order by itself does not give cause of action. See Trade Marks Act (5 of 1940), S. 21 (1). AIR 1960 Mad 80 (DB).

—Ss. 35 and 47 (1) (b) — Private limited company having registered trade mark — Merger of certain private limited companies in such company — Company converted into public company and changing its name—Suit by company for infringement of trade mark — Maintainability without change effected under Ss 35 and 47 — Companies Act (1956), Ss. 31 (2) and 44 (1).

Held (i) that from Ss. 31 (2) and 44 (1), Companies Act, 1956, it is clear that when a private company is converted into a public company there is only an alteration in the articles of association of the company, that company does not cease to exist nor does a new company spring into existence. In other words, the alteration in the articles of a company does not affect the legal personality of that company. Hence there was no need to apply under S. 35 of the Trade Marks Act. Failure to apply therefore did not affect the maintainability of the suit. AIR 1943 Pat 278, Rel. on; (ii) that when a change in the name of the registered proprietor is required the authorities of the company need only apply under S. 47, Trade Marks Act. The plaintiff could not be non-suited merely because the change in the name of the registered proprietor had not been effected by the time the suit was instituted. Registration of the name of the proprietor does not confer title on him. It is merely an evidence of his title. The plaintiff-company was the owner of the trade mark in question at all times. AIR 1960 Mad 80, Rel. on ; (iii) that the true effect of the merger was that the merging companies lost their identity and tney became one with the company in which they merged. The legal personality of Lever Brothers (India) Private Limited continued to be the same though there might have been a change in its assets and liability position. SECTION 37

—S. 37 (1) (a)—The use of a trade mark 'in relation to those goods' — Expression includes use of trade-mark on goods itself or on container. See Trade Marks Act (1940), S. 2 (2). AIR 1955 N U C (All) 3584.

—Ss. 37 and 24—Fraud — Lack of intention to use trade-mark at time of registration is, not fraud contemplated by S. 24. AIR 1955 N U C (All) 3584.

—S. 37 (i) — Application for rectification of Trade Marks Register— Can be filed only in the High Court within whose jurisdiction Trade Marks Register is situate or in that High Court within whose jurisdiction the owner of marks resides or carries on business. See Trade Marks Act (1940), S. 46 (1). AIR 1962 Mad 214 (DB).

—Ss. 37 and 46 (2)—Jurisdiction — 'High Court'—Meaning — S. 2 (1) (d) 'in relation to any State' — Meaning and effect of — Trade Marks registered in Bombay — Owner of marks having registered office in Bombay and Spinning Mill in Mysore State—Application to remove trade mark made by another—Jurisdiction of High Court at Madras — Absence of allegation or proof that goods bearing marks in question are being sold in Madras State—Effect.

The expression 'High Court' in Ss. 37 and 46 (2) of the Trade Marks Act cannot be interpreted as a High Court which exercises jurisdiction in any part of India, on the ground that any High Court in India would have jurisdiction to entertain a petition by any citizen of India to have another citizen's trade mark struck off the register. Such a view would be inconsistent with definition of High Court in S. 2 (1) (d) as amended by the Adaptation of Laws Order 1 of 1956, because the words 'in relation to any State, the High Court for the State' would then be deprived of all significance. Hence an application under Ss. 37 and 46 (2) may not be entertained by the High Court of Madras unless the subject-matter of the application has relation to the State of Madras in a sense in which the subject-matter does not have relation to every other State in India by reason merely of registration.

The first respondent a company having its registered office in Bombay, owned and conducted a Spinning Mill in the State of Mysore. It applied for and obtained registration of the trade marks by the Registrar of Trade Marks of Bombay. The petitioner whose application for registration of a trade mark was opposed by the first respondent applied to the High Court of Madras under Ss. 37 and 46 (2), while the application was still pending before the Registrar, praying that the first respondent's registered trade marks be taken off the register. There was no allegation or evidence that the first respondent's goods bearing the trade marks in question were being sold in Madras.

Held, that the subject-matter of the application had relation to State of Bombay and Mysore, it had no relation to the State of Madras, and hence the High Court of Madras had no jurisdiction to entertain the application under Ss. 37 and 46 (2) of the Act. 72 Mad L W 144 : (1959) 1 M L J 217 : ILR (1959) Mad 363 : AIR 1959 Mad 251 (253) (Pr 16).

—Ss. 39 and 73—Scope — 'Or otherwise relating to any right in a trade mark' — Meaning of — Jurisdiction.

The right in a Trade Mark referred to in S. 73, Trade Marks Act, connotes either the full right of ownership or the right to user thereof though the person claiming may not be the proprietor or owner of the Trade Mark. 60 Cal W N 591 : A I R 1957 Cal 135 (138) (Pt B) (Prs 34, 36, 37, 41) (DB).

—S. 46 (2) — Scope, stated — Absence of notice — Effect—Omission on part of Registrar to give a notice of an application for registration to a depositor is not a ground for expunging or varying an entry of trade mark in the register. See Trade Marks Rules (1942), R. 23 (3). A I R 1957 All 683.

—S. 46 (2)—Proceeding under — Not a "legal proceeding." See Trade Marks Act (1940), S. 24. A I R 1957 All 683.

—S. 46 — Application for removal of trade mark from register — Onus.

In an application for removal of a trade mark from the register and that too after the expiry of seven years the onus lies on the applicant to establish his case or to prove that the trade mark was not registrable. A I R 1957 All 683 (696) (Pt I) (Pr 26).

—S. 46 (2)—'An aggrieved person'—Meaning of.

Any trader is, in the sense of the statute, aggrieved whenever the registration of a particular trade mark operates in restraint of what would otherwise have been legal rights. Whatever benefit is gained by registration must entail a corresponding disadvantage upon a trader who might possibly have had occasion to use the mark in the course of his business: (1894) A C 8, Rel. on. AIR 1957 All 683 (704) (Pt P) (Prs 49, 51, 52).

—Ss. 46 (4) and 6 (1) (d) — Word 'Sulekha' registered as trade mark of fountain pens by Registrar—Successor Registrar cancelling registration — Successor cannot reopen question of fact — Use of dictionaries in fixing meaning of word suggested as trade mark—Such use is not warranted. 63 Bom L R 642 : A I R 1962 Bom 82 (85, 86) (Pt B) (Pr 11).

—S. 46 — Scope — Non-existence of another trade mark on date of application — Another trade mark registered before application is allowed — Effect —Then there is prohibition against registration of trade mark, although there was no such trade mark in existence at the date of application. See Trade Marks Act (1940), Ss. 10 (1) and 16 (1). A I R 1958 Bom 56 (DB).

—S. 46—"Aggrieved person"—Meaning of.

The phrase "any person aggrieved" has been very liberally construed so as to hold as persons aggrieved all these who are in some way or other substantially interested in having the mark removed where it is a question of removal from the Register, or persons who would be substantially damaged if the mark remained. It will be difficult to conceive of a person more aggrieved than one whose case is that the person complained against is likely to be sold as the product of the complainant if that person were to be allowed to use the trade mark complained about. 59 Bom L R 548 : ILR (1957) Bom 702 : A I R 1958 Bom 56 (60) (Pt B) (Pr 9) (DB).

—S. 46—Delay in making application—Effect.

The granting of relief under S. 46 is a discretionary relief and the Legislature has not laid down any period of limitation for making an application under S. 46. The question of delay in the making of the application must be approached from this point of view whether the applicant stood by any thereby caused substantial injury to the respondent and the injury was so substantial that that injury would outweigh the interest of the public which the Court must consider where a trade mark is likely to deceive. 59 Bom L R 548 : ILR (1957) Bom 702 : A I R 1958 Bom 56 (60) (Pt C) (Pr 10) (DB).

—S. 46—Power of Court — Interference with discretion of Registrar.

The relief to be given under S. 46 is discretionary relief. Where the Registrar has exercised the discretion in favour of a person that fact ought considerably to weigh with the Court. It is not as if the exercise of that discretion is final or is not subject to appeal, but the appellate Court ordinarily should be loath to interfere with that discretion. 59 Bom L R 548 : ILR (1957) Bom 702 : A I R 1958 Bom 56 (61, 62) (Pt E) (Pr 13) (DB).

—S. 46 — Application for rectification — Delay — Effect of.

Delay in making the application for rectification of the register under S. 46 of the Trade Marks Act is not per se a valid ground for defence. ILR (1952) 1 Cal 373.

—S. 46—'Sufficient cause' — Meaning of—Rectification of register.

Where a person has wrongfully registered in his own name the trade mark of another the proper procedure is for the true proprietor to apply for the removal of the mark from the register. In considering the question whether an entry was made without sufficient cause or not, the matter should be looked at as on the date of the application for registration. There is 'sufficient cause' for rectification of the register within the meaning of S. 46 of the Trade Marks Act where the applicant for registration did not disclose to the Registrar that opposition had been entered by the respondent in the application for registration of the associated mark though he had agreed to the conditions imposed by the Registrar that the two applications should be considered as for registration of associated marks and where he did not disclose to the Registrar that his right to the mark had been negatived by the Civil Court in a prior suit. ILR (1952) 1 Cal 373.

—S. 46 — Power of Court to cancel registration of trade mark.

Section 46 confers on the Court the jurisdiction to cancel the registration of a trade mark on the ground of failure to observe the conditions relevant for the entry being made in the Registry. Where the word 'Navaratna' registered as trade mark was proved not to have lost its original meaning and covered by S. 6 (1) (e) of the Act, the word can be ordered to be deleted from the register of Trade Marks. 1961 Ker L J 177 : (1961) 1 Ker L R 299 : ILR (1961) 2 Ker 435 : 1961 Ker L T 1048 : A I R 1962 Ker 156 (162) (Pt C) (Pr 10) (DB).

——S. 70 (a) — Registrar of Trade Marks if Court — Proceedings before him—S. 9, Bombay Pleaders Act —Applicability—(Bombay Pleaders Act (17 of 1920), S. 9 and S. 2).

Even though in some respects the position of the Registrar of Trade Marks may be analogous to that of a Court he is not a Court, and the provisions of S. 9, Bombay Pleaders Act, do not apply to any proceedings before him. Further, it cannot be inferred from the definition of the expression "Court subordinate to the High Court" appearing in S. 2 of the Bombay Pleaders Act, 1920, that the Registrar of Trade Marks is constituted a Court within the meaning of that Act. 59 Bom L R 1019 : AIR 1959 Bom 21 (24, 25) (Pt E) (Prs 7, 8).

——S. 70—Evidence by affidavit—Cross-examination of deponent—Power of Registrar—C. P. Code, O. 19, R. 2.

The Registrar has, under S. 70 (a) read with O. 19, R. 2, Civil P. C., power in a suitable case to require that any person who has made an affidavit should attend for cross-examination at the instance of either party. However, S. 70 (b) provides that the Registrar may, if he thinks fit, take oral evidence "in lieu of or in addition to such evidence by affidavit." It is obvious, therefore, that it is open to the Registrar not to admit oral evidence or to admit oral evidence in addition to the evidence by affidavits. AIR 1956 Bom 641 (643) (Pt B) (Pr 6).

——S. 70 (d) — Rules framed under, R. 81 and Sch. VI—Entries 1 and 2 in Sch. VI—Interpretation of.

—The heading for the entries in the Sixth Schedule is matter in respect of which cost is to be 'awarded' and when the matter is "one day's hearing" with or without examination of witnesses, the maximum amount is Rs. 25 or Rs. 16. That relates to costs of a day's hearing when granted and not to costs of the entire proceedings. AIR 1956 Bom 641 (645) (Pt E) (Pr 11).

——S. 70 (d) — Rules framed under, R. 81—Discretion of Registrar in awarding costs.

The discretion of the Registrar in awarding costs under R. 81 is entirely unfettered and he is to award such costs as he considers reasonable having regard to all the circumstances of the case. AIR 1956 Bom 641 (645) (Pt F) (Pr 11).

——Ss. 70 and 77 — Procedure before Registrar — Evidence by affidavit — Rules under S. 77, Rr. 34 and 36 — Expression "evidence in support of application" in R. 34—Meaning.

Under the Trade Marks Act, the Registrar is given the power to decide any matter that comes before him on affidavit. The scheme of the Act is that ordinarily all disputed questions of fact should be disposed of by affidavit. But there may be cases where this would be impossible, in which case discretion is vested in the Registrar to take oral evidence either in lieu of or in addition to evidence by affidavit.

The position under the rules framed under the Trade Marks Act is that, after the notice of opposition is given, evidence in support of opposition is given by the person opposing the registration, and this evidence is given by affidavit and the affidavit should set out the evidence on which the opponent intends to rely. Thereafter, evidence in support of the application is given by the applicant, and that too is given by affidavit. A further right is given to the opponent to give evidence in reply, but that can only be done by leave of the Registrar, and R. 36 provides that no further evidence is permissible although the Registrar may, at any time if he thinks fit, give leave either to the applicant or to the opponent to lead evidence on such terms as to costs or otherwise as he may think fit.

The expression "evidence in support of the application" in R. 34 includes evidence submitted by the opponent in support of his opposition, because evidence in rebuttal of the case of the opposition is also evidence in support of the application.

It would be taking too technical a view of the rules to tie an applicant down to his admission in the affidavits that document was not a forgery or that the document was a genuine one especially where it is merely a constructive admission. 54 Bom L R 28 : AIR 1952 Bom 165 (166) (Pt B) (Pr 3) (DB).

Section 73 of the Trade Marks Act bars only the institution of a suit in any Court inferior to a District Court. The City Civil Court, Hyderabad, where the suit was originally instituted was admittedly a District Court within the meaning of S. 73 of the Trade Marks Act. After the re-organisation of Courts the Courts presided over by the Chief Judge and Additional Chief Judge City Civil Court respectively are Courts of co-ordinate jurisdiction both pecuniary and territorial. There is nothing in G. O. Ms. No. 444 or G. O. Ms. No. 555 to indicate that the City Civil Court, whose Presiding Officer is the Additional Chief Judge is a Court inferior to the City Civil Court whose Presiding Officer is the Chief Judge. Therefore the Additional Chief Judge City Civil Court, has jurisdiction to try the suit under S. 73 of the Trade Marks Act. (1961) 2 Andh W R 255.

——Ss. 73 and 20 (2) — Applicability — Passing off action —Forum for institution of suits— Jurisdiction of Madras City Civil Court.

The combined effect of Ss. 20 and 73 of the Trade Marks Act, 1940, is that a suit to prevent an infringement of a trade mark or for damages for such infringement cannot be instituted at all unless the trade mark is registered. Under the provisions of the Act and even in the case of infringement of registered trade marks such a suit cannot be instituted in any Court inferior to that of a District Court having the requisite jurisdiction such as territorial jurisdiction. Section 20 (2) of the Act no doubt excludes passing off actions from the provision of the Act. But what is saved under S. 20 (2) is only the right of action and it has no bearing on the forum mentioned in S. 73. Hence S. 73 will apply to passing off actions also and the expression, 'otherwise relating to any right in a trade mark' in the section is wide enough to include passing off actions also where the alleged misuse of a registered trade mark is in issue. Hence such a suit cannot be instituted in the City Civil Court Madras which is not a District Court within the meaning of the section. A decree of the City Civil Court Madras in a suit in which the cause of action is based either wholly or in part on the infringement of a trade mark will be a nullity and the execution Court can look into the pleadings to decide whether the Court had jurisdiction to pass the decree. 1958 Mad W N 239 : (1958) 1 M L J 355 : 71 M L W 383 : I L R (1958) Mad 622 : A I R 1958 Mad 490 (492, 494) (Prs 6, 10, 12, 14, 17, 19) (DB).

SECTION 74-A:

——S. 74A — Appearance by Registrar before High Court — Costs— Appearance in final Court of appeal merely for elucidating his own judgment and pointing out errors in judgment of lower appellate Court —No costs to Registrar.

There are certain cases in which the Registrar should appear and can legitimately claim his costs. It is entirely wrong on the part of the Registrar in the final Court of appeal to appear merely for the purpose of elucidating his own judgment and pointing out the errors in the judgment of the Court below. That is not the proper function of the Court of first instance and the Registrar is nothing else except the Court of first instance. He must submit to the judgment of the lower appellate Court if there is no appeal from that judgment. If there is an appeal, he must submit to the judgment of the final Court of appeal. If his judgment is right it will be restored by the final Court and the errors of the lower appellate Court will be rectified; if his judgment is wrong then the lower appellate Court's judgment will be confirmed by the final Court of appeal. But the final Court of appeal neither needs illumination nor guidance from the Judge of the first instance as to what are the errors in the judgment of the lower appellate Court. 54 Bom L R 28 : A I R 1952 Bom 165 (169) (Pt D) (Pr 12) (DB).

——S. 74A — Costs of Registrar in proceedings in High Court.

Rule 619 framed by the Bombay High Court under S. 77 of the Trade Marks Act gives the Registrar a right to appear before the Chamber Judge and on general principles as he has a right to appear before that Judge he has equally a right to appear before the Court of appeal. Therefore with respect to his costs the practice adopted by the Bombay High Court is that before the Chamber Judge ordinarily the Registrar should get his costs whether he is successful or unsuccessful and in the Court of appeal ordinarily if he is unsuccessful he should not get his costs and if he is successful ordinarily he should not get his costs. 53 Bom L R 556 : I L R (1952) Bom 344 : A I R 1951 Bom 147 (155, 156) (Pt J) (Prs 18, 20) (DB).

The rights created by the Trade Marks Act are civil rights for the protection of persons carrying on trade under marks which have acquired reputation. The statute creates the Registrar a tribunal for safe-guarding these rights and for giving effect to the rights created by the Act, and the High Court as such without more has been given appellate jurisdiction over the decisions of this tribunal. The High Court while exercising this appellate jurisdiction has not to exercise it in a manner different from its other appellate jurisdiction. It is merely an addition of a new subject-matter of appeal to the appellate jurisdiction already exercised by the High Court. A I R 1947 Cal 49, Overruled. National Sewing Thread Co. Ltd. v. —Ss. 76, 14, 6 (1) — Registrar refusing registration though mark was eligible under S. 6 (1)—High Court can interfere.

The question of eligibility of a trade-mark is one which has to be adjudged by the Registrar, in accordance with the provisions of S. 6. The fact that the Registrar may have a discretion in the matter of admitting a trade mark to registration, cannot in any way lessen his responsibility to correctly determine the question of eligibility. To determine correctly the question of eligibility under S. 6(1) is quite distinct from the discretionary power. If in so adjudging, the Registrar reaches an erroneous conclusion on the question as to whether the requirements of S. 6 (1) (d), have been satisfied or not, in the case of a particular trade mark, it will be certainly open to the appellate Court to rectify the error committed by the Registrar. It will be within the powers of the Court of appeal to do so. The appellate jurisdiction conferred by S. 76 is exercisable by the High Court in the same manner as it exercises its other appellate jurisdiction. A I R 1953 S C 357, Rel. on. 40 Mys L J 646 : A I R 1963 Mys 122 (125, 126) (Pt C) (Pr 5) (DB).

—Ss. 76, 14 (1), 6 (1) — Marks satisfying requirements for eligibility — Refusal to register — Interference by High Court.

It is no doubt true that the mere fact that a particular trade mark satisfies the requirements of eligibility under S. 6 (1) will not entitle the applicant to have it registered, as of right. In spite of a trade-mark being eligible under S. 6 (1) the Registrar may under S. 14 (1) refuse the application. But, the discretion to refuse under S. 14 (1) should not be exercised arbitrarily or capriciously, but judicially and reasonably. The requirement that the Registrar should state in writing the grounds of his decision and the materials used by him in arriving thereat is, doubtless, intended to enable the appellate Court to find out whether the discretion of the Registrar has been exercised judicially. Where there was no material justifying the Registrar exercising his discretion against the applicant the High Court will interfere in appeal. —S. 77—S. 77 does not negative applicability of Letters Patent (Cal.), Cl. 15.

There is nothing in the provisions of S. 77 which debars the High Court from hearing appeals under S. 76 according to the rules under which all other appeals are heard or from framing rules for the exercise of that jurisdiction under S. 108 of the Government of India Act, 1915, for hearing those appeals by single Judges or by division benches. That section in no way affects or modifies the power of the High Court to regulate its own proceedings and in passing R. 617 although the rule was made under the Trade Marks Act, the High Court was exercising its power conferred upon it by Art. 225 of the Constitution in regulating its own proceedings. Therefore, although the Sitting Judge in Chambers disposes of the appeal pursuant to R. 617 made under the Trade Marks Act, in sitting singly and in exercising that jurisdiction he is doing so pursuant to the procedure laid down by the High Court under Art. 225 of the Constitution. 53 Bom L R 556 : ILR (1952) Bom 344 : AIR 1951 Bom 147 (151) (Pt C) (Pr 7) (DB).

——S. 80—"Act"—Meaning—Proceedings before Registrar of Trade Marks — Registered trade marks agent—Right to plead.

There is nothing to control the meaning of the word "act" as used in section 80. It is referable to all kinds of acts which any person is required to do by or under the Trade Marks Act. It may be the act of making an application; it may be the act of filing an affidavit; it may be the act of leading evidence; it may be the act of pleading before the Registrar in support of the application. As the word used there is wide enough to cover all these activities and it is intended to exclude the act of making an affidavit, the words "other than the making of an affidavit" have been inserted in that section. Thus, the word "act" as used in S. 80 is wide enough to cover the act of pleading, and hence a registered trade marks agent is entitled to plead before the Registrar of Trade Marks under the provisions of S. 80 of the Trade Marks Act. 59 Bom L R 1019 : AIR 1959 Bom 21 (24) (Pt C) (Pr 5).

——R. 23 (3)—Notice of application for registration —Whether mandatory—Absence of notice—Effect—(Trade Marks Act (1940), S. 46 (2).)

The provision as to notice of application for registration to the depositors in R. 23 (3) of the Trade Marks Rules is only directory and not mandatory. Whether to give notice to the depositor or not is expressly left to the discretion of the Registrar. The time within which a notice of opposition to the registration of a trade mark is given is four months from the date of the advertisement in the Journal, vide R. 30. Even when the Registrar gives a notice under R. 23 (3) to the depositor of a trade mark, he gets four months from date of the advertisement in the Journal for making an objection to the registration. The Act does not provide for any notice to the depositor and if the Government themselves have not made the giving of a notice obligatory, it is not open to a High Court to say that it is obligatory. The grounds on which an entry in the register may be expunged or varied are stated in S. 46 (2) of the Act. They are exhaustive inasmnch as it cannot be expunged or varied on any other ground. The omission on the part of the Registrar to give a notice of an application for registration to a depositor is not a ground for expunging or varying an entry of the trade mark in the register. A I R 1957 All 683 (703) (Pt O) (Pr 48).

PREAMBLE

——Pre.—Right to form trade unions comes within Art. 19 (1) (a) of Constitution—State cannot circumvent article by placing restriction on objects or purposes of association — Rejection of application of federation of trade unions to represent its members—This would be restriction with Art. 19 (4). See Constitution of India, Art. 19 (1) (c). AIR 1960 All 45.

——Ss. 2 (g) and (h) and 71—'Workmen'—Meaning—Does not include civil servants engaged in tasks of sovereign and regal aspects of Government—Association of non-gazetted Government Servants consisting members of services forming part of regal functions as well as members of services—Not entitled to registration as 'Trade Union' — Principle of 'Collective bargaining' not applicable to such relationship. 1962 Mad W N 47 : (1962) 5 Fac L R 168 ; (1962-63) 22 F J R 1 ; (1962) 1 Lab L J 753 : ILR (1962) Mad 605 : 75 Mad L W 167 ; AIR 1962 Mad 234 (237, 238) (Prs 11, 12, 13) (DB).

——Ss. 2 (h), 2 (g)—'Trade Union'—Persons engaged in trade or business can form trade union— Persons employed in Raj Bhavan for domestic and other duties — Cannot form a trade union.

The term 'trade union' as defined under the Act contemplates the existence of the employer and the employee engaged in the conduct of a trade or business. The definition of the term 'workmen' in S. 2 (g) would prima facie indicate that it was intended only for interpreting the term 'trade dispute'. But even assuming that that definition could be imported for understanding the scope of the meaning of the term 'trade union' in S. 2 it is obvious that the industry should be one as would amount to a trade or business, i.e., a commercial undertaking.

The workers at Raj Bhavan cannot form a trade union and a union of such workers is not entitled for registration under the Act. SECTION 3 ——Ss. 3, 8 — Registrar of Trade Unions —Jurisdiction and powers of — Can enquire about legality of election of new office-bearers of Trade Union.

The Registrar of Trade Unions has full jurisdiction to enquire about the legality of the new election of the office-bearers of a Union for the purpose of maintaining a proper register showing the names of the office bearers who may be at the relevant time required to comply with the provisions of the Act or to be dealt with in accordance therewith. (1963) 1 Lab L J 60 : (1962-63) 23 FJR 43 : 1962 BLJR 294: AIR 1962 Pat 338 (340) (Pt B) (Pr 7) (DB).

SECTION 5

——Ss. 5, 6 and 7 — Powers of Registrar — He can call for further information only from union and not from any other source such as D. C.

Section 7, Trade Unions Act no doubt empowers the Registrar to call for further information for the purpose of satisfying himself about compliance with S. 5 or that the union is entitled to registration until information is supplied. But the information is to be called from the Trade Union and not from any other source and the provisions of Ss. 5 and 6 would show that information could not be supplied by any other source except the union itself. The powers of the Registrar are limited to the provisions of S. 7 and he could not add to those provisions. He cannot call for further information from the Deputy Commissioner. 1952 Nag L J (Notes) 39 (DB).

——S. 6—Scope and effect of.

The fact that S. 6 provides that no Union can be registered unless its constitution provides for the matters mentioned therein does not necessarily mean that the rules relating to matters contained in S. 6, acquire a statutory force. It is only a condition precedent for registration that the constitution has to provide for the matters given in S. 6. No registration certificate can be issued unless the constitution provides for those matters but it cannot be said that the rules relating to these matters are rules framed under the authority of S. 6. S. 6 itself does not confer any authority to frame any rules. The existence of such rules is a condition precedent for the registration of the Union. AIR 1957 All 234 (235) (Pt B) (Pr 8).

——Ss. 6, 2 (g) — Trade Union of Employees of Employees' State Insurance Corporation can be registered — Employees are "workmen" — Corporation comes within ambit of Act. See Trade Unions Act (1926), S. 2 (g). AIR 1963 Cal 56 (DB).

——Ss. 7 and 11—Appeal—Registrar calling for further information from D. C.—S. 11 does not apply.

Section 11, Trade Unions Act provides for appeal only when the Registrar refuses to register a Trade Union or withholds or cancels a certificate of registration. It does not apply when the Registrar does none of these but calls for further information from the D. C. and thus follows a wrong procedure. 1952 Nag L J (Notes) 39 (DB).

——S. 11 (4)—Primary school teachers not workmen — Avocation of teacher not employment in industry —Federation of teachers not a Trade Union.

Where the question was whether the occupation of primary school teachers could be said to be employment in any trade or industry so as to entitle the Federation of Primary Teachers to ask for registration as a Trade Union.

Held, that in the context in which the term 'trade' was used in the Act it was not intended to convey the wider meaning of 'some practice or some occupation or business or profession as a means of livelihood or gain' as defined in the Oxford Dictionary but that it was the intention to use it in the more specific connotation of a mercantile occupation or a skilled handicraft as distinct from a profession. The use of the words 'conditions of labour in the definition of workmen' in S. 2 (g) clearly indicated that the emphasis is on some mercantile occupation or skilled handicraft and those words could not possibly refer to the occupation of a teacher. The avocation of a teacher could in no case be said to be an employment in industry. A Federation of primary Teachers seeking registration could not be deemed to be a Trade Union. 1957 Nag L J (Notes) 155.

——S. 11 (1) (a) — Decision of Single Judge High Court in appeal under S. 11 (1) (a), Trade Unions Act from decision of Registrar of Trade Unions — Letters Patent appeal against, is maintainable. See L.P. (Cal), Cl. 15. AIR 1963 Cal 56 (DB).

Appeals under S. 11 (1) (a) are to be heard by a Judge of the High Court sitting on the Original Side and not by a Judge or Judges on the Appellate Side. The words "High Court" occurring in S. 11, sub-s. (1) mean and include the High Court in its Original Jurisdiction as well as Appellate Jurisdiction : AIR 1940 Cal 264 and 5 C W N 377, Foll. As the powers of the Appellate Court under S. 11 (3) are analogous to the powers which are exercised by a Judge trying a suit, the appeal should be heard by a Judge on the Original Side. 64 Cal W N 1065 : (1961) 1 Lab L J 50 : (1960) 1 Fac L R 446 : AIR 1961 Cal 165 (165, 166) (Pr 1) (DB).

——S. 11—Refusal by Registrar to register a Trade Union situate within the limits of Presidency Town—Appeal—Forum — Original Side of the High Court only.

An appeal under S. 11 of the Indian Trade Unions Act by person aggrieved by the refusal of the Registrar to register a Trade Union situate within the limits of the Presidency Town should be filed on the Original Side of the High Court only. Sub-s. (3) makes it clear that the jurisdiction of the Court is original in nature and the procedure that is applicable to suits is enjoined in the conduct of the enquiry. SECTION 15

——S. 15 (d) — Scope and effect—If contravened by Bombay Industrial Relations Act (1947) — Bombay Act if void.

Section 15 (d) of the Trade Unions Act merely renders lawful the expenditure of money belonging to a trade union for the conduct of a Trade Dispute. It does not render obligatory upon a trade union to expend any portion of its general funds upon such conduct. Neither S. 27-A nor S. 30 of the Bombay Industrial Relations Act can be said to contravene S. 15 (d) of the Trade Unions Act in so far as they disentitle any trade union from appearing before an Industrial Court or any other Court. The Industrial Relations Act cannot therefore be held to be void as preventing a trade union representing its members before a conciliator or a Court of voluntary or compulsory arbitration. 21 Bom Cri Cas 112 : ILR (1951) Bom 318 : 52 Cri L J 779 : 53 Bom L R 333 : AIR 1951 Bom 105 (117, 121) (Pt I) (Prs 25, 41) (DB).

TRANSFER OF PROPERTY ACT (4 of 1882)

PREAMBLE

——Preamble—Scope—The Transfer of Property Act has in no way been repealed by the Control of Rent and Eviction Act. A I R 1960 All 211 (212, 213) (Pt B) (Pr 14) (DB).

——Preamble — Provisions not inconsistent with those of Administration of Evacuee Property Act (1950). AIR 1954 Bom 56 (57) (Prs 2, 3, 4) (DB).

——Preamble—Act is not exhaustive.

The Act does not consolidate the law nor does it profess to be complete code dealing with transfer of property. It purports to do no more than to define and amend certain parts of the law relating to transfer of property. 1953 B L J R 135 : A I R 1953 Pat 193 (193, 194) (Pt B) (Pr 3) (DB).

——S. 1—Applicability of principles of Act to cases excluded therefrom — Matters which have been expressly excluded from purview of Act, provisions thereof should not be invoked unless they embody principles of general application. ——Ss. 1, 53-A — In absence of express provision of Kutch law principles of Indian Act may be applied — Custom always prevailed — Section 53-A would not apply in Kutch, since Kutch law expressly prohibits use of unregistered document in manner envisaged in S. 53-A — S. 20, Kutch Registration Act, also conflicts with S. 53-A — Kutch Registration Act, S. 20. AIR 1950 Kutch 64 (65) (Pt B) (Prs 7, 9).

——S. 1 — Part B States (Laws) Act (1951), S. 3 — Transfer of Property Act (1882) came into force in Madhya Bharat on 1-4-1951. See Part B States (Laws) Act (1951), S. 3. AIR 1957 Madh B 133.

——S. 1—Applicability—Act does not apply to Pepsu — Principles underlying apply. A I R 1955 N U C (Pepsu) 4003.

——Ss. 1 and 111 — Does not apply to State of Punjab but only principles of justice, equity and good conscience embodied therein apply. See T. P. Act (1882), S. 111. AIR 1964 Punj 210 (DB).

——S. 1 (3) — Extension of Act — Effect of Act 3 of 1951—Act not applicable to Pepsu or Punjab — (Part B States (Laws) Act (1951), S. 3). A I R 1959 Punj 440 (446, 447) (Pt I) (Pr 15) (DB).

[Reversed on another point in AIR 1963 S C 222].

——Ss. 1 and 92 — Not applicable in Punjab—Provisions are as matter of principle are, however, followed — Technical rules embodied in provisions are not followed — Principles of subrogation are applicable but not technical rule laid down in S. 92, Para. 3, as to registered agreement remitting subrogation. ILR (1957) Punj 79.

——S. 1 — Principles of Act apply to Punjab on ground of justice, equity and good conscience — Rules of procedure are not applicable. ILR (1955) Punj 988 : A I R 1955 Punj 215 (217) (Pt B) (Pr 15) (DB).

SYNOPSIS

(Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 2.)

1. Clause (a).
2. Clause (b).
3. Clause (c).
4. Clause (d).
5. Mahomedan Law.

1. Clause (a).

——S. 2—Right or liability arising out of legal relationship constituted before Act came into force or any relief in respect thereof is not affected — T. P. Act made applicable in Travancore in 1951 — Before this, though principles of T. P. Act were applied, modification made in 1929 in the Act did not apply — As law stood before amendment in 1929 of S. 60, where the mortgagee recognised partition of mortgaged property amongst co-mortgagors, mortgagor had a right to get partial redemption—This was not a mere matter of procedure — See Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 60. 1957 Ker L T 1289 : 1958 Ker L J 78.

——S. 2 — Section 13, Rajasthan Premises (Control of Rent and Eviction) Act as it was passed in Nov. 1950, is not hit by T. P. Act or Civil P. C. See Houses and Rents — Rajasthan Premises (Control of Rent and Eviction) Act (17 of 1950), S. 13. AIR 1955 N U C (Raj) 4061 (DB).

2. Clause (b).

——Ss. 2, 130—Assignment of joint promissory note in partition — Instrument in writing not necessary — Partition not transfer as contemplated by T. P. Act. (1961) 2 M L J 470; AIR 1961 Mad 518 (FB), Rel. on. 1963 Raj L W 504 : ILR (1963) 13 Raj 963.

3. Clause (c).

——Ss. 2 (c) and 60—Mortgage—Redemption—Law prevailing at time when right of redemption comes into existence and not at the time when cause of action for suit for redemption arises governs case. AIR 1955 Trav-Co 9 (FB); AIR 1934 P C 205 and AIR 1950 F C 1, Rel. on. 1964 Ker L J 203 : 1964 Ker L T 153.

——Ss. 2 (c), 106 and 116 — Lease executed before applicability of Act — Ss. 106 and 116 do not apply. AIR 1955 NUC (Madh B) 3694.

——Ss. 2 (c), 111 (g) — Lease in former State of Nawanagar before T. P. Act was made applicable will not be governed by T. P. Act but by common law—(Houses and Rents—Bombay Rents, Hotel and Lodging House Rates (Control) Act (57 of 1947), S. 13 (e)). See Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 111 (g). AIR 1953 Sau 113 (DB).

4. Clause (d).

●——Ss. 2 (d) and 5 — Provision in S. 2 (d) prevails over definition in S. 5—Provisions of S. 57 and those contained in Ch. IV apply to transfer by operation of law. AIR 1943 All 115 (FB), Approved; AIR 1940 Mad 701 and AIR 1937 Cal 129, Overruled. Laxmi Devi v. ●——S. 2 (d) — Berar Land Revenue Code (1928), S. 176 — Sale giving rise to right of pre-emption — Parties entering into only agreement to sell — Suit for pre-emption not maintainable — Defeating right of pre-emption is no fraud — A I R 1953 Nag 182, Reversed. See Berar Land Revenue Code (1928), S. 176. AIR 1960 S C 1368.

——Ss. 2 and 51 — S. 51 does not apply to transfer in execution of decree — Consideration of equity — Principle of 'caveat emptor' applies. See T. P. Act, S. 51. AIR 1953 All 449 (DB).

——S. 2 — Execution sales are 'transfers' as contemplated by S. 47 of Hyderabad Act 21 of 1950 — Agricultural lands are exempted from attachment in execution — Expression 'other transfers' is not used in restricted sense as in the Transfer of Property Act — Attachment for the purpose of bringing agricultural lands to sale also inhibited. See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 60 (c). AIR 1964 Andh Pra 514 (DB).

[Overruled in AIR 1967 Andh Pra 148.]

——S. 2 (d)—Civil P. C. (1908), O. 21, R. 34 — Mortgage executed by Court—Attestation is not necessary —S. 59, T P. Act does not apply to such documents. See Civil P. C. (1908), O. 21, R. 34. AIR 1960 Andh Pra 465 (DB).

——Ss. 2 (d) and 105—Relationship created by decree —S. 2 (d) excludes application of S. 105 — Provision of S. 105 would be invoked as matter of justice, equity and good conscience. 56 Bom L R 365 : ILR (1954) Bom 615 : AIR 1954 Bom 370 (378, 379) (Pt H) (Pr 16) (DB).

—— Ss. 2 (d), 6 (e) — Banking Companies — Scheme of amalgamation — Scheme has the force of law — Suit for damages based on misfeasance and malfeasance instituted by transferor bank — Transfer of all assets, liabilities, rights and interest including rights of pending actions to transferee bank under the scheme — Transfer of mere right to sue and limitations as to transferability and assignability—Applies to contractual transactions only — Transfer by operation of law (under the scheme), not affected — Accrued right as incidental to the transfer of property to which it is attached — Valid — Scheme of amalgamation—Provisions prevail over any other law — Continuance of pending actions by or against — Provision in the Scheme — Continuance of suit by transferee bank — Application not provided for — Fiction — No extension beyond express provision — Reference in Banking Companies Law to provision in Companies Act for assessing damages against deliquent directors — Not to mean the applicability of entire provisions relating to winding up — Words and phrases—'Subject to the provisions of the scheme' —Banking Companies Act, 1949 (Central Act 10 of 1949), Ss. 45 (5) (e), 45 (14), 45 L (4) — Companies Act (1 of 1956), S. 543. ——S. 3 — Immovable property — Tenancy right in Building is immovable property. See Court-fees Act (1870), S. 7 (iv) (a). AIR 1965 All 496.

——Ss. 3, 8—Transfer of Zamindari—Presumption.

The question whether a building is or is not appurtenant to the zamindari must primarily be a question of fact and intention. The question has to be determined by taking into consideration all the surrounding circumstances. The presumption must be that in a case of a residential house it is not necessarily appurtenant to the zamindari and unless it can be established from evidence that it was intended to be transferred along with the rest of the zamindari the house must be deemed to have remained the property of the earstwhile Zamindar. Deota Din v. Gur Prasad, ILR (1955) 1 All 718 : 1955 All L J 157 : 1955 All W R (HC) 217 : AIR 1955 All 292 (294, 296) (Prs 12, 27) (FB).

——Ss. 3 and 58 (a) — Mortgagee's interest in mortgaged property is immovable and not movable property — General Clauses Act (1897), S. 3. (26). AIR 1952 Bom 454 (455, 456, 457) (Prs 7, 10) (DB).

——S. 3—Transfer of benefit arising out of land, viz., right to enjoy immovable property, is a transfer of interest in immovable property. See Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 53-A. AIR 1951 Bom 127 (DB).

——S. 3 — 'Immovable property' — A lease may be regarded as immovable property. AIR 1951 Bom 127, Rel. on. AIR 1960 Cal 609 (617) (Pt E) (Pr 28) (DB).

——S. 3—Immovable property — Definition given in S. 3 (26), General Clauses Act — Applicability of — Registration Act, S. 2 (6).

By virtue of S. 4 of the General Clauses Act the definition of immovable property in S. 3 (26) of that Act will apply to the Transfer of Property Act, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context. The effect therefore is that by virtue of the combined operation of S. 2 of the T. P. Act and Ss. 3 (26) and 4 of the General Clauses Act, the definition of immovable property for the purpose of the Transfer of Property Act becomes almost the same as that given in the Registration Act except that the incidents such as 'hereditary allowances, rights to ways, etc. are absent in the Transfer of Property Act. But these incidents are probably also brought in by virtue of S. 8 of the Act. AIR 1960 Cal 331 (334, 335) (Pt B) (Pr 10).

——S. 3—'Immovable property' — Sludge from sedimentation tank is movable and not immovable property. See General Clauses Act (1897), S. 2 (26). AIR 1960 Cal 123.

——S. 3 — Acquisition of jalkar — It is interest in immovable property. See Tenancy Laws — West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act (1 of 1954), S. 4. AIR 1958 Cal 114.

——S. 3—'Immovable property—Mining lease — Coal land—Held not immovable property. See Evidence Act (1872), S. 116. AIR 1957 Cal 128 (DB).

——S. 3—X cutting channel for irrigating his land through B and C properties — Agreement allowing B and C properties to be irrigated by water from channel —X entitled to fish Prawns in portion of channel in B and C properties — Nature of right discussed. See Easements Act (1882), S. 4. AIR 1965 Ker 147.

——S. 3—Interest in land—Right in land — Whether contract created any interest in land, cannot be decided on basis of the definition of "immovable property" or "movable property" in the Registration Act or in the Transfer of Property Act — Lease construed. See Sales Tax—Madras General Sales Tax Act (9 of 1939), S. 2(1). AIR 1954 Mad 949 (DB).

——Ss. 3 and 107—Mustajir lease — Lease of right to collect rents — It is lease of immovable property within S. 107 — General Clauses Act (1897), S. 3(25). 21 Cut L T 501: AIR 1952 Orissa 116 (116, 117) (Pt A) (Pr 5) (DB).

——S. 3—Auction sale of khas mahal hats—Petitioner the highest bidder unable to deposit security money after acceptance, of bid—There is no interest in land created in favour of petitioner. See Bihar and Orissa Public Demands Recovery Act (4 of 1914), S. 7. 1958 Pat L R 17 : 1LR 37 Pat 302.
